3. Narrative.

USS ALBANY started off the year making preparations for the up coming North Atlantic deployment by conducting the pre-deployment upkeep. On February 1st, ALBANY was awarded the Submarine Squadron SIX Tactical "T" for 1994. USS ALBANY then transited to Kings Bay, Georgia for repairs to the ship's propulsion train and sonar system.

Shortly after repairs were completed, ALBANY conducted Pre-Overseas Movement(POM) training and then returned to homeport. While in port, pre-deployment training was conducted at the Submarine Training Facility. After an emergent drydocking in Newport News to repair the sonar system, ALBANY completed the POM Certification, and was certified for the North Atlantic deployment by mid-April.

Upon the return of the crew from stand down, ALBANY entered an upkeep, in which more onboard repairs and ship alterations (SHIPALTS) were completed than in the previous year's Selected Restricted Availability (SRA). Improvements received during the upkeep included of the installation of the Extremely High Frequency(EHF) Communication Modification, Extremely Low Frequency (ELF) Communication Modification, and an alteration to the forward escape truck to help better combat engine room casualties.

During the upkeep, six ALBANY First Class Petty Officers were selected for advancement to Chief Petty Officer.

During the last two weeks of September, ALBANY successfully completed a Tactical Readiness Evaluation (TRE) and Weapons Proficiency.

During the month of October, ALBANY had a VIP tour by VADM G. W. Emery. While onboard, VADM Emery presented the 1995 Lockwood Award to TMCS (SS) Patrick Henderson. The award is given by the Naval Submarine League to the outstanding E-7 to E-9 who displayed superb professionalism on a day to day basis. ALBANY also conducted a Logistics Readiness Examination (LRE), in which the boat received a grade of Above Average.

Toward the end of the year the boat's focus again shifted back to POM training and preparation for the upcoming North Atlantic deployment in January 1996
