

REMARKS.

Servants and horses cannot be charged for unless they are actually kept in service.

When an officer commands a military department or separate post, he may be entitled to additional rations if the President thinks the allowance equitable. They are called double rations, being generally equal to the number allowed by law, according to the rank of the officer. The foregoing statement shows what the several grades of officers may receive; but it may be proper to remark that, as but few are in commands to entitle to double rations, the sums stated on that account should, in a general point of view, be deducted from the total amount specified.

At posts where there are public quarters, officers are compelled to occupy them; and when in the field or in camp, tents are furnished. In neither case is any allowance made for quarters. To ascertain the allowance of fuel, the average cost of that article throughout the Union has been taken.
