NARRATIVE

On January 17, 2003, the USS DUBUQUE prepared for her second Western Pacific/Indian Ocean deployment in two years. DUBUQUE deployed in the seven ship Amphibious Task Focer (ATF) West, along with the USS BOXER, USS BON HOMME RICHARD, USS CLEVELAND, USS COMSTOCK, USS PEARL HARBOR, and USS ANCHORAGE. All vessels were underway in support of Operation IRAQI FREEDOM.

USS DUBUQUE finished its training cycle underway, completing the Engineering Underway Demonstration on 3 February and Final Evaluation Problem (FEP) on 5 February. On 8 February, she transited the Surugao Strait, followed by a two-day transit of the Singapore Strait and the Strait of Malacca. On 17 February, a steel beach picnic was held to commemorate President's day. DUBUQUE inched 5th fleet on 19 February and on 22 February transited the Strait of Hormuz arriving in the Arabian Gulf for operations. On 24 February, she arrived at Kuwait Naval Base and began a two-day offload of Marine Corps personnel. Following the offload, she joined CTG 51.4 for the remainder of the time in the Arabian Gulf.

DUBUQUE was able to deliver 600 ready combat Marines by providing innovative nighttime close combat training for all embarked infantry. Over 3000 flight hours were conducted for nine UH-1 Hueys and 1 CH-53. In addition, DUBUQUE's crew enhanced the combat readiness by designing and manufacturing sniper rifle sight stands, motor stands, HUMVEE framing, and ladders for the 7 ton trucks.

The ship's medical officer transferred to USS MILIUS via RHIB to assist with emergency medical treatment on 6 March. On 7 March, a coordination meeting was held onboard to sort out details surrounding the enemy prisoners of war that were expected as DUBUQUE was selected to serve as the U.S./Coalition temporary detention facility until camps could be constructed ashore. Three days later, the ship began to construct detention facilities for enemy prisoners of war. 19 March marked the beginning of the war with the opening salvos being launched on Iraqi targets. On 21 March, the first prisoners of war, 43 total, arrived onboard USS DUBUQUE from the HMAS KANIMBLA.

DUBUQUE received another EPW who was wounded and could not be helped onboard USNS MERCY because he allegedly bit or attempted to bite one of the nurses in March 2003. These security and safety concerns caused his transfer to USS DUBUQUE, where the patient received continual treatment for severe gunshot wounds to the shoulder and buttock. The excellent care and supervision by the DUBUQUE Medical Department allowed for the consistent recovery of the EPW and for his interrogation by the Mobile Interrogation Team. After approximately ten days, the EPW was returned to the USNS MERCY due to an infection that could not be treated onboard USS DUBUQUE.

Over the next month, the crew of DUBUQUE worked tirelessly around the clock to supervise as many as 106 enemy prisoners that were kept onboard DUBUQUE, with the last EPW being transferred off of the ship 29 April 2003.

On 9 May, USS DUBUQUE received its first LCAC and LCU of 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines during wet well operations in anticipation of the ATF WEST backload of 306 Marines that would accompany her on her voyage home. The backload commenced on 18 May, at time 1540 and continued until 27 May. On 29 May, DUBUQUE re-transited the Strait of Hormuz, departing for home with 357 Marines embarked.

During the deployment, USS DUBUQUE conducted underway/vertical replenishments with such ships as the USNS GUADALUPE, USNS NIAGARA FALLS, RFA BRAMBLELEAF, USNS JOHN ERICSSON, USNS PECOS, USNS PATUXENT, USNS CONCORD, USS FLINT, and USNS YUKON.

On the voyage home, USS DUBUQUE made several liberty port calls for rest and relaxation. On 6 June, she crossed the equator and qualified 160 Sailors and Marines as Shellbacks enroute to Sydney, Australia for a weeklong port call from 20 June to 26 June. Following that, the ship spent 28 June until 1 July in Carnes, Australia for another well deserved port call.

On 7 July, on the way to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, the ship's personnel achieved the distinction of crossing both the equator and the international dateline at the same time, becoming Golden Shellbacks. DUBUQUE visited Pearl Harbor from 12 July to 20 July when she began the four-day trip back home, carrying 55 tigers for the Tiger Cruise. On 24 July, DUBUQUE began a two-day offload of 3rd Battalion, 11th Marines Battalion in Camp Pendleton, CA.

On 4 October 2003, DUBUQUE conducted a Family Day cruise in conjunction with the 2003 Sea-N-Air Parade for Fleetweek San Diego. During the demonstration, DUBUQUE ejected a LCAC from her well deck to illustrate amphibious capabilities. From 15 October until 20 October, DUBUQUE was underway to conduct routine operations and training off the California coast.

From early November until the end of the December, DUBUQUE participated in the training cycle, completing force protection certification and a Supply Management Assessment and Inspection from 3 November until 7 November. During that time, shipboard training teams met with Afloat Training Group (ATG) to make final preparations for the training cycle. She also conducted LARC/LCU operations from 18 November until 19 November to maintain and demonstrate proficiency in wet well operations. DUBUQUE also completed a Safety Survey on 21 November conducted by the Navy Safety Center.

December began with a deadstick berth shift to the La Playa Fuel Farm. On 13 December, DUBUQUE held the first of two holiday parties at Boomer's Family Fun Park, allowing time for her Sailors and their families to come together and socialize off duty. On 18 December, DUBUQUE held her adult holiday party at the luxurious U.S. Grant hotel in downtown San Diego, and commenced Holiday leave for the remainder of the year.
