

SN [REDACTED] Master Helmsman

I was driving in, and while I was on the bridge, the pilot came on board. I notice that the pilot was giving the captain a hard time about pulling in std side to. The captain, Pilot who was telling the captain how he wanted the ship to pull in. He was also trying to tell us when and where to turn when it wasnt with the course we had plotted out. The pilot wanted us to go faster than we were suppose to. What I also notice was that most pilots are pretty much calm and easy going. This one was very argumentative, and he was doing a lot of passing around. The moment we got our lines hooked up the pilot was steadily asking can he leave, and I've never seen a pilot so quick to leave. He didn't even care that the captain was going to give smug and cookies. He was ready to leave without it. I have been on the bridge for doing master helmsman for almost a year and we never seen a pilot act so cintsy and so argumentative.
