SUBGROUP FIFTY FOUR. CAPTAIN ROY C. SMITH III, USN, 1926-1968.

DESCRIPTION.

The collection deals primarily with the experiences of Captain Roy C. Smith's father, Commander Roy C. Smith Jr. (1888-1946). The material is related to CDR Smith's tour of duty with the Asiatic Station. Of particular interest are the documents about the Nanking Incident of 24 March 1927.

Born 1 August 1888, son of a Navy officer, CDR Smith graduated from Annapolis in 1910. After completing various assignments, he was promoted to Lieutenant in 1915 and Lieutenant Commander in 1921. In June of 1925 he began a tour of duty with the Asiatic Station. At that time he assumed command of USS NOA, then part of the Yangtze Patrol.

In the midst of the Chinese Civil War, Smith's most notable action occurred at Nanking, China, on 24 March 1927. To protect refugees gathered at the Standard Oil House, including the American Consul at Nanking, U.S. and British warships shelled elements of the Cantonese army. Smith, the senior American officer present, took responsibility for the bombardment. With the beginning of the shelling around the house, anti-foreign activity ceased, not only in the immediate area, but also throughout the city. Smith's prompt action is credited with the saving of many American and British lives. Relieved by other U.S. warships, the USS NOA left Nanking carrying American and British nationals to safety.

USS NOA received one Battle Star for action at Nanking. Smith remained in China until reassignment to the Newport Naval Torpedo Station in February of 1928.
