4. (U) Narrative. The following is a month-by-month narrative of calendar year 1995.

a. (U) January-March. CURTS entered her sixth Selected Restricted Availability (SRA) on 3 January 1995. Japanese good luck decorations, kadomatsu, given to CURTS by her sister ship JDS Tachikaze still flanked the brow as CURTS began extensive repairs to her Mark 92 Fire Control System. The SRA provided CURTS the opportunity to renovate one of her three crew's berthing complexes, and completely overhaul the intakes to her gas turbine engines.

Subj: 1995 COMMAND HISTORY FOR USS CURTS (FFG 38) (U)

In early January, VADM Archie Clemens, Commander, U.S. Seventh Fleet, visited the ship to inspect the work being done. "I wish you well and look forward to visiting when you are done," VADM Clemens told the crew. Taking his words to heart, the crew of CURTS and the workers of Naval Ship Repair Facility Yokosuka completed the availability under budget and ahead of schedule, officially finishing 23 March 1995. CURTS Sailors also received word in mid-March that they had won the Destroyer Squadron FIFTEEN Battle Efficiency Award. Two brief shakedown runs in late March confirmed that CURTS was ready to return to sea.

b. (U) April. The crew of CURTS invited friends and family members to join them for a Family Day Cruise on 1 April 1995. Guests enjoyed not only tours, displays and music and a barbecue on the flight deck, but also experienced a full power demonstration, as CURTS completed the last of her post-availability checks. Nine days later, the crew of over 200 men -- along with an embarked SH-60B helicopter and Detachment Six from HSL-51, Naval Air Facility, Atsugi -- left Yokosuka for Spring Training with the INDEPENDENCE Battle Group.

CURTS immediately began Total Ship's Training Availability Phase II (TSTA II), a training assist visit from members of Destroyer Squadron FIFTEEN and Afloat Training Group (ATG), Western Pacific. After six days of combat systems, seamanship, engineering and damage control drills, CURTS completed TSTA II and delivered the assist team to USS INDEPENDENCE (CV 62) and USS MOBILE BAY (CG 53).

On 17 April 1995, CURTS tested the work performed in the yards. The Mark 92 Fire Control System demonstrated the ability to detect and track an air target, and CURTS successfully launched an SM-1 Standard Missile. The very next day, CURTS fired a HARPOON missile, destroying a surface target approximately 50 nm away. The test of SUW, AW and USW weapons was complete when CURTS launched an exercise torpedo from her own SVTT system only a couple of hours later.

CURTS' ability to fire weapons proven, the crew of CURTS set out to prove that they could fight the ship effectively. Steaming ahead of the INDEPENDENCE battle group and using her small size, CURTS coordinated air and surface assets in an attack on the carrier and escorts as they steamed past the frigate. The crew was tired, proud and happy when they arrived at anchorage in Hong Kong on 23 April 1995.

After five days of liberty, CURTS escorted the INDEPENDENCE out of Hong Kong on 28 April 1995. The crew received a rare show when the INDEPENDENCE invited them to conduct a close approach on 29 April 1995, viewing catapult launches and trap landings from a distance of less than 1000 yards. CURTS, USS FIFE (DD 991) and USS NEW YORK CITY (SSN 696) detached from the carrier battle group that day to continue south for MEKAR 95, a joint exercise with the Malaysian Navy.

e. (U) May. There are days that test the mettle of ships. 1 May 1995 found the engineers aboard CURTS frantically searching for the cause of a malfunction in the control circuitry for 1A gas turbine engine from the early hours of the morning, trying to place the engine back on-line before a scheduled refueling-at-sea (RAS). Just a short time before the RAS, a team of electronics experts discovered a ground in the engine's starter. 1A gas turbine engine roared to life in time for the RAS.

Just a short while after refueling, CURTS crewmembers were surprised to hear the call to emergency flight quarters. Hellfire 06, embarked aboard FIFE, was experiencing problems and needed to make an immediate landing. Within five minutes, CURTS was ready to receive the damaged aircraft. Hellfire 06 landed safely on CURTS' flight deck; Detachment Six maintenance men had the helicopter airborne shortly thereafter.

CURTS arrived in Kuantan Bay, Malaysia the following morning. After a brief planning conference, the U.S. ships departed the port early on 3 May 1995 with two units of the Malaysian Navy. The ships practiced USW, SUW and AW tactics, as well as firing at a towed sleeve provided by a Lear jet, for the next three days. The CURTS crew also drilled for the upcoming TSTA III and FEP assessment during the quiet hours. CURTS and FIFE anchored off Tioman Island, Malaysia on the morning of 7 May 1995 to return personnel and conduct an exercise debrief.

CURTS dropped anchor in Pattaya Beach, Thailand on 9 May 1995 for a few days of rest and liberty. Underway on 12 May 1995, CURTS served as Officer in Charge of Exercise (OCE) Sea Eagle 1995, a joint effort with FIFE, NEW YORK CITY and units of the Royal Thai Navy. The ships returned to Sattahip, Thailand on 15 May 1995. FIFE and NEW YORK CITY returned to the INDEPENDENCE battle group, while CURTS embarked a training assist team and steamed toward Subic Bay, Republic of Philippines.

CURTS completed TSTA III on 24 May 1995, and arrived in Subic Bay two days later. A crowd of over 200 people, including local dignitaries and members of the press, greeted CURTS as she tied up at the Subic Bay Freeport--the first U.S. warship to visit the former Navy base since the American military withdrawal in 1992.

The training assist team remained with CURTS, and began the Final Evaluation Problem (FEP) -- the final stage of pre-deployment work-ups--as soon as the ship got underway on 29 May 1995.

f. (U) June. FEP ended on the first day of June. Eager to return home, the crew of CURTS braved a nighttime landing at Yokosuka Naval Station on 2 June 1995. Less than a week later, the ship was underway again, this time preparing for the Operational Propulsion Plant Examination (OPPE). With an engineering assist team embarked, CURTS conducted engineering and damage control training drills for three days before returning to port for a month long upkeep period.

g. (U) July. A second helicopter detachment, HSL-51 Detachment Four, arrived aboard CURTS on 10 July 1995, bringing two SH-60B helicopters in support of SHAREM 112, a joint USW exercise with the South Korean Navy. The ship also carried an engineering assist team, and drilled at every spare opportunity between Yokosuka and Chinhae, South Korea.

CURTS, FIFE and USS TUNNY (SSN 682) practiced USW with elements of the South Korean fleet for five days in less than ideal conditions before a threatening typhoon cancelled the exercise altogether. Racing ahead of the storm, CURTS pulled into Sasebo on 20 July 1995 to quickly refuel and return to sea. The typhoon, meanwhile, tracked to the west, leaving the ship unscathed. After a few more days of engineering and damage control drills, CURTS arrived in Yokosuka on 24 July 1995.

h. (U) August. The Propulsion Examining Board (PEB) embarked CURTS on 1 August 1995 for the purpose of administering the Operational Propulsion Plant Examination (OPPE). Beginning early the next morning with cold checks, PEB certified CURTS safe to get underway that afternoon. CURTS demonstrated engineering casualty control and damage control drills for PEB, and received a 'satisfactory' grade overall.

After a short respite, the crew of CURTS deployed to the Arabian Gulf with the INDEPENDENCE battle group on 19 August 1995. A third helicopter detachment, Detachment 8C from HSL-49, Naval Air Facility, San Diego, joined CURTS for the deployment. With the ABRAHAM LINCOLN urgently requiring relief in the Middle East, CURTS and the rest of the carrier battle group proceeded at high speed. CURTS slowed briefly only to escort USS CHICAGO (SSN 721) through the Straits of Malacca.

i. (C) September. CURTS "inchopped" to Fifth Fleet on 4 September 1995. Three days later, the INDEPENDENCE battle group transited through the Straits of Hormuz without incident. The two battle groups conducted an on-station turnover inside the Gulf before LINCOLN continued home and the INDEPENDENCE battle group proceeded west. CURTS traded her one helicopter to USS MERRILL (DD 976) for the other ship's two aircraft.

After a brief port visit in Bahrain, CURTS sailed north to the Northern Arabian Gulf, where she took station as the northernmost ship for Maritime Interdiction Operations (MIO), enforcing U.N. sanctions against Iraq. Patiently watching merchant traffic flow into and out of the renegade country, CURTS queried and diverted the AL SHAKEEL on 20 September 1995. A boarding party from FIFE discovered a load of contraband goods aboard the vessel.

Meanwhile, CURTS' own Visit, Board, Search and Seizure (VBSS) team inspected the cargo of DELPHI, a vessel bound for Iraq. Though the team discovered no contraband, they did observe DELPHI's crew tossing automobile tires in the water shortly before the team's arrival.

j. (C) October. After another brief visit to Bahrain, CURTS returned to the Northern Arabian Gulf for continued interdiction operations. The crew tracked the progress of a small floating crane in Iraqi territorial waters for several days, and occasionally queried a passing merchant ship.

Subj: 1995 COMMAND HISTORY FOR USS CURTS (FFG 38) (U)

A visit from RADM J.O. Ellis, CTF FIVE ZERO, proved a welcome opportunity for the crew to learn more about events in the Arabian Gulf.

On 07 October 1995, CURTS detected ESM corresponding to that of AL NOURS, a known sanctions violator. Red Stinger 111, one of CURTS' two embarked helicopters, correlated the data with a sighting. Perhaps aware of the U.S. Navy warship stalking it, AL NOURS remained close in Iranian territorial waters and refused to come near CURTS.

CURTS completed her duty on 9 October 1995, and departed Bahrain for Muscat, Oman the next day. The crew rested and recovered from the NAVCENT deployment in a swimming pool and club provided by the U.S. Embassy, and then continued on toward Phuket, Thailand.

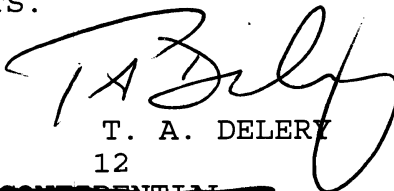

While on a routine patrol mission on 18 October 1995, Red Stinger 112 noticed several sea turtles entangled in a fishing net approximately 60 miles south of CURTS' position. The ship altered course to render assistance to the turtles, some 300 miles off the coast of India. A team of five rescuers freed ten turtles, drawing the attention of the national and international media. Stories of the rescue were broadcast on CNN, NBC Nightly News and the BBC.

CURTS conducted Freedom of Navigation Operations in seas claimed by India and Sri Lanka as historical waters the next day, asserting the right of all seagoing vessels to operate in international waters. On 24 October 1995, CURTS anchored in Phuket, Thailand, and the crew received a well-deserved rest.

While the crew enjoyed liberty, two typhoons gathered strength in the Western Pacific. By the time CURTS transited the Straits of Malacca on 29 October 1995, both storms threatened to strike along the ships' track home. After trying to slow and let the storms pass, CURTS was forced to turn east, passing through the Balabac Strait, the Sulu Sea and Surigao Straits into the Philippine Sea in order to safely rendezvous with the INDEPENDENCE. Fortunately, USNS JOHN ERICSSON (TAO 194) provided CURTS with plenty of fuel for the transit.

k. (U) November. CURTS reached the INDEPENDENCE battle group on 5 November 1995, just in time to serve as "AN" for ANNUALEX 07G, a major joint exercise with the Japanese Maritime Self-Defense Force (JMSDF). CURTS remained on station for two days, and returned to Yokosuka on 8 November 1995. The crew and ship were back on station for ANNUALEX only four days later, and proved a formidable foe during an opposed transit on 17 November 1995. CURTS returned to Yokosuka the following day, and ship and crew enjoyed a hard-earned break.

l. (U) December. December was spent in a leave and upkeep period. CURTS Sailors gathered at the Yokosuka Officers Club on 13 December 1995 to celebrate the holidays and the conclusion of one of the most successful years in the history of USS CURTS.
