Each volume of this series is a reminder of the key role played by William Bell Clark, original editor. Drawing on his deep knowledge of the navies in the American Revolution, his initial selections and arrangements of materials compiled over a devoted lifetime provided a framework on which subsequent efforts have continued to build.

Foreword

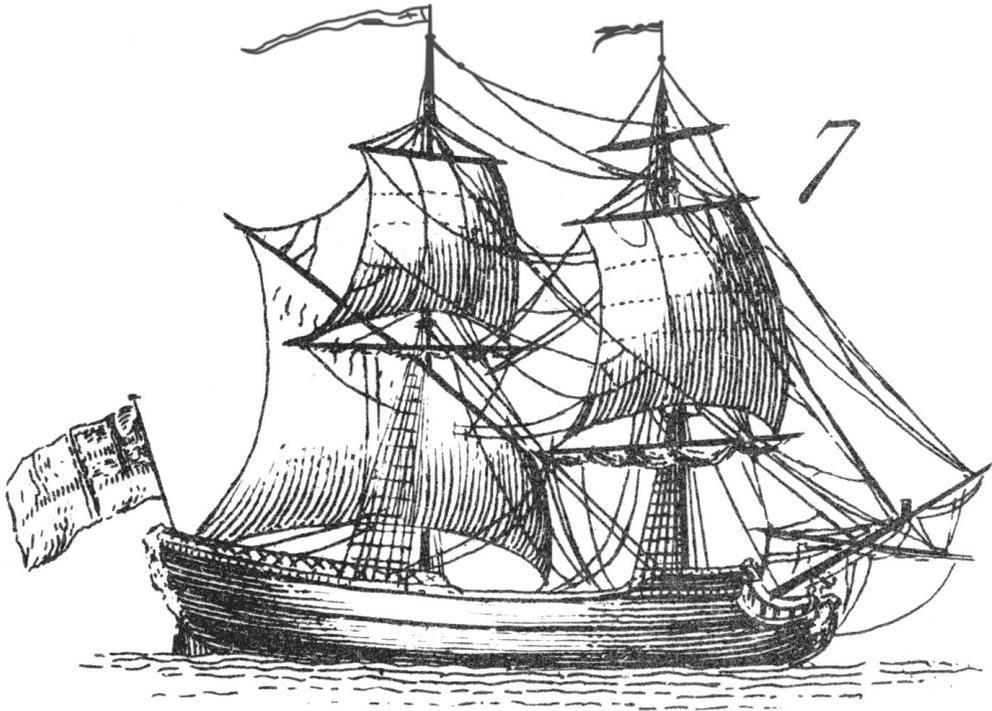

In 2014, on retiring after thirty-seven years of active duty in the Navy, I took the position of Director, Naval History and Heritage Command. Doing so brought me full circle, back to the beginning of my interest in the Navy. In elementary school, I avidly read Samuel Eliot Morison's History of United States Naval Operations in World War II. Reading of the heroism and sacrifice of America's Sailors helped inspire me to serve, so it is with great pleasure that I find myself responsible for ensuring that the history and heritage of our Sailors continues to be remembered.

This is the thirteenth volume of Naval Documents of the American Revolution, a project that began more than fifty years ago. Although the work of transcribing, editing, and annotating historic documents is painstaking and sometimes slow going, the documents found here are well worth the wait. The letters, diaries, journals, newspaper articles, and ships' logs contained here document the victories and triumphs of America's fledgling navy. There are successes here, but there are discussions of defeats, accidents, and errors of judgment. Remembering what went wrong, as well as what was inspiring, is something we all must do.

In particular, this volume covers the period when America's first ally, France, sent direct military support to the thirteen colonies. A fleet under Vice Admiral comte d'Estaing arrived off the American coast in the summer of 1778. Vice Admiral comte d'Estaing's campaign demonstrated Americans at their best, as they sought to supply and succor the French sailors, weakened from their time at sea. The campaign also showed the dangers of pride and selfishness, as operational failures led to conflicts between Vice Admiral comte d'Estaing and the American commander in Rhode Island, Major General John Sullivan. Thus, far from printing musty antiquarian scraps of paper of interest to few, this book contains lessons that are still useful for Sailors today.

Ultimately, however, Naval Documents of the American Revolution fulfills the primary mission of the Naval History and Heritage Command (NHHC). It helps preserve, protect, and disseminate the history of the people who have served in America's Navy. It stands as an example of the U.S. Navy's promise to remember the sacrifice of its Sailors, a duty of utmost importance for both NHHC and myself.

Editor's Preface

Proposals for a government-sponsored publication of source documents for the study of the War of Independence can be dated to as early as the end of the nineteenth century. Efforts to publish historical naval war records began in the 1880s, when the Navy judged that it was important to make known the record of its contributions to victory in the Civil War. Beginning in 1884, Congress made appropriations to support the effort to search out, bring together, and prepare Civil War naval records for publication. In his annual report for 1888, Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney stressed the importance of publishing the Navy's Civil War documents, "which clearly ought to appear side by side with that of the War Department." The effort resulted in the publication of the series Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies in the War of the Rebellion in thirty-one volumes between 1894 and 1927.

As these volumes appeared, others expressed interest in a similar project for the War of Independence. In 1895, the Sons of the American Revolution in the State of California issued a call for the federal government to publish the records of the War of Independence in a manner similar to that of the ongoing projects of the United States Army and Navy to publish Civil War records. "The unpublished archives of the United States government, relating to the War of the Revolution, have never been assembled into one collection," they noted, "but they are now distributed throughout the several Public Departments and, owing to past neglect and present lack of proper care, many valuable documents have been mutilated and destroyed, and those remaining are rapidly becoming illegible." The California Sons of the American Revolution asserted, the necessity for absolute accuracy in the history of that heroic struggle for freedom, as well as justice to those who, in what capacity soever gave their all for the cause of liberty, require that the story of their sacrifices and their patriotism, shall no longer be kept among the inaccessible Archives of the government, but that it shall become the official basis for a history of that period, more complete than has yet been written.

Despite their eloquent plea, Congress did not appropriate funds for publication of records of the Revolutionary War.

Congress did, however, require the transfer to the secretary of the navy of all federally-held records relating to public and private vessels engaged in the War of Independence in 1906, and in 1913, it having been found that the government held few such records, allotted funds to the Navy for the collection of Revolutionary naval records. The Navy Department used those funds to photostat selected records in Massachusetts, Virginia, and North Carolina, most of which were placed in the Area File in the custody of the Office of Library and Naval War Records, a predecessor office of the Naval History and Heritage Command. Nevertheless, naval records of the Revolution remained widely scattered into the second half of the twentieth century.

In the meantime, the Navy Department continued its practice of making the record of its accomplishments available for study through documentary publications. Dudley W. Knox, who was in charge of the Navy's Historical Section and subsequently the Office of Naval History and Records from 1921 to 1946, attributed the scarcity of works on the history of the United States Navy to the "inaccessibility of authentic sources." His remedy was two-fold. First, he transformed the Office of Naval Records and History into a modern archival repository, where records were systematically collected and professionally processed. Second, he undertook to collect, edit, and publish selected naval records. At the immediate suggestion of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, under Knox's direction, the Navy published Naval Documents Related to the Quasi-War between the United States and France in seven volumes between 1935 and 1938, and Naval Documents Related to the United States Wars with the Barbary Powers in seven volumes between 1939 and 1945. Reflecting the practices of the time, these series printed only American documents.

Still, the records of the War of Independence at sea remained particularly difficult to study. Then, in the mid 1950s, during Rear Admiral John B. Heffernan's tenure as Director of Naval History, the distinguished scholars who constituted the Secretary of the Navy's Advisory Committee on Naval History, aware of the proliferation of the new documentary histories of figures from early American history, such as John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Jefferson, and James Madison, judged that the time was right for the publication of a Navy series on the American Revolution. The series they envisioned would conform to modern scholarly documentary editing practice and include context and coverage for both sides of the conflict, including materials from British, French, Spanish, and other European archives. Heffernan's successor, Rear Admiral Ernest M. Eller, USN (Ret.), took up the challenge and in 1957 persuaded Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates and Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Arleigh Burke of the value of the project and secured Navy financing. The search for an editor began.

Admiral Eller engaged William Bell Clark for the position and to select and edit the documents to be included in the series. Clark, an insurance company executive and former newspaperman, was the preeminent authority on the American navies of the War of Independence. He had published biographies of three captains of the Continental Navy, as well as books on George Washington's fleet of armed schooners that cruised to intercept British transports in Massachusetts Bay, on the privateers Benjamin Franklin commissioned to operate in British waters, and on the Continental Navy sloop-of-war Saratoga. Clark researched thoroughly and wrote engagingly. "When I visited him in his library," Admiral Eller recalled,

I found other reasons than most of us realized why he was the man for the job. All knew him to be a tireless researcher, competent writer, and walking encyclopedia of the American Revolution. Few, if any, realized, certainly I didn't, that in his library reposed transcripts of much of the material we would publish. Around the bulkheads, from deck to overhead, stood neatly tabbed portfolios with thousands of transcripts from repositories in Europe and the United States.

Here was the distilled essence of a lifetime avocation—now to become a new and inspiring vocation.

Clark accepted a contract to edit the new series. His personal collection formed the basis for the project, but he along with other staff gathered copies of manuscripts and documents across America and abroad. Eventually they collected on microfilm more than 500,000 documents. Clark completed his first volume, covering the period from December 1774 to September 1775, in 1964. When Clark died in 1968, volume 4 was in page proof, taking the story up to the eve of the Declaration of Independence.

William James Morgan, who, as head of the Historical Research Branch of the Naval History Division, had assisted Clark from the start of the project, took over the editorship on Clark's death. Morgan, a Navy veteran, had a doctoral degree from the University of Southern California and had published his dissertation on the New England captains in the Continental Navy as a book entitled Captains to the Northward. Morgan presided over the series until his retirement in 1981. Dr. William S. Dudley took over from Dr. Morgan, and I succeeded to the post when Dr. Dudley became the Naval Historical Center's senior historian in 1990.

The following anecdote suggests how my training and experience have subtly affected the editing of volumes during my tenure as the series' chief editor. One day some thirty-six years ago, during my National Historical Publication and Records Commission fellowship at the Adams Papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society, I was talking about how much I enjoyed researching and writing annotation to the documents, when Celeste Walker, one of the Adams Paper's editors, tempered my enthusiasm and gave me pause to consider by stating simply that annotation was not the most important service a documentary editor performs. Fast forward thirty-something years to a recent historical conference during which I chaired a session on documentary editions of the papers of military leaders. One of the presenters, a college professor who had contributed as a guest editor to a volume of historical documents, although a long-established scholar, reminded me of my younger self by his remarks that implied that the chief value of a documentary edition was found in the annotation. His view, it seems, comes naturally to someone—no matter his or her age—new to the preparation of historical documents for publication. If I had been the commenter, I might have said something, but, since comment is not the role of the chair, I held my tongue. Annotation adds much of value to a documentary edition, still, the longer I have practiced the profession, the more I am convinced of the truth of the lesson I learned early in my career: The first duty of the documentary editor is to provide accurate texts.

To put this another way, documentary editing is a form of textual scholarship. Ideally, the document as published should provide both an accurate text and all the relevant information about the manuscript that one should not be able to tell if a scholar relying on that published document has consulted the original manuscript or used the published version in one of our volumes.

My conviction that the text is the thing has had consequences for the contents of the volumes in this series for which I have had responsibility, volumes 10 through the present volume. This conviction has led to lean annotation. One of the responsibilities of the editor of historical records is to understand the content of the records chosen for publication. My rule of thumb is that if it requires work on my part to make sense of a passage, then the reader deserves an explanatory note. The volumes in this series provide footnotes whenever a passage in a document requires explanation and limits that explanation to the minimum required for understanding the passage and its context.

The conviction that the text is the core of the edition has also led me to introduce, in addition to English translations, foreign language texts in their original languages. A translation is not the text; no matter how literal, it can only be an interpretation of the text. I also added information to source notes that brought the series into line with practices that had become standard in the profession: document type (letter, letter book, copy, etc.), addresses, and docketing. Users of Naval Documents of the American Revolution will find all the relevant information they need from the original documents, as well as accurate annotation, thereby making this an authoritative, reliable, and indispensable source for writing the history of the American Revolution at sea.

Readers of this volume, the thirteenth in the series, will find that French texts occupy a substantially greater proportion of its pages than in previous volumes, a fact that may require a word of explanation. The period covered by the volume witnessed the arrival of a French fleet on the coast of North America and much of the volume documents the subsequent campaign it waged in conjunction with Continental forces up to the point when a powerful storm gravely damaged it. My fellow editors and I have chosen documents that tell this story from the French perspective as well as those of their American allies and their British antagonists.

In contrast to the heavy documentation of the French naval campaign of 1778 in North America, readers will find here only allusions to, rather than records of, the encounters between the naval forces of France and the United Kingdom that marked the commencement of active hostilities between the two kingdoms in European waters. As explained in the preface to Volume 11, although in 1778 a colonial war of independence merged with a war fought in a global arena over the balance of power of Europe, the intent of this series is to document the former struggle and to cover only those aspects of the larger world war that were directly related to the role of sea power in the winning of American independence. If we have succeeded in our selections, the documents in this volume will greatly foster historians' efforts to describe this critical period of American history.

In 1960, in a review of Clark's book on George Washington's Navy, Rear Admiral Samuel Eliot Morison noted the need for a comprehensive naval history of the American Revolution. Clark responded in a private letter to Morison, writing:

Nobody will be able to write a naval history of the American Revolution, covering all the aspects you mention, until the documents I am editing are published. . . . Without the facilities that [the Director of Naval History] has placed at my disposal the task would be almost insurmountable, as no one man could in a dozen lifetimes dig into the repositories of Europe and America and extract the mass of material available.

Time has borne Clark's assertion out. Former editor of the series William Morgan noted in 1983 how "current literature in the field has heavy coverage for the war years spanned by the already published Naval Documents volumes, and that such coverage markedly thins down thereafter," a statement still true today.

From the start, the series has been warmly received and acknowledged as crucially important for the study of the American Revolution. The volumes have won awards from the Society for Military History, the North American Society for Oceanic History, and the Society for History in the Federal Government.

The U.S. Navy's Naval Documents of the American Revolution series makes possible the comprehensive study of the naval aspects of the War of Independence. Through the current thirteenth volume, the series contains the texts of the contemporary records necessary for the documentation of the war at sea during the period from December 1774 through mid-August 1778. The project's files contain copies of hundreds of thousands of documents drawn from hundreds of repositories and collections throughout the United States and abroad and constitute the most extensive collection of source materials on the naval war of the American Revolution in existence. Scholars from as far away as Helsinki, Finland, have visited to make use of the collection. This current volume contains documents from more than fifty different repositories in five countries.

With gratitude, we acknowledge the archivists, curators, and librarians of the many records repositories who have so readily lent their professional assistance to this project. We greatly appreciate the cooperation of all the institutions and individuals from whose collections, public and private, we draw the texts printed in this volume.

We are indebted to several friends of naval history for voluntary contributions of labor and expertise. Particular mention is due the late Mr. Robert Brooks, of Stockton Springs, Maine, whose extensive knowledge of British naval officers serving on the North American station we shall miss.

The following student interns assisted with a variety of editorial tasks necessary for the production of this volume: Michael Donnay, of Georgetown University; Mariana Sontag Gonzalez, of Linacre College, Oxford; Eleanor Grange, of Oxford University; Joshua Ivinson, of St. Andrews University; Zachary Kopin, of American University; Kevin Schrop, of Illinois State University; and Jeremy Steinberg, of Haverford College.

Responsibility for the contents of this volume is that of the editors alone. Recognizing that no documentary edition will be without flaws, we trust that this volume, despite its shortcomings, makes a worthy contribution to the study of the young American republic's fight for freedom.

Editorial Method

Principles of Selection

In selecting documents for this series, the editors' goal is to include those records that are necessary for a comprehensive understanding of the war at sea of the American Revolution. By comprehensive, the editors do not mean they include every document touching on the war at sea, but rather that they provide full coverage of naval aspects of the armed struggle and present the reader a meaningful overview of the entire sea effort. As an earlier volume explained, "documentation bearing on the regular naval forces on both sides, state navies, privateers, merchant shipping, logistics of the conflict, and operations on sea, lake, bay and river fall within the context of 'naval document' as used in this series" (Vol. 6, p. xi).

The series accounts for the activities of each of the Continental Navy's warships and of most of those of the state navies. It seeks to document every aspect of the ordinary business of operating and maintaining the Continental and state navies. It chronicles privateering activities, both American and British.

We also cover the activities of British squadrons in American waters and of selected individual British warships. No attempt is made to document the ordinary business of operating and maintaining the Royal Navy and therefore fiscal accounts, muster rolls, payrolls, and prize share lists are excluded. There is also little about British supplies, cannon, gunpowder, munitions, pay, prize money, and building and fitting out of ships. We do, however, cover British naval operations, logistics convoys, transports, and manning of vessels. Documents have also been included that concern the aims and strategy of the British, account for prizes taken, and balance Patriot accounts of actions and operations. Coverage of the British naval effort in this and previous volumes will serve as the model for treatment of the naval efforts of France and other European powers in coming volumes.

We print diplomatic correspondence that deals directly with naval matters, including the outfitting of privateers and American naval vessels, the sale of their prizes in European and Caribbean ports, and the supplying of America with munitions by European powers. Internal American politics that affect naval operations are documented, but not so internal European politics. In covering the French, Spanish, and Dutch naval war efforts, we publish documents that: concern aims and strategy; follow movements of squadrons and selected individual warships from these countries; relate to joint operations with American armies and navies; or illustrate the effects of allied naval forces on the American populace, as well as on the American war effort. In short, we provide enough documentation of the European efforts to give context to those of the United States.

Variant Texts

When multiple copies of a text are available, the version that is closest to the text that the recipient read is printed. For example, an autograph letter signed has precedence over a recipient's letter book copy, since the former is what the reader saw and the latter may contain copyist's errors; but a recipient's letter book copy has precedence over a draft, since the former is probably closer to the version the writer sent, containing changes made in preparing the final version. Significant variations between versions are discussed in notes; otherwise the editors do not identify variant versions.

Placement of Documents

Documents in this volume are divided into two sections, the American Theater and the European Theater, according to where they originated, even though some documents created in Europe may concern events in America, and some created in America may be about events in Europe. Within each theater, documents are arranged in chronological order by date of origin. Under each date they are ordered by place of origin, from north to south. For documents created on the same day in the same location, public records precede private; and public records appear in order of organizational hierarchy. In this hierarchy, Continental records precede state, and state precede municipal; executive documents precede legislative, and legislative precede judicial; a letter from the president of Congress precedes a letter from a committee of Congress, and a letter from a committee of Congress precedes a letter from a board acting for the committee; a document of the British Admiralty precedes one from an admiral, and a letter from an admiral precedes one from a captain. A letter written on the same day as its response always precedes that response. Laid out in tabular fashion, the principles of arrangement are as follows:

- By theater: American, followed by European
- By chronology
- By geography north to south
- Public, by organizational hierarchy
- Private

Documents that cover a span of dates, such as a letter written over the course of several days, are placed at the last date in that span.

Undated and incompletely dated documents appear at their earliest conjectured date, as follows:

Conjectured Date	Placement
sometime in a given year	before documents dated 1 January of that year sometime within a given month	before documents written the first of the month after a given month	before documents dated the first of the next month

Notes

Notes follow each document. Each document has an unnumbered source note that precedes the numbered notes and describes the document using abbreviations to indicate the type of document and the repository and collection from which it came. If the document was taken from a published source, that source may be short titled. The abbreviations used in all of these cases are listed below. Contemporary addresses, endorsements, and docketings are also given in the source notes.

The full name and rank or position, if known, of persons named in the text but not identified in the text or notes can be found in the index. In notes identifying officers of the Royal Navy, a bracketed numeral after the name refers to the enumeration system employed by the British Admiralty to differentiate officers of the same name and incorporated into The Commissioned Sea Officers of the Royal Navy 1660—1815, Occasional Publications of the Navy Records Society, Vol. 1, edited by David Syrett and R. L. DiNardo (Aldershot, England: Scholar Press, for the Navy Records Society, 1994).

Transcription

Transcriptions adhere as closely as possible to the originals in spelling, capitalization, punctuation, and abbreviation, including the retention of dashes and underlining found in the original text. Exceptions to this general rule are as follows: The names of ships are italicized. Complimentary closes, unless unusual or otherwise significant, are shortened and end with [&c.], and, in the interest of saving space, are attached to the last paragraph of text. Words and passages that were crossed out by the author are transcribed either as overstrikes or in notes if they are deemed significant by the editors. When a spelling is so unusual as to be misleading or confusing, the correct spelling immediately follows the misspelled word in square brackets and italicized type or is discussed in a footnote.

In the eighteenth century, the thorn, a symbol much like the letter y, was used in place of the letters th. In this volume, the thorn is represented by the letter y, so that “y^e” is “the,” “y^m” is “that,” “y^s” is “this,” and so forth. Another symbol, the “tailed P,” or ꝑ, is retained. This symbol represents any of the prefixes per, pro, and pre. The tilde, a flourish employed by writers in the eighteenth century to indicate the omission of one or more characters, is silently replaced by the appropriate letters.

Where the source is a newspaper or other printed work, the editors have not attempted to retain typeface: for example, blocks of text in all italics have been put in roman font, and some words in all capitals have been normalized. Exceptions are printed broadsides or advertisements where different typefaces emphasize the meaning of the text.

In order to present accurate texts, this volume renders non-English documents in their original languages, including preserving spelling and accent marks however irregular. Each of these documents is accompanied by an English translation.

Ships' Logs

Two categories of modifications to the original text appear in the transcriptions of most of the logbooks and officers' journals that appear in this volume. First, a number of columns of such information as the direction of the wind, ship's course, distance traveled, latitude, and longitude are eliminated. The noon bearing is brought into the text of the "Remarks" column, set off as a separate paragraph. Second, the dating of the daily entries has been made to conform to civil time, rather than sea time. Most eighteenth-century logbooks and journals of ships at sea began the new day with the previous day's noon reading—the locating of a ship using navigational instruments when the sun was at its meridian. Thus, according to the log of a ship in the midst of the ocean, noon on 31 December civil time would be the beginning of 1 January. In this volume, however, each day's entry begins with midnight, except as noted. In making this modification, the editors start each entry with either the noon bearings or the last bearings of the previous day.

Abbreviations Commonly Used in Logbooks

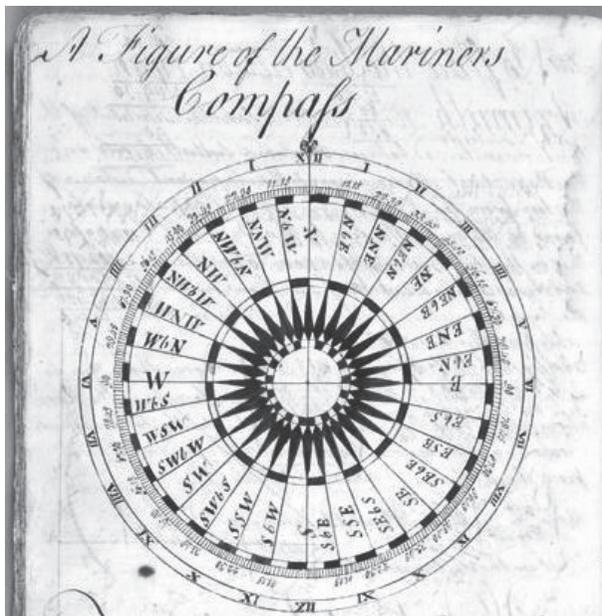

Abbreviations commonly used in logbook entries found in this volume are listed below in alphabetical order, with their expanded meanings. In the text, the abbreviations in the list may be followed by a period or colon and lowercased words may be capitalized.

Directional and Compass Readings

Directions in logbooks are based on the mariners' compass or compass rose illustrated above. Boxing the compass is the action of naming all thirty-two principal points of the compass in clockwise order. The list below gives the symbol, its meaning, and its location in degrees on the compass.

N	North	0.00 ^a /360.00 ^a
NbE	North by east	11.25 ^a
NNE	North-northeast	22.50 ^a
NEbN	Northeast by north	33.75 ^a
NE	Northeast	45.00 ^a
NEbE	Northeast by east	56.25 ^a
ENE	East-northeast	67.50 ^a
EbN	East by north	78.75 ^a
E	East	90.00 ^a
EbS	East by south	101.25 ^a
ESE	East-southeast	112.50 ^a
SEbE	Southeast by east	123.75 ^a
SE	Southeast	135.00 ^a
SEbS	Southeast by south	146.25 ^a
SSE	South-southeast	157.50 ^a
SbE	South by east	168.75 ^a
S	South	180.00 ^a
SbW	South by west	191.25 ^a
SSW	South-southwest	202.50 ^a
SWbS	Southwest by south	213.75 ^a
SW	Southwest	225.00 ^a
SWbW	Southwest by west	236.25 ^a
WSW	West-southwest	247.50 ^a
WbS	West by south	258.75 ^a
W	West	270.00 ^a
WbN	West by north	281.25 ^a
WNW	West-northwest	292.50 ^a
NWbW	Northwest by west	303.75 ^a
NW	Northwest	315.00 ^a
NWbN	Northwest by north	326.23 ^a
NNW	North-northwest	337.50 ^a
NbW	North by west	348.75 ^a

Sometimes, the logbooks further divide the distance between the principal points of the compass by quarter points. Thus, the 11.25° between north (N) and north by east (NbE) can be divided into 2.8125° increments by indicating a fraction of a point on the compass. For example, N¼E translates into a compass reading of 2.8125°; N½E is 5.625°; N¾E is 8.4375°. Sometimes the heading or direction in the logbook is given with ordinals between the direction-indicating letters, for example, N10W. This notation is read north ten degrees west and means that the vessel is steering ten degrees west of true north. Thus S61E would mean that the vessel is on a heading sixty-one degrees east of true south, or a compass reading of 119°.

Textual Devices

The editors silently supply letters and words that are missing from a damaged manuscript but are obvious from the context. They use brackets and roman type to supply those letters and words that are probable, with a question mark within the brackets where they are questionable. The editors use brackets with italic type when supplying the proper spellings of personal and geographic names or the correct spellings of words that are otherwise confusing. The bracketed, italicized phrases, [torn] and [illeg.] (“illegible”) indicate indecipherable or non-conjecturable words missing from manuscripts. The virgule, /, in source notes indicates a line break in addresses, endorsements, and docketings. Extracts, translations, and enclosures are indicated thus: [Extract]; [Translation]; [Enclosure]. All other editorial insertions in the body of the texts are indicated by italic type within brackets. For documents in which the texts lack a date or place of origin, the editors supply a date or place, or both, in square brackets and italic type, flush right before the text.

[roman]	probable conjectural reading, or text supplied from another part of the document (in the case of logbooks in particular)
[roman?]	questionable conjectural reading
[italic]	Editorial explanation
[torn]	document is damaged, with non-conjecturable text missing
[illeg.]	text is indecipherable
[Translation]	the text following is an English translation from the text’s original language
[Enclosure]	the text following was an enclosure of the preceding text
overstrike	crossed out text

AMERICAN THEATER
From 1 June to August 15, 1778

SUMMARY

At the start of June 1778, the imminent arrival of the French Fleet to support the United States dominated the calculations of both American and British leaders. The ultimate destination of the French squadron—under the command of Vice-amiral Charles-Henri Theriot, comte d’Estaing—remained unknown, making planning difficult for both sides. Despite the mystery of d’Estaing’s destination, the British continued their evacuation of Philadelphia and concentrated their troops in New York. There, the men would wait to embark for a planned attack on the French Caribbean possession of St. Lucia. On 18 June, the last British troops under Sir Henry Clinton left Philadelphia. The British withdrawal went smoothly until Continental troops under General George Washington attacked the British rear guard at Monmouth Court House on 28 June.

Elsewhere, the Continental advance in East Florida ground to a halt. The troops under Maj. Gen. Robert Howe suffered immensely from sickness, and as usual, the general faced the obstacle of organizing and controlling unruly state militia. By 29 June, Howe had taken the British Fort Mifflin, with the critical assistance of Continental naval forces. Despite this success, the Continental expedition still contended with the problems of disorganization, desertion, and dearth of supplies. British naval reinforcements arrived on 1 July. The same day, Howe held a council of war at Fort Mifflin, where he and his officers decided that the Continental forces should retreat. Accordingly, on 14 July the withdrawal from East Florida began.

D’Estaing, after a lengthy crossing of the Atlantic, appeared off Cape Henlopen, Delaware, on 7 July. He headed north, intending to sail into New York Harbor, arriving at Sandy Hook, N.J., a little more than a week later. The arrival of d’Estaing’s fleet presented problems for the Continentals. A long crossing had depleted d’Estaing’s provisions, water, and supplies; he looked to American sources for resupply. With stocks already diminished by the demands of both the Continental Army and the British, local markets had little to offer. Messages from the Continental Marine Committee and the governors of the New England states dispersed far and wide to obtain the necessaries for d’Estaing’s wants. Other needs of the French prompted a flurry of correspondence; continental governors and agents worked hard to secure enough pilots familiar with the harbors of New York, New Jersey, and Rhode Island to guide d’Estaing’s fleet.

At New York, d’Estaing faced a fleet under Vice Admiral Viscount Howe. Howe found his fleet outmatched by the French, who had more and larger ships of the line. The French and Continentals, eager to strike a blow, planned for d’Estaing to sail into New York Harbor and engage Howe. With the British ships out of the way and Continental troops concentrating, the allies could trap the British army ashore. In the event, on 21 July, d’Estaing feared that his ships of the line would ground crossing the bar and within the narrow confines of the harbor his ships of the line would be vulnerable to the shallower draft and more maneuverable British warships. Deeming the risk too great, he decided to continue north to Rhode Island, to cooperate with the Continental troops under Maj. Gen. John Sullivan at Newport, Rhode Island. There, the French fleet might manage to defeat the smaller British naval detachment under Captain John Brisbane, and in conjunction with Sullivan, isolate the several thousand men of the British garrison on Conanicut Island and Rhode (Aquidneck) Island.

On 29 July, d'Estaing's fleet emerged from the morning fog outside of Newport Harbor, Rhode Island. His arrival threatened the British garrison under Major General Sir Robert Pigot and the Royal Navy ships under Brisbane. As d'Estaing and Sullivan coordinated their efforts, the British strengthened their defenses. In the face of Sullivan's growing forces and the overpowering French naval force, the British had little hope of success unless reinforcements arrived. Indeed, at Rhode Island, d'Estaing inflicted the heaviest naval losses on the Royal Navy in American waters of the entire war. In order to prevent their falling into French or American hands, the British burned or scuttled three galleys, two sloops, and five frigates. They also sank a number of transports to create obstructions. Sullivan and d'Estaing prepared to cross American troops to Rhode Island and besiege British forces.

But the first Franco-American joint operation at Rhode Island encountered problems. D'Estaing had tarried too long on his crossing and dallied at New York waiting for a chance to cross the bar, giving time for British naval reinforcements to arrive. Howe's fleet had been augmented by ships of the line sent from the station at Halifax, Nova Scotia, and the 74-gun H.M.S. Cornwall, separated from Admiral John Byron's European fleet by a storm. With his strength thus bolstered, Howe decided that he could challenge d'Estaing. Delayed several days by poor weather, the British sailed on 6 August. Friction between Sullivan and d'Estaing also threatened the new alliance; d'Estaing took umbrage at Sullivan's often high-handed tone in letters to him. Furthermore, the Continental general threw across Continental troops on the night of 9 August to seize abandoned British positions, thereby offending the French admiral, who had coveted the honor of the first attack for his men.

When Howe's fleet arrived outside Newport Harbor on 9 August, d'Estaing called off the joint operation with Sullivan; he wanted to confront the British lest he be trapped within the harbor and his fleet defeated in detail. The following day, d'Estaing took Howe's challenge and stood out of Newport. Although British and French stood about evenly matched in terms of cannon and men, d'Estaing enjoyed a significant advantage in numbers of ships of the line.

The French pursued the British for the entirety of 11 August, but could not bring Howe to battle. Nature foiled the fleet confrontation that evening; a storm battered the ships for several days. The storm separated the fleets and inflicted serious damage on the vessels. Among other ships damaged, d'Estaing's flagship, Languedoc, lost its masts and bowsprit, and Howe's then-flagship, H.M. frigate Apollo, lost its main and mizzen topmasts, necessitating a shift of his flag. Over the next several days, the British and French fleets sought to reconcentrate. Several small but sharp encounters broke out, as ships groping for fellows ran into the enemy. Overall, the first major fleet engagement in North America during the Revolution had been inconclusive.

Beyond scrambling to supply the French fleet, assist its operations, and dispose of its prizes, Continental and state authorities faced the more prosaic duties of the war effort. Leaders had to supply Continental and state vessels, libel prizes in courts, and otherwise deal with the day-to-day tasks of the naval effort. These endeavors were complicated by an embargo passed by the Continental Congress on 10 June that directed that provisions and materials that might be captured by the British could not travel by sea.

A number of courts-martial involving Continental vessels came to an end in the summer of 1778, resolving questions of captains' previous conduct. Captain Thomas Thompson, who had commanded the Raleigh during the capture of its consort Alfred, unsuccessfully tried to get his sentence overturned. A court also found Captain Hector McNeill, former captain of Boston when the British captured Hancock, culpable for not doing more to support the other Continental vessel. Additionally, Captain John Manley came before a court-martial for the loss of Boston, but was acquitted of all charges.

British authorities also sought to libel prizes, supply their ships, and otherwise conduct the war in North America. The entrance of the French into the war changed British plans; it rendered the Carlisle Commission—British delegates who had arrived in June aboard H.M.S. Trident and who sought to establish a peace agreement with the Continental Congress—largely pointless, as with a powerful new ally, the Americans had little incentive to bargain. The French entrance into the war also shifted British strategic planning toward the Caribbean, as the valuable French islands there seemed ripe for the plucking. Indeed, going forward in the war, the British would focus their effort on protecting Great Britain and its Caribbean possessions while confronting the French there. North America would fade in importance. With France as a belligerent, the British began plans for the capture of St. Pierre and Miquelon, small islands off the coast of Canada, protected by previous treaties with France. The islands had long been a thorn in the British side as havens for Continental privateers and transshipment points for supplies for the rebellious colonies.

2. This ship was formerly H.M. packet ship Weymouth, Capt. Paul Flynn, commander, which was captured about 5 Sept. 1777 by the Connecticut Navy ship Oliver Cromwell, Capt. Seth Harding, commander. Weymouth was ship-rigged but is often referred to as a sloop because it resembled a "Sloop of War" in the Royal Navy. It was pierced for 18 carriage guns but only mounted 14 6-pounders when taken. For a further description of Weymouth, see NDAR 9: 879 and 947.

DIARY OF SIMEON PERKINS

Monday, June 1st, [Liverpool, Nova Scotia]—The Companys meet agreeable to orders.¹ After embodying, they were marched into the Meeting House, and dismissed for one hour. I then opened to them the circumstances of the Place,² and that I desired to know the minds of the Heads of the Place, respecting the proper meathods to be taken for our present defence. The gentlemen present spoke in general. Their minds seemed to much as those I consulted in the evening, and the business was conducted with decency. In the close I made a motion that the Fort³ be Dismantled, and a Guard of three men to stand each night, to be paid by Subscription, 2/ each for each night, and that in case any Privateer comes in, the Town to be Alarmed, and the Militia got under Arms, then a Treaty opened with the Privateers, to let them know that if they attempted to land under Arms, we should oppose them. But if they did not, nor offer to take a vessel, out of the river, we should not molest them, etc. Which seemed to be agreeable. I then ordered the Militiwa under Arms, and after embodying again, I put it to vote whether they were willing to take it in turn to stand guard three such night, in their turns. Which was unanimously (except four Desenting votes) agreed to. Those dissenting were, Benjamin Cole, Benj. Homes, Wm. Virge, [illegible]. We then Marched to the Point, with two Companys, fired a volley, and Dismissed. Fired a round of the Swivels, and ye Cannon, then concluded to leave them in the fort till tomorrow, and set our guard of 3 men. The subscription Opened, and sufficient subscribed for 9 nights Guard.

The previous night, 31 May, a town leader had returned from Halifax with news that the government at Halifax had informed him that there was no armed vessel available to station at the town and only a detachment of six soldiers. The town was offered four 6-pounders but no secure way to get them to Liverpool. That night Perkins and other town leaders met to discuss their situation. Ibid., 201.

3. This fort, later called Fort Point, was a temporary battery created after raids by American privateers in May 1778 became onerous and destructive to the town of Liverpool. Perkins, who ran a store in the town, was one of those who mobilized opposition to the privateersmen.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

MY DEAR SIR—

*Portsmouth*¹ [N.H.] 1st June, 1778.

. . . I find they [British] are making little incursions and attacking defenceless places in the neighborhood of Rhode Island, but these I take to be the last struggles of expiring tyranny—however, I could wish we had a sufficient body of soldiers there to prevent the ravages, which I doubt not would be the case, were it not for the infamous spirit of privateering that so generally pervades at this time. I understand that about one hundred and fifty men from this state have joined general Sullivan,² not one hundred from Massachusetts, none from Connecticut— on the whole, he has about five hundred men with him, a grand army for a major general's command.

Since I have mentioned privateering I must beg leave to observe something further on that subject. I wish some method could be adopted to abate the rage for that business, which appears to me the most baneful to society of any that ever a civilized people were engaged in. The officers that command these vessels are generally the most profligate fellows that are to be met with, and if by chance a man of a fair moral character engages in the business, he very soon degenerates and falls into all the vices of his associates.

The passion for this business daily increases; there is no less than six privateers now in this port belonging to Massachusetts, besides three or four fitting out here; three have at least sailed from here this spring that came from other places to fill up their complement of men, and I have heard of great numbers that have sailed from the neighboring ports, besides those that have called here: in short the sea is swarming with these—I had almost said freebooters—indeed they are but little better. I am very apprehensive that unless some measure can be adopted to check the voracity of these people, they will exceedingly disgrace the American flag, and how this is to be done I know not, unless a total stop is put to the business. This I think ought to be done immediately, for besides preventing the mischief that will certainly happen if you do not stop them, I know of no way else to get your public ships manned; for give what encouragement you will, those who are concerned in privateering will find means to prevent men from engaging in the public service. Your ships of war must lay by the walls, or perhaps some of them may get half manned—if they do not go to sea in that condition the officer is blamed, and if they do he is sure to be disgraced. Under these circumstances can it be expected that an officer of reputation would choose to serve the public? I heartily wish to see the American navy respectable, but I do not expect it until privateering is discouraged and the business of the navy put wholly into the hands of men whose private business does not militate with that of the public. . . .

JOHN BROWNE, PRESIDENT PRO TEM OF MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR, TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir

The Board of War had the Honor to receive your much esteemed favour 14th.
Ulto:¹ inclosing a Resolve of Congress for the Sale of the Snow, called Our Lady of *Mount Carmel, & S^t. Antony,*² & her Cargo, which we immediately communicated to M^r Rowe,³ in whose hands that Vessel & Cargo now rests.

After some objections & delays, M^r Rowe made the following proposals, from which he assur'd us, he would not recede, & if not complied with, would not deliver the Interest.

First, such charges as have arisen on unloading the Vessel, taking charge of the Cargo, & Subsisting the Seamen, shall be allow'd, & paid. In the next place, The Charges of Commissions, of the Maritime Court, Expresses &c, shall be submitted to Three Gentlemen of Character & Probity, & if such charges, shall be by them found admissible, they are to be laid before Congress, for their approbation, or disallow[ance]⁴ by whose determination M^r Rowe obliges himself to ab[ide?]

The Board, considering the Perishing Conditio[n of] a considerable part of the Cargo, & observing the dire[ctions of] Congress, that, this business might be compleated with [all] convenient dispatch, together with other reasons, that will doubtless occur, have after some hesitation accepted these proposals—⁵ The accounts when Audited & Examin'd, shall be duly forwarded—As Sales by Auction, are prohibited by law, & as we apprehend, that, to be the best method of disposing of this Vessel & Cargo, we shall apply, to our General Court, now sitting, for permission for that purpose, which we have not the least doubt, of Obtaining & flatter [ourselves] that we shall render such accounts, as may be satisfactory to all concerned.—

We do ourselves the Honor, to inclose a Manifest of the Cargo,⁶ to be deliverd us by M^r Rowe, which we expect to receive in a few days.—

We wish for directions respecting the Hard Money, & Sacerdotal Habiliments,⁷ as we apprehend the former may be wanted for Publick uses, & we conceive an impropriety in disposing of the latter at a Publick sale.—

We would Submitt to Congress, what measur's are to be taken, with the Portuguese Seamen, formerly belonging to the Snow. They have been, & still continue to be subsisted, at the Rate of 56 Dollars P^r. Week. This great expence we must continue to pay, till we are favourd with your farther commands.—We have the Honor to be with the greatest Respect.—

THE NEW-YORK GAZETTE; AND THE WEEKLY MERCURY, MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1778

NEW-YORK, June 1.

Thursday last was sent into this Port, by his Majesty's Ship The Experiment, Sir James Wallace, Commander, the Privateer Ship Portsmouth, Roach, Master, of 22 Guns, and 156 Men, taken the 7th Instant off St. George's Bank, only four Days out from Portsmouth, in New-Hampshire: This Ship was built on Purpose for a Privateer, and has been very successful both in the European Seas and in the West-Indies, and is owned in Boston.¹

Two Ships of about 300 Tons, with Rice, were on the 10th ult. carried into St. Augustine, one of them by the Privateer Brig Lord Howe, of this Place,² and the other by a Privateer Sloop belonging to that Port.

Saturday Night last arrived here from the Granades the Letter of Marque ship Minerva, Edward Morrison, Commander, of 16 Guns and 40 Men; who, on Tuesday the 26th ultimo, in Lat. 38, and 1/2, Lon. 73, fell in with a Rebel Privateer Brig of 14 Carriage and 24 Swivel Guns, with 6 Cohorns and 100 Men, whom he engaged within Pistol Shot for four Glasses (from 8 o'clock in the Morning to 10) during which Time he had 6 Men killed and 10 wounded, among the former is the Carpenter; and both Mates are of the Number of the latter. The Captain had a Ball thro' his Hat, and his Vessel so disabled that put it out of his Power to pursue the Privateer, by which Means she escaped. The Minerva's Masts and Rigging are much hurt: There are 170 Shot thro' the Topmast Staysail, 8 Cannon Shot thro' the Ensign, and one thro' the Pendant, and scarce any Part of the Vessel but what is much hurt. Several Shot went into the Cabin, and many into the Hold, which greatly damaged the Cargo. No Man could behave with more Coolness and Bravery during the whole Action, than Capt. Morrison, and his brave Crew followed the Example.³

The Rebel Privateers Blaze Castle,⁴ and New Oliver Cromwell,⁵ have lately taken and carried into the West-Indies, a certain Capt. Blair; a Vessel from London for Philadelphia; and a Vessel from Leith.⁶

1. New Hampshire privateer ship Portsmouth, Capt. Thomas Roach, commander, mounting twenty guns and a crew of 100 men, owned by John Langdon and others of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Howe's Prize List, 30 Oct 1778, UKLPR, Adm. 1/488, fols. 486-87; DNA, PCC, item 196, vol. 12, p. 11. H.M.S. Experiment captured Portsmouth on 10 May. UKLPR, Adm. 51/331. In an account of this capture in The Royal Gazette of 30 May it was reported that Portsmouth had done "considerable mischief, and amongst other prizes took the Duckfield, a very rich three deck ship."

2. New York privateer schooner Lord Howe. According to a warrant issued in September, it carried 8 carriage guns, 8 swivel guns, a crew of 40, and was commanded by Thomas Jan. Lord Howe was owned by three New York merchants. UKLPR, C.O. 5/1108, fols. 283-84. The Lord Howe's prize was probably the French merchant ship Le Devin, Joseph Jacques Frichet, master. UKLPR, H.C.A. 32/306/6.

3. For more details concerning this engagement, see The New-York Gazette; and the Weekly Mercury, 8 June, below.

4. Rhode Island privateer ship Blaze Castle, Capt. James Munro, commander.

5. Connecticut Navy ship Oliver Cromwell, Capt. Timothy Parker, commander.

6. While both Blaze Castle and Oliver Cromwell captured a number of prizes during this time, they did not do so together. Oliver Cromwell was acting in consort with Connecticut Navy ship Defence while Blaze Castle was cruising alone. See Alexander Rose & John Torrains to Col. Joseph Trumbull, 3 June, and The Independent Chronicle, and the Universal Advertiser, 18 June, both below.

Sir

June 1st 1778

My two Letters¹ by the *Admiral Keppel & Cyrus*² Prizes, I hope your Excellency has received with the two Prizes. My reason for not convoying them in, was those mentioned on account of the Small Pox, which Sixty of my men was then down with—one of which since dead.—I continued cruising³ about four weeks to windward of the West-India Islands in Company with Cap^t Parker⁴ in the O. Cromwell but unluckily fell in with none but French & Dutch Ships. By this time my Warter was almost expended, and had concluded to go into Martinico, to resist⁵ Cap^t Parker advised me to proceed down the Islands with him where it was likely we might fall in with some homeward bound Ships & from thence to this place. I considered that it would be much best for the State for the Ship to repair in some Port on the Continent—as the natural expence might be so much easier replaced—We accordingly made the best of our way, and arrived here the day before yesterday all well—tho' the President⁶ has ordered our Ship to ride quarantine on account of our having had the Small Pox on board during the cruize, tho' am in hopes it will be but two or three Days, as there is not the least infection now on board—I expect to be ready for Sea, in about three weeks, when I shall proceed on another Cruize which I wish may prove successful—your Excellency may depend there shall be no time lost, in fitting the Ship, and that my utmost endeavours to serve the State shall not be wanting—Am Your Excellency's [&c.]

GOVERNOR WILLIAM GREENE OF RHODE ISLAND TO HENRY MARCHANT

[Extract]

Dear Sir.

Warwick State Rhode Island &c. June 2nd. 1778

Before this reaches You, it is very probable, you will have heard that a large Body of the Enemy in the night of the 24th. of last Month, landed at Warren towards break of day, and from thence marched to a place called Kakemuet¹ where lay our flat bottom'd Boats, and burnt about Seventy or eighty. They then proceeded back to Warren, & burnt the Meeting house, parsonage, house and Caleb Childs's house, as Also the Magazine, in which was a Considerable quantity of Powder, and partly burnt one of Our Gallies,² and a new Privateer³ that lay in the Harbour, they then proceeded to Bristol, wher[e] it is said they burnt 20 dwelling Houses, and a considerable number of other Buildings, and then Imbark't on board their Boats, carrying with them about Sixty Prisoners. among whome was Sylvester Child & Parson Thompson⁴ of Warren,⁵ On the 31st. following being perhaps flush'd with their former success, they again landed at Fall river, with a Body of about 150 and burnt one House, and a Mill and were proceeding no doubt to burn the remainder of the Mills as there is two Corn Mills, two Saw Mills, and a fulling mill upon the same Stream, near to where they burnt the other, but as there was a bridge to pass to the other Mills, which our People took up, and then placed themselves behind a wall and then began to fire upon them, They retreated with the loss of one Man, Killed, and one Mortally wounded who I hear is since dead.⁶

These Alarms have greatly distressed this State, more especially as our sister States have neglected sending us any Troops, for a Very considerable time past, and by the means of our Shores being so Very naked, the Enemy embrace the opportunity of discovering their Savage Intentions, wherever any oppertunity offers. In consequence of the foregoing, our Assembly has been convened, and they have enacted that our State Battallions shall be fill'd up to the number agreed on by the Convention at Springfield by the tenth of this Instant, and in the mean time have order'd out a considerable part of our Militia to do duty on the Shore. that as we go on I see nothing but that there is the greatest appearance of this States being Intirely laid Waste, on the one hand as we are almost entirely neglected by our Sister States by having our Country destroy'd by the Enemy, or on the Other by keeping the most considerable part of our Militia on duty (for we have but about nine hundred including Officers now on Duty) we shall be prevented from raising the necessaries of life. . . .

The resolve of Congress respecting the Commanders of Arm'd Vessels strictly adhering to instructions of Congress was published in the Providence Gazette of the 30th. May, as also the Address to the Inhabitants of the United States,⁷ which please

After making my Compliments to the President to acquaint him with. . . am with Great respect [&c.]

By the Acts of Congress, & from the nature of the seperate & independant Sovereignty of the several States, I Conceive that all Prisoners taken by the independant Forces of any particular State whether by Sea or Land, are to be under the Controul & Disposition of the States by whom captured [provided that the] Peace & Safety of y^e State where y y [they] may happen to be, be not broke or endangered & no other, unless that of Congress. I therefore hope the Hon^{ble}. Council of Your State³ will not insist on our Prisoners, taken in y^e Cyrus & Kepple,⁴ being delivered to their Commissary.⁵ unless the Interest & Safety of the Public require it. The Civility & Respect You have shown M^r Shirley his Lady &c is very agreable to me, as well as the Indulgence to the Seamen, & wish to have same continued till We can take further Order concerning Them, but if the Hon^o Council cannot be induced to accede from their demand concerning Them, You will send Them all, by the middle Road to the Town of Norwich in this State in such safe & proper manner as Your Prudence shall suggest, unless it shall be inconsistent with the Laws of your State. Your Conduct in not giving them up to y^e Commissary &c in y^e Circumstances, unless justly offensive to your Hon^o Council, as I cannot conceive it to be, has my Approbation. &c Pensacola 2^d. June 1778.

My Lord

Inclosed is a Copy of a Letter which I have received from the Governor of Louisiana-respecting the Protection afforded by him to the Rebels, and also the Copy of a Letter written by me to that Gentleman upon the same subject.¹ I wish that my remonstrances may have some effect, but from the late Conduct of Governor Galvez, I cannot flatter myself that he will pay any great regard to these representations, And notwithstanding Several expressions in my Letter, I shall be exceedingly carefull how we embroil ourselves with the Spaniards, as it might at this time prove highly prejudicial to the King's interest—² The Sylph Sloop is sailed for the Mississippi and will proceed to Manchack to Support that Post, and I have been obliged to hire an armed Sloop which accompanied the Sylph to Transport Provisions for the Troops at Manchack.³ This Vessel is under the Command of Lieutenant Osborn⁴ of his Majestys Navy, and has an officer and a detachment of the Troops to do duty on Board, as Seamen to defend her were not to be procured in the Province. General Dalling⁵ upon my requisition has sent a reinforcement here from Jamaica of 100 men, and three Commissioned officers, These Troops are composed of Capⁿ. Prevost's Company of the third Battalion, and a Detachment of the First Battalion of Royal Americans—⁶ Sir Peter Parker the Admiral on the Jamaica Station has also sent us the Active frigate of 28 guns, and the Armed Schooner Florida, designed for the Surveying Service The Active and Stork Sloop which is expected are ordered to return to Jamaica when apprehensions of an Invasion are over, and the Florida Schooner is to be employed in the Surveying Service—The Hound Sloop will remain at Pensacola, the West Florida on the Lakes,⁷ and the Sylph at Manchack

I have consulted with Captain Williams of the Active Commanding officer here of the Navy,⁸ on the most proper and best means for protecting the Province and employing his Majestys Sloops under his Command the most effectually for that purpose, and it is intended that one of the Sloops be Stationed to Cruize off the Balize—the West Florida to remain in the Lakes, the Surveying Schooner at Ship Island and the Stork Sloop when she arrives to lay at Mobbille Point, The Rebels still Continue their Incursions against the Colony from New-orleans, and have lately been so daring as to come into the Bay of Mobbille, in large Batteaus armed with Swivels, and of a Small Draft of Water. I Shall therefore be under the necessity of procuring the same kind of Boats if Possible, as the Kings Vessels cannot follow them into Shallow Water and I shall be also obliged to employ Some of the Troops in these Boats, to keep up the Communication from this place with the Kings Sloops, and the Post at Manchack, as those Vessels are weakly manned and it is impossible to get Seamen here at any rate

Yesterday arrived here a French Brig from the River Mississippi, by which I am informed that there are five armed Vessels containing between four and five hundred Troops arrived at New orleans from the havannah, and that the Spanish Governor had Imprisoned four British Subjects residing at New Orleans, Two of which were Considerable merchants—who had been compelled to take the Oath of Allegiance to Spain, but we are Ignorant of the reason which occasioned this measure—⁹ I cannot learn what are the intentions of the Spaniards in sending this armament to the Mississippi in time of profound Peace, when the Troops which they had before in Louisiana with the militia have been hitherto Judged Sufficient. for the Service of that Colony—Their late Conduct is Suspicious, and I shall order 50 men from hence to reinforce the Post at Manchack to prevent any Surprize. I have the Honor to be [&c.]

2. In his letter to Gálvez of 28 May, Chester warned: “should this Banditti again receive Supplies in your Dominions, & pass over from thence to Commit farther depredations upon the Inhabitants of this Colony, and afterwards retire to your Province for a Sanctuary to dispose of their Plunder—I shall then, after this formal Notice, consider your giving Countenance thereto, as an open Violation of the Treaties Subsisting between our respective Courts, and a breach of the Law of Nations—. . . and your Excellency may be assured, that altho’ I have the most earnest desire to preserve the Peace, that I will not Suffer such enormities to be again Committed, while I have it in my power to restrain and punish them.” UKLPR, C.O. 5/622, fol. 636.

3. H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Sylph, Comdr. John Fergusson. The leased vessel was the armed sloop Catherine.

4. Lt. John Osborn, R.N. On 19 June while sailing up the Mississippi River, Catherine hit a submerged log and sank within thirty minutes. The crew was rescued but much of the Catherine’s cargo of arms and provisions was lost. Lt. Osborne to Chester, 4 July 1778, UKLPR, C.O. 5/594, fols. 661–63. The loss of Catherine’s cargo meant that the garrison at Manchac was inadequately armed and poorly fed during their occupation of that post. 5. Gen. John Dalling was both lieutenant governor and military commander at Jamaica.

6. Probably, Capt. Augustine Prevost Jr., of the 3d Battalion of the 60th Regiment, called “the Royal Americans.”

7. Lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain.

8. Capt. William Williams.

9. Gálvez’s request for the reinforcements is in his letter to Don Diego José Navarro of 14 Apr., NDAR 12: 110–14. In it he requested a company, which at full strength numbered ninety-five men.

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO GOVERNOR PATRICK TONYN OF EAST FLORIDA

Copy
Sir,

Philadelphia
June the 3^d. 1778.

By a Trading Sloop met with off the Entrance of the Delaware, I received the Duplicate of your Letter of the 15th. of last Month, respecting the Intelligence you had obtained of an intended Invasion of the Province under your Government from South Carolina and Georgia and the Measures you had adopted in providing a more adequate Defence for the inland Navigation, since the Accident to the Hinchinbrook and the Armed Vessel fitted at Augustine; which, I understand, have by some unaccountable Inattention fallen into the Enemy’s Hands.¹

I concur intirely in Opinion with your Excellency, on the Utility of employing some Vessels armed as You describe, for commanding the in-land Navigation: Deeming that Expedient, assisted by a well established Post, the most eligible for the proposed End.

The Carysfort and Galatea are said to have left their Stations some time since.² It was intended, if the Perseus could be refitted in Time,³ that a seasonable Supply of Provisions and other Necessaries should be sent, for enabling Captain Fanshawe to continue one of those Frigates with the Perseus on the Southern Coasts. The Lizard will now be ordered in Addition to the Perseus and Otter for the better Security of the Province,⁴ until the Corps of Troops destined to re-inforce your Garrison by Sir Henry

Clinton, who has succeeded Sir William Howe in the Chief Command of the Army, is arrived.⁵

Captain Elphinstone will be [ordered] to conduct one Navy Victualling Transport, sent by desire of Sir Henry Clinton for the immediate Supply of the Garrison.⁶ And he takes an eighteen Pounder, the only piece of heavy Artillery remaining to have been embarked preparatory to the intended Movement of which I conclude your Excellency will be fully apprized in the General's Letters by this Conveyance. I have the Honor to be with great Respect Sir, [&c.]

Howe.

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO CAPTAIN GEORGE KEITH ELPHINSTONE, R.N.

By the Viscount Howe, Vice Admiral of the the White and Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Ships and Vessels employed and to be employed &c^a in North America.

A Supply of Provisions being immediately wanted for the Use of the King's Troops in the Province of East Florida, and the present State of the Magazines of the Army not admitting of the Reduction necessary for that purpose; You are therefore, taking the Captain¹ of the Otter Sloop under your Command, to proceed to Sea with the said Sloop and the Naval Victualling Transport which accompanied You hither from New York, and use your best Endeavors to conduct the said Transport in Safety to S^t Augustine. Upon your Arrival there, You are to direct the Master of the Transport to deliver the Provisions in his Charge to the Assistant Commissary of the Army at that Port, and to take his Receipt for the same. And you are further to direct the said Master, as soon as the Vessel is cleared of her Cargoe to proceed to Deptford (if not otherwise appointed by the Agent Victualler at New York) and acquaint the Victualling Board with his Arrival there, that he may receive their Instructions for his future Conduct; unless he should prefer being discharged abroad with the stipulated Allowance of one Month's Freight: In which last Case You are to give him a Certificate, specifying the time of such discharge, accordingly.

It being intended that a Piece of Heavy Artillery should be sent to S^t Augustine for the Use of the Garrison, or to be mounted in One of the Armed Vessels fitted for commanding the in-land Navigation of the Province; You are to cause the same to be received onboard the Perseus,² and disposed of, as Governor Tonyn³ shall desire.

You are moreover, to take into your charge the public Dispatches which You will receive herewith, together with such Money as the Pay-Master of the Army may have occasion to send to S^t Augustine for the payment of the Troops; And having upon your Arrival delivered the same as they are respectively intended, You are to consult with the Governor respecting the manner in which the Ship you Command (and any others which shall be ordered for the same Service) may be employed with the greatest Advantage for the Defence and Security of the Province, and to pursue such Measures in consequence as shall appear to be most effectual for that Purpose: Being to continue upon this Service with the Perseus and such other Ships as may be appointed to act in Conjunction with You, as long as your Provisions will admit, with a Sufficiency in Reserve for joining me at New York for further Orders; Or until the Arrival of an intended Re-inforcement to the Garrison of S^t Augustine; And You are then to join me without delay, as aforesaid.

In case You should meet the Ariel, stationed off of Occacoke Inlet, on your Passage to the Southward, You are to order Captain Phipps⁴ to join me without Loss of Time in this River.

Given onBoard His Majesty's Ship the Eagle in the River Deleware, the 3^d. day of June 1778.

ALEXANDER ROSE & JOHN TORRANS TO COLONEL JOSEPH TRUMBULL

Sir

[Charlestown, S.C.] June 3^d 1778—

The above is copy of my last¹ & I have now the pleasure to acquaint you of the Arrival of Cap^t Parker in the oliver Cromwell & Cap^t Smedley in the Defence—² By the former We received the favour of your Letter of the 10th March,³ and you may rely on our care in the execution of your orders— The Indigo shall be ready as soon as he can take it onboard which will we hope be in 8 or 10 days—We shall supply whatever is Necessary for the repairs of both vessels, but are sorry you placed no funds in our hands to reimburse us as it will be very difficult to pass bills on the Northward should we want to draw—We would therefore recommend your Tender of sufficient sum to be allways ready in future—Continental Loan office Certificates will not do—

Captains Parker & Smedley have fortunately on their Cruize made prize of two Ships belonging to & bound from Bristol to S^t Kitts & Jamaica and ordered them to New England—The one is called the Kepple Cap^t Browne mounting 18 guns⁴ the other the Cyrus Cap^t Dick of 16 guns—⁵ They were both well man'd & made a stout resistance—The oliver Cromwell had her Cap^t of Marins⁶ killed & a few others—The wounded shall be properly taken care of—I hear but of two.

The Smallpox broke out unfortunately on board the Defence soon after she left Boston & although they have been free from it for near a month, she is obliged to perform quarantine—There is no time fixed but hope in 8 or 10 days that she will be allowed to come up to Town—The oliver Cromwell will want a good deal of Ship Bread which is very scarce & dear here—What she took in at Boston has proved very bad—We have not heard whether Cap^t Smedley has turned out— We are with great regard Sir [&c.]

WILLIAM SAUNDERS TO VICE ADMIRAL JOHN MONTAGU

Sir

Placentia [Newfoundland] 4th June 1778

I did my self the Honour to write your Excellency the 31st past¹ to inform you of an American Privateer going into the Harbour of S^t Laurence² plundering the stores of a Jersey employ & Carrying away there Vessel to S^t Peters³ the same privateer went to Harbour Britain⁴ on the 30th plunder'd the Stores of a Poole & Jersey Merchants took two Brigs out of the Harbour and Carried them into S^t Peters—the Merchants of Burin & Mortier sent their Vessels in here as the[y] dayly expect to be Visited by the same Privateer or her consorts a snow & a schooner which they are inform'd are Cruizing between Cape Race Cape S^t Marys & S^t Peters—Hope your Excellency will take into Consideration the defenceless state of this part of the Island—the sight of a Kings Ship would be of Great service to the trade, as S^t Peters is so near us—the American Privateers in one nights Sail are at the Mouths of our Harbour & get information at S^t Peters of every Vessel in the Western harbours—the trade of this part of [the] Island will be greatly injured if no Kings Ship does not soon appear for our protection

I thought it my duty to give your Excellency this Information by the first Conveyance & should have sent a Boate but meeting with one going directly to S^t Johns—I am with the most profound Respect Sir [&c.]

DIARY OF SIMEON PERKINS

Liverpool [Nova Scotia], Thursday, June 4th,— Cloudy, and some rain, and foggy. A small Privateer comes into the Harbour, early in the morning, and hails along side the wreck of the French Ship.¹ We hear a report that a Malagash schooner was retaken by some Dutchmen yesterday, at Port matoon, and also hear the Blonde has three privateers stroped in at the Ragged Islands,² and the Arbuthnot two stroped in at Port Roseway.³ I hear some of the Privateers men, that belonged to the retaken Schooner, are in Town. We double the Guard on acct. of the Privateers being in the Harbour, and the said Men on shore.

Perkins, Diary, p. 202.

1. On April 24, the French ship Duc de Choiseul was forced aground in Liverpool harbor by H.M. frigate Blonde, Capt. John Milligan. The “small Privateer” was Massachusetts Privateer sloop Fox, Jonathan Tuksbery, commander.

2. See Journal of H.M. frigate Blonde, 30 May 1778, NDAR 12: 483. Presumably, Perkins is referring to the Ragged Island in Newfoundland, but as seen by the journal entry, Blonde was operating near Cape Ann, Massachusetts.

3. Port Roseway is present-day Shelburne, Nova Scotia. Arbuthnot was schooner tender to H.M. frigate Rainbow.

THE NEW-YORK PACKET (FISHKILL), THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1778

FISH-KILL, June 4.

The sloop of war King-Fisher,¹ of 16 guns, which obstructed the passage at King's Ferry for several days past, was obliged, last Sabbath morning, to tow off with precipitation from that station, having been hulled several times by well directed shot, from a couple of great guns, sent down for the purpose, under the command of Capt. Moodie.²

1. The vessel is misidentified as H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Kingsfisher, Comdr. Hugh Cloberry Christian, commander, which was stationed at Newport, Rhode Island, when this engagement occurred. The sloop mentioned here may have been H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Swan, Lt. Thomas Totty, commander.

JOHN BRADFORD TO JOHN ROSS

Sir,

Boston 5 June 1778

Your Favour of 18 Feb^{ry} was handed Me by Mess^{rs} Vareplank & Brown the 12th Ulti^o. who arrivd here in good Health & Spirits, they tarried here a Fortnight & then went to their respective Homes. I had the Pleasure of furnishing M^r Brown with 1200 Dollars for Acc^t as pr Advice. I have the Pleasure to inform you, that your very lucky Ship the Henrietta Cap^t Brown arriv'd the 4 after being in Possession of a Privateer out of London 43 Hours, during which Time he was kept in Duress with all his People saving two, the Pump was neglected by which a Trifle of Goods were damag'd—¹ I had a Survey & found proper Dunnage had been afforded, poor Brown,² during his Captivity, committed all his Papers to y^e Sea, and was entirely at a Loss to whom to apply till on Information of my Corresponding with M^r Morris,³ not knowing whether the Cargo was on public or private Account, and shewing him an Order, from M^r Morris to take Charge of all Effects of his that might arrive here, he deliver'd the Cargo into my Hands as did M^r Hall.⁴ Those you shipp'd in the three Friends, which all came in good Order. I'm happy to find by that Gentleman that He brought Duplicates of all the Papers Cap^t Brown destroy'd, Cap^t Green⁵ appears to deserve every Civility due to a Gentleman, He with Cap^t Nicholson⁶ put themselves under the Direction of y^e Navy Board,⁷ their Ships are dismantled & will soon be fitted in a very different Manner from what they were in France. Cap^t Brown is gone forward determin'd not to return to go hence in the Ship, (he says) by your Direction, it seems his Men when they found he was bound to y^e Continent⁸ grew refractory, & for some Time took the Ship from Him; but by his own Address & the Assistance of his worthy Mate they prevail'd on them to aid in navigating her to this port. But soon after the Ship was discharg'd they insisted on finishing the Voyage here, to which Cap^t Brown readily acceded to, & he has accordingly given them Drafts' on you for the Amount of their Wages, the Cap^t then left the Ship in my Charge with only y^e Mate & Boy, but soon after he went away four of the Men were introduc'd to Me by the Mate whose Character he spoke highly off, and I agreed with them to go whatever Voyage she might be order'd at forty Dollars pr Month. The Wages from this Place has for some Time been as high as fifty, and the Difficulty of coming at them almost insuperable, they have been very diligently employ'd in getting all their lower Rigging lifted & tarr'd, providing Spun Yarn which would have been a very expensive Article here, so high as £26 pr Ct., and giving her a proper Overhaul with scarcely any Expence excepting their Wages & Victuals; Whereas had I been obliged to hire Day's Men I must have paid each Man 24/ pr Day—I shall have the Henrietta fitted for Y^e Sea & ready to prosecute y^e Voyage as soon as I've M^r Morris's Orders respecting a Master and the Voyage He intends her for: The Death of y^e unhappy M^r T Morris,⁹ must give his worthy Patron, Friend & Brother much less Concern than if he had acted a diffrent Part, his Conduct almost destroy'd M^r Morris' Peace of Mind—I beg leave to refer you to the public Prints for News, nothing of Consequence has taken place this Summer by Land the Public Accounts show our Misfortunes in y^e Navy—Great Things have been in our Power but under the Management of Poltroons have prov'd abortive—¹⁰ I shall be happy in rendering you or your Connections any Services in

GENERAL SIR HENRY CLINTON, BRITISH ARMY, TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

[Extract]

Duplicate N^o. 4.—

My Lord

Philadelphia June 5th 1778

I was honoured with Your Lordship's dispatches of the 10th 11th & 12th of March.—¹

In my last letter, transmitted by His Majesty's Ship Andromeda, I had the honour of informing Your Lordship that from the dispersed situation of the Fleet on other necessary Services, the Admiral could not with certainty inform me when sufficient Convoys for the intended Expeditions could be assembled, and that I had therefore determined, agreeable to the King's Instructions, to Evacuate this place and proceed to New York, from whence the latter could be much better fitted out than it was possible to have done here.²

The Admiral having acquainted me that the Troops could not be taken on board nearer than Newcastle,³ which is Forty Miles distant from hence, and as such a March could not be undertaken with less than the whole Army, I found it impracticable to Embark the Forces in order to proceed to New York by water, as there are not Transports sufficient to receive the whole at once, and therefore a great part of the Cavalry, all our Provision Train and all those persons whose attachment to Government has rendered them Objects of Vengeance to the Enemy, must have been left behind.

I am to add to this, that if we should afterwards have been detained by contrary Winds, Mr. Washington⁴ might have seized the opportunity of making a decisive push at New York, all reports from thence seeming to indicate an intention of that sort.

These reasons, My Lord, have induced me to resolve on Marching through Jersey.

I am prepared to expect every obstruction that can be thrown in my way, but am not apprehensive of any great delay, and I secure New-York by this March.

I have Embarked all the Baggage of the Army in such Transports as are here, the Stores to a considerable amount, and the greatest part of the valuable Merchandize necessary for the Troops, which had been imported since His Majesty's Forces took possession of this Town.

In these Vessels also, a refuge has been provided for those people, whose sufferings in the cause of Government, gave them a claim to every protection we could possibly afford them.

I hope to arrive at New York in about Ten days after I leave this, by which time the Admiral will probably be able to inform me when the Ships, destined to Convey the different Expeditions will be assembled. . . .⁵ I have the honour to be My Lord [Œc.]

As seen in the letter from Viscount Howe to Secretary of the Admiralty Philip Stephens, 6 July, below, the “expeditions,” which were to be sent from New York to the West Indies, were delayed until the destination of the French fleet from Toulon was known.

JOURNAL OF THE MARYLAND COUNCIL

[Annapolis, Md.] Friday 5th. June 1778

It appearing to this Board from a Letter of the Board of War dated the first Day of this Instant¹ that there is a pressing occasion for the immediate Transportation of the Provisions purchased in Virginia and this State for the use of the Army. It is therefore ordered that a sufficient Number of the Bay Craft be impressed for the purpose of Transporting the said Provisions to the Head of this Bay and it is requested that any Justice of the peace issue Warrants for the impressing such Bay Craft for the purpose aforesaid on the Application of Captain Tho^s. Richardson of George Town or Jesse Hollingsworth of Baltimore Town.

BRIGADIER GENERAL WILLIAM MOULTRIE, CONTINENTAL ARMY, TO MAJOR GENERAL ROBERT HOWE, CONTINENTAL ARMY

[Extract]

DEAR SIR,

CHAR[L]ESTOWN, June 5th, 1778.

. . . We have vessels frequently coming in with great quantities of goods, they are fallen in price, 2 or 300 per cent...we imagine the reason of so many getting in here is owing to the men-of-war and cruizers being called to the assistance of Augustine,¹ on your movements towards that place. I heartily wish that you were provided with every thing necessary, that you might proceed on your intended expedition, before the season is too far advanced: I fear for the troops in that climate in July and August. . . I am, &c.

BRIGADIER GENERAL AUGUSTINE PREVOST, BRITISH ARMY, TO GENERAL SIR WILLIAM HOWE, BRITISH ARMY

(Copy.)

Sir.—

S^t. Augustine 5th. June 1778.

. . . By our last advices the body of Carolina and Georgian troops, reported to be two thousand two hundred and fifty men who were coming to invade this Province have halted on the other side of the Altamaha river,¹ the preparations with the Augmentation of our Forces I suppose has deterred them from proceeding in their operations, my intentions was to let them advance as far as S^t. Mary and by no means to save them any trouble, there we should have begun to oppose them and disputed our ground every step, Governor Tonyn's Rangers was to have opposed their passage over that river and were to be supported by about two hundred and fifty loyal Carolinians part of them Light horse Men, Commanded at present by Major Prevost of the Second Battalion of the Sixtieth Regiment who with great trouble and perseverance has embodied and introduced a little order and discipline amongst them,² the retreat of this body was secured by a small Fortification on the NorthSide of the river S^t. John, and that post by an armed Vessel; on the southside of this river I have erected Batteries at such places as it was probable or practicable for them to cross the river, supported by two detachments of the Regulars, and ten Miles behind them, I proposed taking post with all the Men from this Garrison, leaving only the number to Garrison the Fort,—this last body would be so situated as to be able to secure the retreat of the whole, or to fall upon them whenever they should attempt to form—In that situation I expect (should they still persist in advancing) to retard their March, and if the Naval force prepared by Governor Tonyn be properly stationed in the river,³ than I am perswaded they will do little or no hurt to the Province as what is between S^t. Mary and S^t. John was abandoned before I came here;

I have besides a number of Negroes employed to repair the Lines, making of Redoubts and finishing the Outworks of the Fort, in short I hope to oblige them to make a Siege, consequently to bring heavy Artillery which is very troublesome, if they cannot effect to bring it by Water.

Your Excellency must be persuaded that those things are attended with unavoidable expences altho' I have not as yet received the money. I had reason to expect in July last, but now hope to receive it soon as also provisions very much wanted and without which so great a number of Men cannot be supported [to] work and do their Duty. I have the honor to be [&c.]

P:S. As I have been disappointed in sending my letters by Captain Jordan in the Galatea as he was under Sail before I heard of his intended departure,⁴ I shall defer sending the Returns.—

Copy, UKLPR, PRO 30/55, Gen. Sir Guy Carleton Papers, vol. 11, fol. 1215. Addressed at foot of first page: "His Excellency/The Honb^{le}./Sir William Howe, K:B./General and Commander in Chief, &c^a. &c^a. &c^a." Docketed: "Exam:/Brig^{de}. Gen^l. Prevost/to/Sir William Howe/5th. June 1778./inclosing Monthly Returns/relative to the intended invasion/of the province & the defence/he proposes to make &c." Notation on docketing sheet: "N^o. 16."

1. In his letter to Howe of 3 June, East Florida Gov. Patrick Tonyn estimated the invasion force to be 2,840 men, including 40 Catawba Indians. He added that "Six Gallies" then moored at "Darien in the Altamaha" accompanied the American expedition. UKLPR, PRO 30/55, Gen. Sir Guy Carleton Papers, vol. 11, fol. 1210.

2. The East Florida Rangers, commanded by Lt. Col. Thomas Brown. Prevost, Gov. Tonyn, and Brown were involved in a controversy over Tonyn's having commissioned Brown a lieutenant colonel, which meant he outranked most of the British regular army officers in the province, particularly Augustine Prevost's brother, Maj. James Marcus Prevost, whom Augustine Prevost commends later in this letter. James Prevost held a commission as major in the 60th Regiment of Foot (Royal Americans), but enjoyed the rank of lieutenant colonel while in North America. As a result, according to one historian, "General Prevost constantly denigrated the achievements of the East Florida Rangers, and he continued to question the legality of Brown's commission from Governor Tonyn." Searcy, The Georgia-Florida Contest, 1776-1778, p. 150.

3. The East Florida Provincial naval force, hastily assembled after the Americans captured H.M. armed brig Hinchinbrook and East Florida Provincial armed sloop Rebecca on 18 Apr., consisted of East Florida Provincial armed ship Germain and two brigs that had been converted into galleys Dreadnought and Thunderer. In an earlier letter to Sir William Howe of 16 May, Prevost confidently asserted he could turn back the American invasion if it came by land, "if by Water the Armament being ready I am not able to judge what Obstructions they may meet." UKLPR, PRO 30/55, Gen. Sir Guy Carleton Papers, vol. 10, fol. 1179.

4. Tonyn also reported in his letter to Howe of 3 June H.M. frigate Galatea, Capt. Thomas Jordan, commander, had lost its rudder and had sailed directly for New York. UKLPR, PRO 30/55, Gen. Sir Guy Carleton Papers, vol. 11, fol. 1210. Galatea's crew used "a Spare Topmast" to steer the ship. Journal of H.M. frigate Galatea, 3 June, UKLPR, Adm. 51/4197.

MINUTES OF THE GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL OF WEST FLORIDA

[Extract]

At a Council Held in the Council Chamber at Pensacola on Saturday the 6th. day of June 1778.

. . . His Excellency¹ then laid before the board a letter which he had received from the Officers of His Majestys Sloop of War *Sylph*² now stationed in the River Mississippi praying for an Encouragement of Lands on which he desired their Advice.

The Board advised that the Consideration of the said letter be postponed Untill the Sylphs Return from the Mississippi—

Thomas Meaton Master of Col. Stuarts³ Sloop Christianna who arrived here last Night from Mobile having brought Some Intelligence respecting the Rebel Batteaus being still on that Coast was called before the Board and gave the following Information Upon Oath—

Information of Thomas Meaton Master of the Honorable Colonel Stuarts Armed Sloop Christiana taken at Pensacola on Saturday the 6th. day of June 1778 before His Excellency the Governor in Council—

This informant Saith that he left Mobile Point on Wednesday last the 3rd. Instant and that on thursday the 4th. at 10 O'Clock in the morning the Wind being Easterly and his Vessel bearing E.S.E. about four Leauges and a half from Mobile point he saw three Batteaus two of which were Schooner Rigged that they Appeared to be full of men were Rowing up due East with an intent (as he Supposed) of Getting to Windward of His said Sloop that he took them to be some of these Rebel Batteaus who have lately infested those parts—That these Batteaus were Scarcely more than half a Leauge to Windward of him—That they Continued in Sight till four OClock that afternoon—That he could see the men in the Batteaus rowing very Plain but cannot ascertain their Numbers and farther saith not.—

Sworn in the Council Chamber this 6th.

June 1778 before His Excellency in Council }
Attest Rich^d. Combauld D: C Conci⁴ }

His Excellency then desired the Opinion of the Board What steps should be Pursued in Consequence of this Intelligance—The Board Recommended that the sloop John and Peter Charles Roberts Master Mounting Six Carriage Guns and Eight or ten Swivils be Immediately sent Off to look after these Batteaus and also to go into Mobile Bay and Bring Round to this Place under her Convoy the two Merchants Briggs now lying in that Bay Whereupon M^r. Charles Roberts being sent for came into Council and Informed the Board that he was very Willing to go Upon the Service Provided he had the Permission of His owner at this Place and also Represented that he had but four hands on Board his Sloop who Were all Sick the Board therefore advised that M^r. John Miller Merchant and Owner of the said Sloop be sent for to Know the Terms on which he will hire his said Sloop to Government in Case of need and that a letter be Wrote to Captain Williams of the Active Frigate⁵ by the Clerk of the Council Requesting the assistance of Such Seamen from his Ship as may be Necessary to Navigate the said Sloop John & Peter in which Case the Commanding Officer of the Troops is to be applied to for a Serjeant Corporal and Eighteen Men from this Garrison to on Board the said Sloop and Assist in her Defence which being agreed to by his Excellency The following letter was Wrote by the Clerk of the Council to Captain Williams— . . .

And then the Board Adjourned to 6 o'clock in the Evening to Know Capt. Williams's Answer and to Determine what further steps may be Necessary to be adopted upon the Present Occasion—

At a Council held in the Council Chamber at Pensacola on Saturday
the 6th. day of June 1778 6 O'Clock PM

Present

His Excellency the Governor Informed the Board that he had received a Message from Captain Williams of the Active Frigate Acquainting him (in Answer to this mornings Application) that he had a Number of men Sick had sent Twelve onboard the Armed Schooner Florida and therefore could not Spare any more than twelve men whom he would Immediately Order on Board the Sloop John and Peter to go on the Service Required and farther desired to know what time they would be Absent that Provisions might be sent On Board Accordingly—The Board thereupon Recommended to his Excellency that Captain Williams be Informed that a Months Provisions it is thought will be Sufficient—M^r. John Miller Merchant owner of the said Sloop John and Peter who had been sent for to Attend the Board in the morning but chanced to be at that time from home now attending was called into Council and it being Demanded of him if he was Willing to hire his Sloop to Government for the Service required assured His Excellency and the Board that if the Service was but for a few Days he should make [no] charge at all for her but if they were desirous to take her into the Service for a length of time his Terms were Ninety pounds Sterling Per Month and then M^r. Miller Withdrew.—

His Excellency then Acquainted the Board that having Applied to the Commanding Officer of the Troops, L^t. Col. Stiell—⁶ this Gentleman had very chearfully promised that the Party Required Viz^t. a Serjeant Corporal and Eighteen men should be put on board the said Sloop with their Provisions Rum &c^a. that night or by day light the Next Morning—

M^r. Charles Roberts the Master of the John and Peter—being then sent for His Excellency gave him the following Instructions in Writing under his Hand and Seal at Arms—

Instructions to M^r. Charles Roberts Master of the Sloop John and Peter—

It being found Necessary for the Defence and Security of the Province to take the Sloop John and Peter whereof you are Master into the Service of Government. You will Receive on Board your said Sloop Twelve Seamen from His Majestys Ship Active, lent to Navigate your Vessel and a Serjeant Corporal and Eighteen Men to assist in fighting your said Sloop, You are to proceed Immediately towards the point of Mobbille and endeavor to Intercept take and Destroy the Rebel Boats that have lately infested that Coast or any other you can meet with and for so doing this shall be your Sufficient Warrant and Authority

Should you find Upon your Arrival at Mobbille point that the Rebel Boats have gone from the Coast and cannot be come up with you will then Remain within the point of Mobbille to Guard that Bay and Coast not exceeding fourteen days and take under your Convoy the two Briggs or any other Vessels laying in that Bay coming to the Eastward if they are Ready to Seal and convoy them to the Bar of Pensacola and then Return with your Vessel to this Harbour to Receive further Orders—

Given under my hand and Seal at Arms at Pensacola this 6th. day of June 1778 and in the Eighteenth year of His Majestys Reign—

severall differant persons a Charracter, that she was a verry dull Sailor one in particular who belongs to the Ship *Oliver Cromwell*² that took her³ & is now mate of one of her Prizes in Boston who declard here he would not go in her as a Privateer as she could not come up nor run away from any thing—

But as Capⁿ: Hardy⁴ has taken the Vessell. I will take the Part mentioned provided it does not come to more than the agreement which was One thousand pounds. as I have great confidence in the man knowing him to be a good honest & Brave fellow, I am Satisfied he will man her as soon as any man whatever. I am inform'd that M^r: Brewster⁵ has got a number of men at Middletown some of which I believe has satt out for Boston—

I expect him here in a day or two when their is severall here will enter as their has severall apply'd to me I do not think their will be any difficulty in gett^g: them My Father goes to Boston in a few days by whom I will send you the money & you'll please send me a Bill of Sale I dont know but I could help you off with a small part more should you now hold more than you incline to keep—please send me a Line by next Post Ill return you an answer—h^g: noth^g: material to add remain with esteem [&c.]

NEW-YORK, June 8.

Two Days after Capt. Morrison's Engagement with the Rebel Privateer, as mentioned in our last,¹ he fell in with his Majesty's Ship the Thames, Capt. Holloway,² who learning the distressed Situation of the Minerva's Crew, humanely sent his Surgeon and the Surgeon's Mate to the Assistance of the languishing Sufferers.

Mr. Morrison and his Friends beg Leave, in a public Manner, to express the grateful Sense they entertain of Capt. Holloway's generous Assistance.

The Minerva was bound for Halifax and Quebec; she sailed from St. Kitts the 2d ult. with the homeward-bound West-India Fleet, under Convoy of his Majesty's Ship Yarmouth,³ from which she parted the 5th; but being greatly damaged in the above mentioned Action. Capt. Morrison stood for the Delaware, and on the 27th, off Cape May, he was attacked by two Rebel Row-Gallies, whom he obliged to sheer off, after which he proceeded to this Port.

In the Beginning of the Engagement with the Rebel Privateer, Mr. Smith, Mate of the Minerva, was badly wounded, notwithstanding which, he refused to quit the Deck, and behaved, during the Action, with the greatest Gallantry and Resolution.

Wednesday last was sent in here by his Majesty's Ship Experiment, Sir James Wallace, Commander, the Wexford Privateer, of 16 Six Pounders, and 113 Men, Fletcher, Master, from Newbury Port.⁴ Before she fell in with the Experiment, she had taken the Sally, Capt. Innes, from Glasgow for this Port, after an obstinate Engagement of seven Glasses, in which the Rebels had two Men killed and six wounded, among the latter is the Captain.⁵ Both the Sally's Mates, and all her Seamen, only two of whom are wounded, were re-taken in the Privateer; which, to avoid being captured, when chased by the Experiment, threw all her Guns overboard, and cut down her Gunwales.

An Account of the Arrival and sailing of some Vessels from Boston Harbour since the 22d of April last.

April 22d, Arrived, Capt. Nicholson, in a Brig from Cape-Nichola.

24th, Sailed, the Privateer Brig Speedwell, of 10 Guns.⁶

A Sloop from Baltimore for Martinico, with Tobacco, by the Letter of Marque Sloop General Howe.²⁴

Schooner Eagle, James Ross, Master, from Surinham for Boston, with Molasses; and the Sloop Adventure, [Philip] Chamberlain, Master, from James's River, in Virginia, for St. Eustatia with 51 Hogsheads and 4 Barrels Tobacco; the former taken the 22d of May, and the latter the 24th of the same Month, by the Privateer Brig Favourite Betsey, Capt. Squires,²⁵ of this Port, who a few Days before took and sent into Bermuda, a Sloop from South-Carolina, loaded with Rice.

Brig Harkeman with Horses for Santa Croix, from New-Haven; Sloop Nancy, with Tobacco, from Virginia for France; a French Brig called the Hope, with Salt; and a retaken Snow from Montserrat, by the Otter's Tender, commanded by Lieut. Stanly.²⁶

1. For more on the engagement between the letter of marque ship Minerva, commanded by Capt. Edward Morrison, and an unidentified American privateer brig, see The New-York Gazette; and the Weekly Mercury, 1 June, above.

2. H.M. frigate Thames, Capt. Tyringham Howe, commander.

3. H.M.S. Yarmouth, Capt. Nicholas Vincent, commander.

4. Massachusetts privateer brigantine Wexford, Capt. John Fletcher, owned by Nathaniel Tracy and others, of Newburyport, Mass. Allen, Massachusetts Privateers of the Revolution, 325.

5. Brig Sally, George Innis, master, 170 tons burthen, built in Scotland in 1773, owned by A. Anderson. The Independent Chronicle and the Universal Advertiser (Boston), 21 May 1778; Lloyd's Register of Ships 1777-78. Seven glasses were three and one-half hours.

6. Massachusetts privateer brigantine Speedwell, Capt. Jonathan Greely.

7. On the capture of the ship Lovely Lass, Andrew Waid, master, by the Connecticut privateer sloops American Revenue and Revenge, see The Connecticut Gazette; and the Universal Intelligencer, 8 May, in NDAR 12: 297-98.

8. Massachusetts privateer ship Cumberland, Capt. James Collins, mounting 20 guns with a crew of 180 men, owned by Paul Dudley Sargent and others, of Boston. Allen, Massachusetts Privateers of the Revolution, 106. Cumberland's prize was the ship Layton, Robert Johnson, master, 250 tons burthen, built in Britain in 1764 and repaired in 1774, owned by G. Burton. Layton carried six 4-pounders and four 3-pounders. It was laden with coal and "a few goods" and was on a voyage from Newcastle, England, to New York. The Independent Chronicle and the Universal Advertiser (Boston), 7 and 21 May; Lloyd's Register of Ships, 1777-78.

9. Continental brig Resistance, its commander, Capt. Samuel Chew, had been killed on 4 Mar. 1778 in an engagement between Resistance and H.M. packet Grenville.

10. On 4 May, The Boston-Gazette, and Country Journal reported the return to Boston of a flag of truce vessel from Halifax "with a Number of Persons who had been Prisoners."

11. Lonsdale was a former British transport ship that had been captured by the Massachusetts Navy brigantine Tyrannicide in Apr. 1777. NDAR 8: 750, 818-19.

12. The vessel arriving from the Demerara River in Guyana has not been further identified. On 7 May, the Boston Independent Chronicle reported the arrival on 4 May of a "French Letter of Marque Ship of 20 Guns, laden with dry Goods, &c."

13. Undoubtedly the French Navy frigate Nymphe, Lieutenant de vaisseau Nicolas-Antoine, Chevalier de Beaudot de Sainneville, commander.

14. This ship was the Continental Navy frigate Queen of France (formerly Brune), Capt. John Green, commander, which had arrived at Cape Ann, Mass., about 2 May.

15. Massachusetts Navy brigantine Tyrannicide, Capt. Jonathan Haraden, commander.

16. Amphitrite, Nicolas Fautrel, master.

17. For more on Snow Swift, William Pearce, master, which had been captured by the Massachusetts Navy brigantine Tyrannicide, see Libels Filed in the Massachusetts Maritime Court of the Middle District, 14 May, in NDAR 12: 350–52.

18. On the capture of ship Lady Gage, Joseph Royal Loring, master, by the Massachusetts privateer ship Cumberland, see NDAR 11: 159, 842.

19. This was presumably the Continental Navy brigantine General Gates, Capt. John Skimmer, commander, which the observer confused with the Massachusetts privateer brigantine Angelica, Capt. William Dennis. 20. Continental Navy frigate Deane, Capt. Samuel Nicholson, commander.

21. Sloop Hazard, R. Le Coq, master, 50 tons burthen, built in Britain, and owned by the Captain & Co. Lloyd's Register of Ships, 1777–78; for more on the capture, see The New-Jersey Gazette, 27 May, in NDAR 12: 467.

22. On the capture of schooner General Scott by H.M. frigate Ariel, see Journal of H.M. frigate Ariel, 25 May, in NDAR 12: 450–51.

23. Sloop Black Joke, whose master is identified in Howe's Prize List as G. Shedwick and in the High Court of Admiralty records as Gear Chadwick, was a Virginia vessel owned by Thomas Smith & Co. It was taken while en route to Virginia from Cape François. Howe's Prize List, 30 Oct. 1778, UKLPR, Adm. 1/488, fols. 484–90; H.C.A. 32/282/19.

24. Sloop General Howe, Capt. John Ceary. UKLPR, C.O. 5/1109, fol. 109. The modernized spelling of Ceary is Carey. The prize was sloop Delight, David Porter, master. UKLPR, H.C.A. 32/304/9.

25. In the records of the High Court of Admiralty, his name is given as Daniel Squier.

26. The tender to H.M. sloop Otter, Lt. John Wright, acting commander, was the brig Dunmore. As the lieutenant of Otter, John Wright was in command because Capt. Matthew Squire was ashore sick. "Stanly" was presumably a midshipman or master's mate.

1. The loan of cannon was in response to the state's delegation in Congress, who on 11 May wrote Gov. Thomas Johnson Jr.: "General Washington at this time stands in need of heavy Cannon, for the further Defence of the North River and the necessity of being immediately supplied with at least five pieces, has induced Congress to apply to our State, for such Cannon as can be spared either on Loan or purchase, at the Election of the General Assembly. Under the circumstances of this case, and knowing the necessity, we cannot suppose the General Assembly (if you have not power already) can have any objection against granting the request of Congress. If you should lend the Cannon, Mr Hughes who has now contracted with Congress for a considerable number, will be directed to send to Annapolis or such place as you may direct, the like number and weight of metal, with those that shall be lent by the state." THOMAS SMITH TO WILLIAM LEE

Virginia Williamsburg 8^h June 1778

On the suggestion of William Aylett Esq^r late agent for the State, I did myself the pleasure of writing to you the 16^h December last since which I have not been Favor'd with any of yours This comes ⚓ the Brigantine Liberty, James Gray Commander with Invoice & Bill Loading for 110 Hhds Tobacco to your Address, which be pleased to dispose of yourself, or put it into such hands as are proper for the disposal, the Sales with all ~~other~~ incidental charges against the Vessel I wished to be Favor'd wth. on her return, but I would by no means be understood to hurry the Sales of the Cargo if time and other circumstances respecting our Credit would make it ~~desirable~~ a retention advisable—

As this Vessel is neither well Armed or Maned, and is not a fast Sailor, I would prefer your sending her back as soon as possible with a Load of Salt only, unless you find a difficulty in procuring more proper vessels to bring the different Articles that have been wrote for, in that case, you will be pleased to put on Board her, part of the Cannon, part of the several sorts of paper ordered, and the rest of her Loading to be Salt. The Inclosed Schemes with some additions are intended to govern you with respect to the Goods necessary to be Shiped as Opportunities avail,¹

I hope for the Interest of this State you will be good enough not to let Slip any Opportunity by which you can Serve us and particularly in the Shipping the Goods as ⚓ the Schemes giving us advising as of the same. Custom has prevailed, and as such mak^s it necessary ~~first~~ to advance the Master & Seamen of Vessels a certain Sum of Money at Port therefore I have Inclosed A Copy of the terms on Which Captain Gray and his Crew are Shiped, in conformity to which please to make the Advance&&I am [&c.]

War Office [Boston] June. 9th. 1778.

The foregoing is a Copy of our last,¹ since which, we have y^r: favour by y^r: W: H² of the 26th. April—³ We have this day conversed with your good father, upon the Advance you have so generously made us; & the means of repaying it, as soon as possible; that your Credit may not suffer by the Obligation laid upon this Board, We have even offered your Father the current Cash; in case he might know any method of investing it immediately; or we should be very happy in answering any bill you should think fit to draw upon us here; and you may depend upon it, that should nothing earlier or better offer before, we will exert ourselves to the utmost to collect proper Cargoes in the fall, to discharge the debt, & to make you all the Compensation in our Power, for this involuntary delay.—

We are not altogether without hopes that Cap^t Lambert⁴ in the Massachusetts may have been fortunate enough to have sent you in a good Prize ‘eer this, but be this as it may, we pledge the Credit of the State for as early a Reimbursement as Possible.—We are Gent^l: with a due Sence of your favours—& readiness to acquit ourselves to y^r: Satisfaction [&c.]

SAMUEL PHILLIPS SAVAGE, PRESIDENT OF MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO PENET, D’ACOSTA FRÈRES & CO.

[Extract]

Gentlemen—

[War Office, Boston, 8 or 9 June 1778]¹

Our last was 11th. February,² to which we refer, Since w^{ch}. we have your several favors, of 12th. Novem^r: 26th. Feb^y. & 16th: March, in which you advise us, that the *Penet*³ proved bad, and was condemn’d, as unfit for repair, That you had purchased an other Vessell, which you was lading with a well assorted Cargo, and that she would soon Sail; Her not appearing at this date makes us fearful she has fallen into the Enemy’s hands.—⁴

We are glad to hear of Cap^t Chapman’s Arrival,⁵ and hope soon to have the additional Pleasure of hearing that our two Ships, (the *Grue*⁶ & the *Union*⁷) laden with Masts &c. are safe with you—The Ship *Adams*⁸ and Brig *Favorite*⁹ for S^o. Carolina and Nants saild in February last, The latter of which was Captur’d within an hours sail of Charlestown, the former we hope will be in Nants before this reaches you.—

In yours of the 26th. February, you observe That your advances for us have been so large, that the Balance in your favour will be 65,000 Livres, exclusive of the Cargo shipping by Cap^t Harris—¹⁰ That there is such a Balance on your Books, we make no doubt, but how it should arise, we are at a loss to conceive, as upon the Strictest review of our Books, taking into the Account, the Moneys paid M^r: Pliarne, it appears that our remittances have considerably exceeded our importations, Altho we shall at all times do our utmost to discharge any Balance that may be against us, yet when we recollect our Contract made with your much lamented M^r: Pliarne,¹¹ we feel ourselves less anxious on that score, as the present Balance, however large, is but a small part of the advances there Stipulated.—

Our being unacquainted with the State of your Marketts, & totally in the dark, as to the sales of the several Vessells & Cargoes in your hands, may have led us into this supposed error. We are therefore to request, that in future, you would forward our accounts duely made up, each half year, by which method all misconceptions, or misapprehensions of the State of our affairs may be avoided.—

Considering the difficultys & disadvantages with which we are at present surrounded, depriv'd of our Staple & other Grand articles of Export, Maintaining an unequal contest with the most Potant & Formedable power in Europe, & but just emerging from Subordination & Vassalage, to Independence & Liberty, we flatter ourselves that we have done more than could have been reasonably expected.—You may be assured, that we shall be unremitted in our Exertions to render our Correspondance & Connections mutually beneficial, of which the present opening prospect, of a free & unembarras'd Commerce, gives us the most pleasing expectation.— . . .

CAPTAIN JOHN FISK, MASSACHUSETTS NAVY, TO SAMUEL PHILLIPS SAVAGE, PRESIDENT OF MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR

Sir

This moment I received your favor of this day wherein you inform me of Capt. Sampsons¹ ill state of health which renders him unfit to proceed on a cruise in the Brig^t Hazard. I am sincerely obli^d to your Honours, for your good opinnion of me, but am sorry to inform you that it will not be for intrest. I shall ever take the Command of any arm^d. Ship, but purposly to serve my Country—the Brig^t Hazard is a very good Vesel to take prizes for gain but on the other hand she must run from every thing. I think not to go to sea untill I can git a Ship that is able² to make some defence against a British frigate, and if my Country Shall have such a ship and cannot find a better man to Command her I shall allways be ready to enter the service. I Am Your Honours [&c.]

THE ROYAL AMERICAN GAZETTE (NEW YORK), TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1778

NEW-YORK, June 9.¹

On Wednesday last the rebel schooner Wild Cat,² of 14 swivels and 40 men, came over from Connecticut, to Oyster-Bay, Long-Island, landed 14 of her crew, who shot several sheep, but a number of inhabitants appearing in arms, to oppose their depredations, they thought it prudent to make off. This vessel, by having a great number of oars, takes the advantage of every calm, to cross over the Sound, in order to pillage the loyalists on Long-Island.

1. Because of a typesetting error, the banner head reads “Tuesday, June 8.” Tuesday was 9 June.

2. Elsewhere The Royal American Gazette identifies Wild Cat as a galley. See Royal American Gazette, 30 June, below.

DON BERNARDO DE GÁLVEZ, GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA, TO DON DIEGO JOSEF NAVARRO, GOVERNOR OF CUBA

Muí Señor mío:

El 22. . del mes pasado tube noticia como el Socorro q^c pedí ã Vs. havia arrivado, ã la Valiza, y ya se halla todo el en esta Villa ã donde ha llegado Felizmente.¹

Si yo hubiera de dar ã Vs. todar las gracias ã que soí acrehedor por la prontitud con que me ha auxiliado, reduciria ã ellas todo mi Contento: el Rey se las dará ã Vs. por contribuir con tanta eficacia ã la Conservación de esta Colonia, y cubrirla del golpe q^c se proyectaba contra ella.

Desde que se supo q^c las embarcacionces, y tropa estaban en el Río, empezaron las cosas ã mudan de Semblante, y los Yngleses ã hacer patente un abatimiento nada Conforme ã su Character Orgullosos de insolente; cesaron las amenazas con q^c se producian en sus Conversaviones privadas y los Corsarios del lago, cuyo atrevimiento llegó ã el extremo de Cañonear nuestras Embarcaciones,² en el dia parece que procuran satisfacerme, y reconciliarse Conmigo, agasajando ã las mismas embarcaciones q^c antes hostilizaron, disculpandose con que las havian tenido por Americanas.

No obstante esto en Natches, y Manchak siguen con sus preparatibos tanto para ata[que] como para defensa, pero alli ignoran aunque ã mi me ha llegado un refuerzo, y es mui regular que así q^c tengan la noticia. cesen como los Corsarios del lago de incomodar, y hacer fuego como en el dia lo hacen, ã todas las Piraguas [Es] pañolas q^c suben, y bajan el Rio, adelantan[do] la desvergüenza hasta embiar ã decir q^c dentr[o] de poco vendrán ã hacernos una visita con las armas en la mano, cuyo recelo mediante el favor de Vs. ya há cesado de mi parte, sin que por esta Confianza deje de estar Con la vigilancia q^c es devida.

Vs. extraña y Con razon de que yo no le haya embiado el Plan de defensa, y espe-ro q^c Vs. me hará la justicia de creer que no ha sido por olvido, sino porque el local de este Pais, y Circunstancias no permiten formarlo de antemano.

Son tanto los puntos por donde esta Provincia puede ser atacada, y Son tantos tambien los modos como puede serlo, q^c és inutil hacer suposiciones: La variedad de Enemigos que la rodean entre Yngleses, y naciones Yndias cada una con su dinstinto modo, de hacer las Guerra, y la poquedad de mi Guarnicion en una Plaza sin mural-las, Castillo ni Ciudadela. no dejan advitrio para formar otro Plan q^c el de estar alerta, y si es dable salir â los Enemigos al encuentro; Para esto tengo establecidos puestos y vigias â larga distancia de esta Ciudad en todos los parages por donde segun los practicos del pais puedo temer una imbasion, â fin de que me den la mas pronta noticia de lo que ocurra, y no ser sorprendidos q^c és lo mas q^c ay que temer en un Pais abierto como este, y tener tpõ para salir â recibir como he dicho â los Enemigos, esperarles en los desfiladores, y aprovecharme de quanto el ante, la naturaleza del terreno, y particularmente la del Sitio en que me halla den de si, para multiplicar los estorvos, haciendo abatidas de arboles, formando cortaduras, y Si el Rio está alto romper las leveás ò digues dél para inundar la tierras.

Mis preparativos se reducen â tener bien municionada, no solo la tropa q^c existe esta Plaza, sin[o] todas las Milicias de la Costa, y prontas â reunirse al primer aviso donde la necesidad lo pida, monta[r] toda la Artilleria, y seis cañones de bronce sobre sus trenes de Campaña con sus municiones competentes, y por Consiguiente pronto todo â servir en el instante, esto és en caso de ser atacado por los Lagos, ò por tierra, y si fuese por el Rio fundo más esperanzas en las dos embarcaciones de Guerra, q^c me quedan, en la Galeota q^c tengo concluida, y en las baterias que tambien hé formado â la orilla del Rio.

El numero de fuerzas con que me hallo, se espresa en los estados adjuntos q^c incluyo para conocimiento de Vs. â quien pido que in el dia viva ya sin el mayor Cuidado, por lo q^c respeta â esta Provincia, pues ya con el auxilio recibido [torn] considero en estado de atender mas bien que antes â su defensa, cuya confianza no debe Vs. alterar aunque le participe q^c pocos dias antes de haver llegado el refuerzo â este Rio, pasaron cinco pequeñas embarcaciones por el Lago Pontchartrin, y llebaron â Manchak otro de doscientos hombres de tropa reglada sin contar un pequeño piquete de Rangers ò Cazadores, y una gran porcion de Yndios que debe reunirseles en el citado Puesto. Faltaria â mi reconocimiento si antes de concluir esta carta no repitiese â Vs. las gracias que le debo no solo por el auxilio que me ha dado, sino tambien por la eleccion de la tropa q^c se ha servido embiarme, y los dignos Ofiziliales que la mandan, â quienes como mas inmediatos provaré mi gratitud con hacer de ellos la estimacion, y confirnza q^c se merecen, Dios Guê [&c.]

[Translation]

My Dear Sir:

I received news on 22 May ultimo of the arrival at Baliza of the reinforcements I requested from Your Lordship.¹

If I were to offer you all the thanks you merit for the promptness with which your help arrived I fear I would write of nothing else. The King will surely offer you his for contributing so efficiently to the preservation of this colony and for safeguarding it from the blow that was planned against it.

Things began to change as soon as it was known that the troops and vessels were in the river; the English, typically haughty and insolent in character, quickly altered their way of acting. They ceased making threats during private conversations and reined in the privateers on the lake, whose audacity had gone to the extreme of cannonading our vessels.² At present, it appears they want to mollify and reconcile themselves with me, treating kindly the same vessels they formerly harassed while offering us apologies on the grounds that they mistook our vessels for American ones.

This is not the case in Natchez or Manchac where their preparations are as much for attack as for defense. But there they are ignorant of my having received reinforcements and it is probable that as soon as they receive the news, they, like the privateers of the lake, will cease to trouble and to fire on Spanish pirogues as they make their way up and down the river at present. The English were so bold as to send word that they, fully armed, would soon pay us a visit, fears of which on my part have subsided as a result of your favor. Nevertheless, I continue to maintain a proper vigilance.

With good reason you wonder why I have not sent you the plan of defense. Please know I have not forgotten it but rather the circumstances and terrain of this country have not allowed me to formulate such a plan.

There are so many weak points from which this province can be attacked and so many ways to attack it that it is useless to make suppositions. The various enemies that surround it, including the English and the Indian nations each with a distinct way of waging war, and the small numbers of my garrison in a town without bulwarks, a castle, or blockhouse, leave little room to formulate a plan besides that of being alert and, if necessary, meeting the enemy directly. On the advice of those who know this country, I have established watch posts and sentinels outside the city everywhere we are vulnerable. They will provide me early warning of any incursions, which is my biggest fear in an open country such as this one. This measure will allow us to engage the enemy by waiting for them in narrow passages and to take advantage of the terrain, particularly in my present location, in order to improve it with obstacles, fell trees, form ditches and parapets, and if the river is high, break the levee to flood the ground.

My preparations include having well armed not only the troops in town but also the militia along the coast who are to be ready to join our forces at a moment's notice, mounting all the artillery and six bronze cannon on field carriages with sufficient ammunition. Everything will be ready in case of an attack by land or by way of the lake. Should it be an attack by way of the river, I am staking my hopes on the two warships I have remaining, in the galiot that was recently completed, and in batteries I have created along the river's banks.

I am enclosing a return of the forces at my disposal for your information. I ask that you not worry about the state of this province and continue to trust its safekeeping to me since with your help I find myself in a much better position to defend it. Still, I must inform you that a few days before the reinforcements arrived, five small vessels sailed through Lake Pontchartrain carrying a detachment of two hundred regulars to Manchac. A force of rangers, or hunters, and a large number of Indians will likely rendezvous with them at that fort. Before concluding this letter, let me once again express my appreciation for the support you have provided, for the quality of the troops you have sent, and for the officers who command them, who, being closer in rank, shall be recipients of my gratitude by my showing them the high esteem and confidence they deserve. May God protect [&c.]

New Orleans 9 of June 1778.

B^{do}. de Gálvez

P.S. the commander at the Baliza³ has just informed me that two English frigates that were anchored there have entered the southwest passage along with a fourteen-gun sloop; all three vessels are well-manned by troops and sailors and according to the news I have received, the English commander has orders from the governor of Pensacola to challenge us over the admission of the Americans in this province.⁴

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

Number 64.

Philadelphia

Sir,

June the 10th: 1778.

By the Cumberland Packet,¹ on the 31st: past, I received your Dispatches of the 25th: of March and 2^d: of April:² Respecting the Appointment of the Grenadier Company of Marines serving with this Army, and the Return of Mons^r de la Mothe Piquet³ with a part of the French Squadron he commanded, to Brest, the Remainder of that Squadron, with several American Store-Ships, having continued their Route for Boston and Chesapeake Bay.

On the 6th: Instant I was advised of the Arrival of the Trident with the King's Commissioners in the Delaware,⁴ the same Day; And of Rear Admiral Gambier,⁵ with the Store-Ships and Victuallers under his Convoy the 26th: past at New York. By that Opportunity I received your Dispatches of the 9th: 10th: 11th: and 21st: of March and 11th: of April;⁶ The Orders from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty of the 10th: of March, respecting the future Appointment of the Rear Admiral and the Store-Ships, and vigorous Prosecution of the War by Coasting Operations; Together with their Directions dated the 11th: of April relative to the conditional Detention of the Trident, dependent on the probable Stay of the Commissioners in this Country.

On the 28th: past the Isis, Emerald, Solebay, Richmond and Senegal joined me in this River from Chesapeake Bay;⁷ preparatory to their further Appointment conformable to the Tenor of my Instructions of the 21st: of March.⁸ The Greyhound being left off of the Capes of Virginia to bring Intelligence of the Arrival of the French Squadron I was then daily to expect, Captain Dickson⁹ intercepted a French Frigate-built Ship, mounting twenty-two twelve-pounders and carrying one hundred and fifty Men,¹⁰ with European Commodities from Bordeaux. The Number of Prisoners then assembled in the Greyhound, rendered it necessary for Captain Dickson to proceed for depositing them at New York. But I have not yet had Account that any of the Store-Ships which sailed from Europe with the French Squadron are arrived.

The Isis, as will be seen in the enclosed Return,¹¹ requires the same Assistance of Men, which has been necessary for the other two-decked Ships intended to compose the detached Squadron under Commodore Hotham, the *Preston*¹² excepted.

To procure the suitable Re-inforcement, an Embargo was laid on the Trade at New-York, and a general Impress of Seaman ordered in the Port; Wherefore if the Evacuation of this Town by a Retreat through the Jersies as now proposed, does not soon take place, I expect to be joined by the Commodore in the Preston with the Somerset and *S^t. Albans*¹³ off of the Entrance of the Delaware. But as the Naval Force then assembled would still be in no degree correspondent to the Appointment for the separate Service in the Secret Instructions directed;¹⁴ I cannot yet judge of the precise Time when the Armament may be ready to proceed according to the King's Intentions. And being unassisted by Advices of the Ability of the Enemy, in Opposition to which a due Provision is to be made, I am no better able to determine, for meeting their Lordships' Idea of the Force to be deemed adequate on that Occasion.

Concluding nevertheless that their Lordships will have framed their intended Disposition of the Ships of His Majesty's Fleet generally, in the persuasion that they may reckon upon having the Force assigned for the Secret Service in question, fixed to the particular Station, I mean (after the Commodore shall have put to Sea with the Armament from New-York) that the rest of the Ships of the stated Classes should be forwarded in Succession without Delay, for having the appointed Number completed with the greatest Dispatch.

Accounts, not properly authenticated, have been received that the Galatea and *Carysfort*¹⁵ are on their Return from the Southern Coasts to New-York, And that the Hinchinbrook (the Commander, Lieutenant Ellis,¹⁶ having been lost a short Time before in his Boat) together with an Armed Sloop¹⁷ fitted by Governor Tony'n's¹⁸ Direction, had been lately taken by the Enemy, in S^t. Mary's River. The Governor communicating to me his Belief that an Invasion was meditated upon East Florida, the Perseus and *Otter*¹⁹ were ordered directly to S^t. Augustine; Attended at the General's Request, by a Naval Victualler with a Supply of Provisions for the Garrison, which could not then be spared from the Stores of the Army.

The *Phenix*²⁰ being returned from Antigua, I shall be soon able to send off a Detachment of the Frigates ordered to Europe. Captain Botham,²¹ who commands the Renown, took that Opportunity to acquaint me with his Hopes of having the Ship in readiness to leave Antigua on his return also to this Coast, by the Commencement of this Month. But I have no Information from Vice Admiral Young,²² of his Intentions thereon. I am, with great Consideration, Sir, [&c.]

COLONEL ELIAS BOUDINOT TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL JOHN LAURENS, CONTINENTAL ARMY

M^r B—Compliments to Col^l Laurens & informs him that he would willingly consent to the enlargement & Exchange of all the Sea Prisoners under his Care, did not the Cruel & unprecedented Sufferings of the American Prisoners (of the same Class) on board the prison Ships in New York loudly contradict it, by calling for ample retaliation on those in our Power—¹ On M^r B's arrival at New York he found the Treatment of the Prisoners belonging to the land Service greatly altered from what was heard to have been the Case formerly, and most of them were in a comfortable Situation, but it was reported to him that the Sufferings of the Sea Prisoners were severe inhuman & intolerable—That altho' M^r Boudinot in the fall, had provided both Provisions & Cloaths for them, yet the Commodore would not allow either to be sent on Board to them, alledging that no Provisions should be allowed, but what were sent to his Commissary, and that the Cloaths being purchased in New York (tho' with Gen^l Howes leave) they could not be admitted on Board, without an order from the Admiral, who was at Philadelphia—² To prevent Misinformation, M^r Boudinot waited on the Commodore, who expressly confirmed the report as to the Provisions & Cloaths in its fullest Extent, altho' as a great Obligation and with difficulty, he finally consented to admit the Provisions—M^r B. solicited the admitting the Officers to their Parole, but was answered, that it could not be done to sea Prisoners—In a number of Letters he has rec^d. from those unhappy Men, their Sufferings are painted in such a Manner, as to shock humanity and move the most patient to indignation—The Prisoner Officers & men are confined to the Hold of the Ship, particularly after the Evening Gun, which in the warm weather, makes the air so pestilential, that they are dying at the rate of three or four of a day—Their Provision allowed them by the King is both scanty & bad, and many of them are naked for want of Cloathing—There Letters speak for themselves, and when you see them, you will conclude with me, that the so much famed british humanity & generosity, have been Vox & proteose virtue³

From this State Col^l Laurens will see the propriety of retaliation, when perhaps the Complaints of the Sufferer may be more powerfull than either the laws of Justice or humanity.

Sir

as I have a mind to Establish My Legion upon a Solid Condition,¹ I Don't think there is a Better Expedient for that purpose, then to associate all my people together, and to Detach often a Couple Dozens of them at Sundry times for to Go to Sea.

I have several prospect to Execute that project. the first, is to assure of my self of my Soldiers, By the advantage they'll perceive in the said Society, and as Every one of them Shall have a Share according to the monney they'll Lay to the mass in the attempt, that I want to make, I Don't Doubt But this will Engage them to Serve with Great deal more Zeal for the public Cause: for that purpose I want to purchase a Vessel, I understood, here Lays a Brigantine which is to be sold By orders of your Excellency.² I then Do Send M^r Baldesqui Bearer of this Letter, to Deal with the persons appointed for that matter. I hope Sir you will be Kind Enough to Befriend me in this project which I am Certain will Become most usefull for the unitate State.³

I will tell you more about my prospect. I do foresee that the Britons will necessarily be obliged one day, or other to Evacuate this Continent, at that time the marin[e]s will Surely be more usefull then the Land troops; my Soldiers must then be instructed, Soon, and be [Like] the Roman troops which were obliged to make their Service Every where.

The Vessel that I intend to have fitted, Shall at present be fitted out Like a privateer, But Calculated for to Carry a Great many things Necessary for the want of my Legion, which the Congress don't Chuse to Supply it with, Considering the Great Expenses that would occur upon the Number of my Soldiers.

if I am Lucky Enough to succeed in this first Expedition, I intend with the Benefit of it, to have a frigate Built, and then after, I'll try to do Some thing Better. I am most persauded that my Good intentions for your Contry will interest your Goodness for me. I am [&c.]

Resented by other officers because of his haughty attitude, he resigned as chief of cavalry in March 1778 when Congress approved his plan to raise an independent body of mounted troops. DAB. MARYLAND COUNCIL TO BRIGADIER GENERAL COUNT CASIMIR PULASKI, CONTINENTAL ARMY

Sir.

In Council Annapolis 10th June 1778.

M^r Baldesqui has been so obliging as to deliver your Letter and be the Bearer of this.¹ It is very desirable that the Brig at Baltimore should be employed,² but the Claim of her former Owner Cap^t Stone,³ has hitherto prevented any Thing being done with her, she wants expensive Repairs and, as he is prosecuting a Suit at Law, if he recovers the Vessel, the Repairs must go with her. The Assembly desirous of having the Matter settled on the same Principles of Justice as prevail between private Men, gave us special Powers for that End, but Cap^t Stone's Obstinacy or, at least, his Difference in Sentiment from us, has occasioned him to reject every Proposition we could make for a speedy Decision or eventual Provision. We wish to sell the Brig but, as we would not assure the Title, it is but right to apprise any Person who might be inclined to purchase, of her Circumstances, nor can we advise you, who must be a Stranger to our Rules of Property, to invest your Money in a Dispute which will at least, give you much Trouble. General Count Pulaski's Defence of the Liberties of Mankind in general and his attaching himself specially to the Interests of America, intitles him to our attentive Regard and we should have been happy in having it in our Power to sell him the Brig without any Incumbrances on her; he will justly impute his Disappointment to the Cause we have intimated.— We are Sir &^{ca}.

CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT TO JOHN LANGDON

Navy Board Eastern department

Boston June 11. 1778

Sir

We have before us your favour of the 6th Instant We are Sorry you were reduced to the Necessity of taking the whole of the Warrant on your Loan office in Certificates the greatest difficulties we feel arise from the Want of Supplies of men we are kept so Short as to make the Execution of our Office quite disagreeable We received last Saturday from Congress 50,000 dollars but the demands upon us had Accumulated to Such a degree that it is already nearly expended without thinking of your wants Supposing they would be Supplied from your Loan Office we will however Send you ~~Ⓐ~~ post three thousand dollars which tho' not so much as you want is more than we can Spare without great Inconvenience you will please to Send us up by first Safe Conveyance ~~receipt for the money now Sent~~ & Seven thousand dollars in Certificates We have an Oportunity of Negotiating them We are Glad of the Arrival of Cloathing arms &c on public Account & hope there will be no want of them in future We have no news of Importance that can be relied on— We are with great esteem [&c.]

JOHN BRADFORD TO ROBERT MORRIS

Dear Sir,

Boston June 11th 1778

I'm favour'd with Yours under 25th May the Pacquet and three Letters which accompanied it, came very opportunely, as the navy Board¹ this very Day sends an Express for France,² I will see them put up with ye public Letters. & they will share their Fate, I can't think how Greens³ Letters should miss your Hands, hope you receiv'd them soon after you wrote. I find his Ship belongs to the public & a Bundle Rubbish she is.⁴ it would have been lucky could I have known your Pleasure respecting the Goods, as y^e Clothiers are in immediate Want of a Quantity of Oznabriggs, &c for y^e Troops & it grieves Me that the poor Soldiers should want necessary Covering, when we have it for them, but nothing shall be touch'd till I hear from You.

I shall follow your Instructions relative to y^e Ship *Henrietta*⁵ & hope to have her ready to obey your Orders. I hope the Next Post will bring Answers to my Letters respecting the Goods which have arriv'd in y^e *three Friends*⁶—the Gentlemen seem rather to be in a hurry for their Freight which they tell me is to be paid by Bills of Exchange. Nothing new turns up, excepting ye Arrival of a Ship from France, the last Week with Goods from Portsmouth I hope with You that spirited Measures may be pursued in our Naval Department, it's much needed, I wish, with you that you may be restor'd to your pleasant City—⁷ yours &c

DEPOSITION OF CAPTAIN AMOS HILTON

The Deposition of Amos Hilton Commander of the Schooner Hope from Jamaica bound & intended to Newport of lawful age testifies & says that being about half way between Block Island & the main some of the people acquainted me that two boats were rowing towards & looking with the Glass I found them to be two whale boats. they coming up and firing two swivel Guns at us, we striking to the two boats,¹ when I directly discovered another boat who came along Side of us in about half of an Hour before which time the two abovementioned boats had ordered the Schooner to the westward—

Question asked the Deponent by M^r Elisha Champlin—part owner of the last boat—Whether the Schooner could not have been taken by small arms?—Answer. yes.

Question asked the Deponent by Samuel Segar one of the owners of the last mentioned boat—How far off he thought the third boat was when he saw her first? Answer. between two & three miles.

Question by the abovementioned Champlain—Whether the third Boat put any hands on board the Schooner or not?—Answer I do suppose there was Question by Cap^t Brooks & Cap^t Griffin—Whether he surrendered his Vessel to these two Boats before he saw the third boat?—Answer. Yes.

Hartford County Ss Chatham [Conn.] 11th. June AD. 1778.

Personally appeared Amos Hilton commander of the Schooner Hope & made solemn Oath to the truth of the above written Deposition & Answers before me

Eben^r White Just^c Pac^s

The above Deposition was taken at the Desire & in presence of Cap^{ts} Griffin & Brooks as also M^r Champlain & M^r Segar owners of the boat called the third boat—The Deponent being about to set out on a journey to Salem in the State of the Massachusetts Bay where it is said he belong^d—

GOVERNOR WILLIAM GREENE OF RHODE ISLAND TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL OF CONNECTICUT

Sir,

Providence June 12th 1778.—

At the Request of the Council of War I now make Application to your Excellency for the Loan of Eight Continental Commissions or Letters of Marque and Reprisal.—

The Ports of this State being blocked up by the Enemy the Secretary informs me that he thought he had a sufficient Number for the Summer.—But the Success that our small Cruizers have met with in the Sound¹ hath induced so many Persons to fit out armed Boats that all the Commissions have been taken up and several more are now wanted.—As Part of the Shores of this State lie most conveniently for annoying the Enemy your Compliance with this Request will be serving the common Cause as well as oblige this State, and Your Excellency's [&c.]

Copy, R-Ar, Letters from the Governor, vol. 3 (1778–1779), p. 39. Addressed at foot: "Gov^r Trumbull." Docketed: "Letter to Gov^r Trumbull/for Commissions of Letters/of Marque & Reprisal/June 12th 1778."

DIARY OF CAPTAIN FREDERICK MACKENZIE, BRITISH ARMY

[Newport. Rhode Island]

12th June—Very fine weather. Wind S.

The Pigot Galley¹ gave chase out of Seconnet² this Morning to a Snow which appeared to be coming in there, and about 7 o'Clock she struck without resistance. She was brought round into the harbour this Evening,³ and proves to be a French vessel from Bourdeaux to Bedford, laden with dry goods and Salt. She mistook the Seconet passage for Bedford.⁴

Mackenzie, Diary 1: 300.

1. H.M. armed galley Pigot, Lt. Henry Edwyn Stanhope, commander.

2. Sakonnet Passage.

3. H.M. frigate Cerberus and the armed boats of the fleet assisted in escorting the French snow to Newport. Journal of H.M. frigate Flora, UKLPR, Adm. 51/360, fol. 159.

THE CONNECTICUT GAZETTE; AND THE UNIVERSAL INTELLIGENCER

FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1778

NEW-LONDON, June 12.

On Monday Capt. Ebenezer Dayton, in an armed Boat,¹ carried three Prizes (Coasters) into New Haven, which he took near Fire-Island Inlet, the South Side of Long-Island.

Last Sabbath, a Schooner² taken near Block-Island by two Whaleboats from Connecticut-River,³ was sent in. She was from Jamaica, laden with Rum, Sugar and Coffee, and it's said belongs to Mr. Lopez,⁴ late of Newport; the Schooner four Days before her Arrival parted with a large Jamaica Fleet, bound to England, under Convoy of a 40 and a 20 Gun Ship.

The AMERICAN REVENUE⁵ and REVENGE⁶ Privateers belonging to this Port are arrived at Bedford⁷ their Crews being taken down with the Small Pox.—They took a Snow out of the above Fleet, which they ordered into Boston.

Capt. ROLAND, in a Sloop from this Port, is taken and carried into Antigua.

1. Dayton commanded the Connecticut privateer boat Suffolk. The prizes were likely Dispatch, Jane, and Polly. See Libels Filed in Connecticut Maritime Court, 17 June, below.

2. Schooner Hope, 60 tons burthen, Amos Hilton, master, which was captured on 7 June near Point Judith, Rhode Island See Deposition of Captain Amos Hilton, 11 June, above, and Deposition of Jacob Allen, 24 June, below.

3. Connecticut privateer armed boats Fessey, Capt. Joshua Griffith, and Chatham, Capt. David Brooks.

4. Aaron Lopez.

5. Connecticut privateer sloop American Revenue, Capt. Samuel Champlin Jr.

6. Connecticut privateer sloop Revenge, Capt. Joseph Conkling.

7. That is, New Bedford, Massachusetts.

FRANCIS LEWIS TO JOHN LANGDON

Dear Sir

York Town [Pa.] 12 June 1778.

Don Juan d Miralles a Spanish Gentleman of fortune who lately arrived at Ch^s Town S^o. Carolina from y^c Havanna, had at Ch^s Town procured a ship laden with near 1200 Casks of Rice to be purchased for him and sent for Cadiz.—

Don Miralles is now in this Town & yesterday receiv'd a letter from his Agent at Ch^s. Town advis^g that his ship was taken by a British ship of War, retaken by a privateer belonging to one of the Eastern States on this Continent:¹ The ship is called the Nuestra Señora Del Carmen, Don Francisco Pruna Mas^r., sail'd from Ch^a. Town 27th. March last, She had a Spanish Register, and cleared as from the Havanna directly for Cadiz, for a covering, in case She was examined by a british armed Vessel.

As it is probable this Vessel may be brought into some of the Eastern Ports, if within your district, I must desire you would enter a claim in behalf of said Don Juan D Miralles to both Vessel & Cargo, geting the salvage adjusted agreeable to y^c resolves of Congress. The expences shall be thankfully repaid you by, Sir, your very Hum^l Serv^t,

Fra: Lewis

SAMUEL AND ROBERT PURVIANCE TO JAMES LOVELL

Dear Sir

Baltimore 12 June 1778

We have received your Letter of the 8th & that directed to our Brother John, with the Packets for France, 8 in Number.¹ The first Set shall be forwarded by The Sloop America Captⁿ Harrison who sails tomorrow for Martinico.— The other Set shall forward By The Schooner Savage Captⁿ Geddes who will be ready to sail for same Place in a few days.— Both are very fast Sailing Vessels

The Packets you formerly sent to our Care was delivered to Captⁿ Murray of our Brigg Saratoga,² who sailed about two Weeks agoe. It was unlucky you did not send these Letters a few days sooner, as the Con^l Brigg Baltimore,³ and another Brigg which We are concerned in, sailed only last Monday for France.—Small Vessels are sailing for Martinico or Statia very frequently, but know of None that may be going for France shortly. We are Sir [&c.]

1. In his letter of 8 June, Lovell had requested that the Purviance brothers forward copies of a resolve of Congress of 5 May asking the American Commissioners in France to “use their best endeavours to procure the abolition” of the eleventh and twelfth articles of the Franco-American treaty of amity and commerce dealing with the duty-free status of molasses imported to America from the French West Indies and all American merchandise exported to those islands. JCC, 11: 460; articles eleven and twelve are on pp. 428–29. Lovell asked the Purviances to forward the resolves and Lovell’s letter to John Adams “either directly, or by the Islands, giving critical instructions to keep them from falling into the hands of the Enemy. They are of great importance, and were unluckily omitted in three packets which are gone.” DNA, PCC, item 79, vol. 1, p. 233 (M247, roll 105).

2. Maryland privateer brig Saratoga, Capt. Alexander Murray.

3. Continental packet brig Baltimore, Capt. Thomas Read, commander.

COURT-MARTIAL OF CAPTAIN JOHN MANLEY, CONTINENTAL NAVY

[Boston]Saturday 13th. June 1778

The Court after the Closest Inquiry and the Most Mature Consideration are of Opinion That no part of the Charge is Supported Against Cap^t. Manley¹ except that he was deficient in establishing a proper System of Signals previous to the Ships Sailing and during the Cruise² and also of Imprudence on 30th. of May 1777 in laying by for a large Ship of the Enemy to come down upon him before he had tryed her Sailing³ That the Court have the fullest reason to Attribute this Conduct rather to Inexperience than any Censurable Motive The Court are further of Opinion that Cap^t. Manley did all that lay in his power to Save the Hancock and that he did not in any Instance during the Cruise discover any want of Courage but on the Contrary great Zeal for the good of the Service he was Engaged in The Court therefore Acquit him of every part of the Charge and beg leave to recommend him to Congress as a Spirited & brave Officer.—

MEMORANDUM TO REAR ADMIRAL JAMES GAMBIER

[New York, N.Y.] 13th June 1778—

Query 1st Can Vessells be condemned in America for breach of Acts of Trade?

Answer: The Ports in America not mentioned in the prohibitory Act enjoy all former priveledges, are liable to all former restrictions and of course vessells and Cargoes at such Ports transgressing the laws of trade become forfeited to the King. but at the Ports enumerated in the Prohibitory Act, there can be no forfeitures in consequence of former acts of Trade as that late act puts a stop to all trade, except such as is carried on by licensed Vessells for certain purposes.

Query 2^d Can the King have a claim to any share of prizes made by virtue of the Prohibitory Acts?

Answer No—by the first clause of the Prohibitory Act all ships and Vessells whatever going to trade or coming from Trading with the rebellious subjects in America are forfeited to His Majesty.¹ by the second clause of the same act, the Parliament gives to the officers and Seamen of His Majestys Navy the sole property of all Ships and Vessells so forfeited to the King which they shall seize and make prize of; only leaving to His Majesty the power of dividing such prizes. which is accordingly done by His Majestys proclamation dated 22d December 1775.² As the sole property of prizes are give by the above Act to the Navy, so the Navy by that act have the sole power of seizing. The Parliament past another act entitled An Act for enabling Commissioners &c &c—by this Act for the encouragement of what is there set forth, Commissions is granted to Private Ships of war who are also empowered to make prizes of Ships and Vessells forfeited to the King but more limited than the Navy (X see the Act) the word Whatever being left out least (it is supposed) an improper use might be made of the same powers granted to the Gentlemen of the Navy.³ Altho the word of the act Differs from that of the Prohibitory, yet the Spirit seems to be the same—the sole property of the Prize is given to the Captor. In any case when those private ships of war may exceed their powers in making a seizure, if the vessell seized ought to be a prize and can be condemned, the proceeds can never be adjudged to the King as neither of the two above mentioned Acts in any instance leave room for the King to claim any share or part of the amount of Seizures, all being given away by the very acts that empowered the taking of Prizes. So where the Judge cannot condemn to a private Ship and yet finds cause for condemning he ought to do it to the Navy Officer commanding at the Port where the Court is held, or to any officer of the Navy that takes possession of the prize as a forfeited vessell to His Majesty but brought in by a vessell that had no power to prosecute her agreeable to Act of Parliament. This would answer the end intended by the Act; give the Navy the emolument, or an oportunity of doing a generous thing by the first Captor, and prevents what seems exceeding the intention of all Acts of Parliament forcing on the King more than he has a right to & of course more than he desires.

LB, N, Andrew Elliot Papers, Letterbook B, pp. 48–50. The author of the queries is not given but was presumably Andrew Elliot, in whose letterbook the memorandum was found. Elliot was superintendent of the Port of New York.

[Philadelphia]

Sunday 14 June [1778]. Everything wears the face of leaving this place soon. many of the horses are carried over, The Commissioners baggage are Shipping.¹ This day the unfinished vessels left on the stocks were burnt. Those who have visited Gov^r Johnston say he talks high in fav^r of the rebels, he has given out some pamphlets said to be wrote by his brother justifying the opposition.² The Vigilant is the only ship [illeg.] here.³ The Roebuck lys below redbank.⁴ That ship has [constantly?] been an Asylum for the distressed loyalists, no man is more hurt by the face of affairs than Cap^t Hammond. Constant in the line of duty, had the Command been vested in him I have the best reason to believe there would not have been an inlet unexplored, or a rebel craft left between this & Cape Charles. . . .

I have the Honor of your Lordship's Letter¹ . . . & at the Same time Received . . . THE Memorial of His Excellency Baron Dreyer² Complaining of the Capture, Detention, & Condemnation of the Two Brigantines the Dorothea & the Elizabeth Christine. I am truly Concerned to find such Misrepresentations have been made to the Court of Denmark which have, amongst the great & Numberless Matters of Importance, given you trouble. The transactions being truly & fairly Stated I hope will induce the Baron Dreyer to Entertain a more favorable Opinion of this Matter & Consequently a Similar Report to his Court.

Much, My Lord, has been said by Governor Clausen on the Conduct of the Inhabitants of Tortola.³ I am sorry to say Regularity & a Proper System of Government is not Established there as in the rest of this Government Committed to my Care. I hope soon to have it. However, in these Cases from the Account which I herewith have the Honor to inclose your Lordship it will appear that far from the Danish Captains being Compelled or forced to Renounce their Claim Mr. Tennent⁴ from St. Croix, who Pretended to be Owner of the Brigantine Dorothea, refused to Enter a Claim to Part of her Cargo but admitted it American. . . .

We had long in this Government Suspected, & had almost Proof Positive, that Agents for the Rebellious Americans Resided in St. Croix & Publicly received Consignments which they either Sold at St. Croix or Covered as their Property & Remitted to Europe. Mr. Tennent Refusing to Claim the American Produce but immediately Relinquishing it, is a Proof that it did not belong to His Danish Majesty's Subjects. Whatever was Danish Property was delivered & not even Libelled [On] July 30th 1777 I troubled your Lordship with Copies of Letters which has Passed between Governor Clausen & Myself on the Subject of the Captures now Complained of; Since that Period, Applications have been Necessary to Governor Clausen on a Complaint I received from one Flemming a Free Mulattoe that his Wife and Children, Negroes whom he had brought from Georgia, were Seized, Detained, absolutely taken from him & Sold at St. Croix by Governor Clausen to whom I wrote on the Subject. The Governor Declared they were Claimed & taken by Course of Law under a Letter of Attorney from a Mr. Walls of Georgia directed to Mr. Tennent, the Identical Person who Claimed the Brigantine Dorothea, and as a Proof of the Legality & Justice of detaining the Wife & children from the Husband & Parent inclosed me under the Notarial Seal . . . a transcript from the Record that American Agents were Permitted to appear in their Courts on the Part of the Rebels. Thus, My Lord, you see is Justified the Idea that American Agents Reside in St. Croix & Cover, where they Can, American Property.

The Non Commissioned Vessels your Lordship knows [were] Armed in Consequence of His Majesty's Proclamation Calling on his Loyal & Zealous Subjects to Annoy & Distress his Rebellious. I am happy to find we had so many in this Government who immediately Armed at our Sovereign's Call.

With the Memorial March 21st is a Paper of Reference: there are two Schooners in . . . this Reference which the Baron Dreyer States as Danish Property Coming immediately from America Loaded with Tobacco, Rice, Flour and Slaves; how far the Capture of these Vessels & Cargo acknowledged to be American were Condemnable by the Prohibitory Act your Lordship will determine, but this Singularity attends all these Complaints—not an Appeal was ever prayed. . . .

I do imagine the Tortola Privateers may have Chased, Perhaps made Prizes opposite & in Light of the Ports of St. Croix & St. Thomas, but not within Double the Reach of Cannon. I have been assured they have RELINGUISHED MANY CHASES AT THAT DISTANCE.

PROCEEDINGS IN THE RHODE ISLAND INFERIOR COURT OF COMMON PLEAS
IN THE CASE OF ESEK HOPKINS VS. RICHARD MARVEN AND SAMUEL SHAW

[Extract]

Providence Ss.

[15 June 1778]

At the Inferior Court of Common Pleas to be holden in Providence in and for the County of Providence on the third Monday in June AD 1778.

Esek Hopkins of North Providence in the county of Providence late Commander in Chief of the Continental Fleet of War, complains of Richard Marvin¹ and Samuel Shaw² gentlemen alias mariners late officers on board the Continental Frigate Warren in the Custody of the Sheriff in an action of the case.

For that, whereas the Plaintiff being appointed by the Honorable the Continental Congress Commander in Chief of the Fleet fitted out by the American States for the protection thereof, the Defts³ together with Roger Haddock⁴ John Truman⁵ James Brewer⁶ John Grannis⁷ James Sellers⁸ George Stillman⁹ Barnabas Lothrop¹⁰ and John Reed¹¹ against whom also the Plff's¹² original writ issued, but they were not to be found averring the Plff in said Post and office did wickedly and maliciously conspire together in order to injure the Plff and did Wickedly maliciously and infamously prepare and present unto the Most Honorable The Continental Congress a false scandalous and wicked libel, whereby the Plffs good name and reputation was most vilely and scandalously abused traduced and Vilified and other false and scandalous matters the said conspirators did conspire to do against the Plff, Whereupon the Plff complaineth and saith, that from the time of his birth hitherto he was of good name fame and reputation and from his known honor probity honesty and abilities the most Honorable The Continental Congress did repose faith and Confidence in him by appointing him the Commander in Chief of the Continental Fleet of War, in which post he did continue to the interest emolument and advantage of the United States, and did continue to act and officiate in said Command to the best of his abilities and did give unto the said Honorable Congress good satisfaction as a Commander until the 19th day of February AD 1777 when the Defts together with the other consp[i]rators out of their envy and malice aforethought did on the day & year last mentioned at Providence aforesaid write and publish a certain false feigned & scandalous writing in the words following Viz.¹³ . . . by pretence of which said libel so written published and delivered to the most Honorable Congress, divers false rumors and scandals did arise and were had and the Plff. fell under great displeasure & distrust of the said honorable Congress and divers of the Good people of the United States, so that the Plff lost the favor and good opinion of the said Most Honorable the Continental Congress which before that time they had towards him and by means of the said base false and scandalous libel aforesaid the Plff was dismissed from his employment and office as aforesaid & hath been brought into disgrace. Whereupon the Plff saith he is worse and hath damage ten thousand pounds lawful money as laid in his writ dated the thirteenth day of January AD 1778. and thereupon he sues

At Providence Inferior Court June term AD 1778 In the Case Esek Hopkins Plff vs Richard Marvin & Samuel Shaw Defts

And the said Richard Marvin & Samuel Shaw come into Court and defend the force & injury when &c and say that the Said Esek Hopkins ought not to have & maintain his said action against them Because they say, that they the said Richard & Samuel engaged on board said ship Warren, with an earnest desire & fond expectation of doing their country Service, and were anxious for the Weal of America, & wished nothing more earnestly than to see her in peace & prosperity—That they were ready to hazard every thing that was dear, and if necessary sacrifice their lives for the welfare of their country; that they the said Richard and Samuel were desirous of being active in defence of their Constitutional liberties & privileges against the unjust and cruel claims of tyranny & oppression. But that at the time said petition recited in the declaration of said Esek Hopkins was wrote and presented to the Said Marine Committee, matters were so circumstanced on board the said frigate there seemed to be no prospect of their being Serviceable in that Station; that they had then been in that condition a considerable space of time and were personally well acquainted with the real character and conduct of the Said Esek Hopkins; And that the Said Esek Hopkins, before the writing and presenting of said petition had been guilty of such crimes as rendered him quite unfit for the public department he occupied. And they the said Richard and Samuel together with the other persons named in the declaration of the Said Esek Hopkins, thereupon presented the said petition therein recited to the Said Marine Committee as it was lawful for them, sincerely and humbly petition the Said Honorable Marine Committee; that they would inquire into the conduct & character of Said Esek Hopkins. All which they are ready to verify Whereupon they pray judgment of the Said Esek Hopkins ought to have & maintain his Said action against them &c¹⁵

Richard Marvin
Samuel Shaw

And the said Esek Hopkins replied & saith that the aforesaid plea of the said Richard Marvin and Samuel Shaw is insufficient to preclude him the said Esek from his action aforesaid, for that notwithstanding any thing by them pleaded in said plea alledged the said Richard and Samuel with the others in said declaration did wickedly maliciously and infamously conspire together in order to injure the Plff as he in his declaration hath alledged and without any other cause whatever. And this he prays may be inquired into by the Country by

I Joseph Olney¹⁸ of Providence in the county of Providence Esq. being summoned to appear before the court of Common Pleas June Term 1778 to give evidence in a cause before said court pending wherein Esek Hopkins Esq is Plaintiff & Samuel Shaw &c defendants, maketh Answer to the following questions which were asked him in open Cou[r]t Viz.

Question. Capt. Olney, are you acquainted with Esek Hopkins Esq. character as a public officer & a private gentleman, if so please to relate his character.

Answer. When he commanded the fleet I always looked upon him as a commander always desirous to serve his country & in the fleet we looked upon him as a gentleman.

Quest. How long have you been acquainted with Mr Hopkins and what time did you enter the Service on board the fleet which Commodore Hopkins commanded.

Ans. I entered on board the fleet under his command at Philadelphia in December 1775 & remained there all the time he commanded it. My acquaintance with [him] has been from my youth up.

Quest. Have you ever heard the conduct of Commodore Hopkins as commander of the fleet censured.

A. I have heard his conduct blamed by Some in Philadelphia & in particular M^r Newman & Capt Shaw who left the fleet at New London

Quest. Have you heard that the public in general censured the conduct of Commodore Hopkins, while he had the command of the fleet

A. I have heard him censured but by them that I thought knew nothing of the affairs of the fleet.

Qu. On board of what vessel was you an officer, and was you with the Said Esek Hopkins the whole of the time he had the command of the fleet

A. I was Second Lieutenant on board the *Columbus*¹⁹ until he returned from Philadelphia, & then was appointed to the command of the Columbus until Januy 1776.

Question. Did you ever hear Esek Hopkins Esq speak disrespectfully of the Congress or the Cause we are engaged in

A. No.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with Esek Hopkins Esq & what is his general character.

Ans. From more than seven years intimate acquaintance with sd Esek Hopkins Esq, I have had the highest reason to esteem him a man of honor & respectable character amongst mankind & a zealous advocate for the Cause & liberty of his Country & disposed to serve it with his best abilities.

Quest. Have you ever heard the conduct of the Said Esek Hopkins as commander of the fleet censured.

Answer. I have heard many say that he ought to have gone out with the fleet, before the Enemy came to Newport, and others justified his bringing the Ships into the river,²² but whether they were qualified from personal knowledge of the State of the fleet, to form a judgment, I am not able to say.

Quest. Are you acquainted with the conduct of the Said Esek Hopkins Esq while on board the fleet.

Quest. Are you acquainted with Commodore Hopkins & for how long, and what is his general character as an officer, Sea Man & gentleman in private life.

Ans. I have been personally acquainted with Commodore Hopkins above 28 years & have always [blank] him to be an experienced officer & much of a gentleman in a private Character.

Quest. Did Commodore Hopkins receive the wages & prize money belonging to the Seamen under his Command in the fleet.

Ans. No.

Quest. At the time the British fleet arrived in the river & at Newport was the fleet under the command of commodore Hopkins fitted for Sea. Were they after the arrival of s[aid] British fleet finished & a considerable sum of money expended on them

A. I having a personal knowledge of the Situation of the fleet at that time, know they could not proceed to Sea, and a considerable Sum of money was expended on the Ships after that fleet arrived.

Quest. Did Commodore Hopkins ever call on you as Continental agent to pay off the seamen & make division of the prize money.

Ans. He did & I paid as long as I had any money in my hands.

Quest. Do you conceive the Conduct of Commodore Hopkins to be any way detrimental to manning said fleet.

Ans. I did not.

Quest. What number of men had they on board the Ship Warren & the other ships.

Ans. To the best of my Knowledge about 110 and but few Seamen among them on board the Warren. On board the Providence about 100,²³ & the Columbus about 50, the Sloop Providence about 15—²⁴

Quest. Were you acquainted with the conduct of the Said Esek Hopkins when on board the fleet. Did you ever hear his conduct censured by the public

Ans. As to his conduct while on board the fleet I never heard but he behaved as an experienced officer, nor was I on board to see his conduct. I have heard him censured often by people that I was sure did not know the situation of the fleet at that time

Ans. As near as I remember, was this. His orders was on his being fitted & manned to go on a Second expedition therefore could not proceed to Boston as we advised, but if he could take any measures to man his fleet; would immediately proceed to Sea

... The deposition of Stephen Potter Esq duly sworn saith that he hath been acquainted with Commodore Hopkins & that he the Said Hopkins hath borne the character of an honest Man as far as I ever Knew or heard, & I have been acquainted with him for near twenty years & I never heard him charged with any thing criminal that disqualified him in my opinion from Serving in any Station whatever. I have heard some persons fault him in some matters, that when they had done, I concluded they were not judges of; they were matters of his Staying in Providence river with the fleet.

COMMISSIONERS FOR QUIETING DISORDERS TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

[Extract]

(No.3)

My Lord

Having received your Lordships Letter of the 12th April together with the Kings Commission Appointing and Authorizing Us to treat, consult and Agree upon the means of quieting the Disorders Subsisting in the Colonies in North America. And also His Majesty's Instructions for our Direction in the very Important Business entrusted to us; We embarked on the 15th. On Board His Majesty's Ship the *Trident*¹ at Spithead, And with the first fair Wind proceeded on the 21st in our Course for New York—

On the 27th of the following month, being by the Reckoning about 70 Leagues to the Eastward of Cape Henlopen, We spoke with His Majesty's Armed Brig *Stanley*² which had lately sailed from thence. And were informed by her Commander Lieutenant Whitworth that Lord Howe and Sir Henry Clinton, Commanding in Chief His Majesty's Navy and Army employed in North America, were both at Philadelphia. That before Lieutenant Whitworth's departure from that Place, Accounts had been received of the proposed French Treaty with His Majesty's Revolted Colonies having been brought by M^r Simeon Dean on board a French Frigate to Casco Bay, and transmitted from thence to the Congress at York Town in the Western Extremities of this Province.³ And that some disagreeable Resolutions had already been taken on the Subject of this Treaty, and the Conciliatory Bills.—

Under these Circumstances it appeared so Essential to us to lose no time in our Proceedings, and so Eligible to have the earliest Communication with His Majesty's Commanders in chief, with whom we have the Honour to be joined in our Commission, and with whom we are particularly Instructed to Consult, that We thought it our Duty to make use of the discretionary Power with which We are vested by His Majesty "to repair either to New York or such other place as we should Judge most proper," and We accordingly, not apprized of the positive Orders under which the Commanders in Chief were to act, made the Requisition to Commodore Elliot in writing of which there is a Copy enclosed, in consequence of which he proceeded immediately to the Delaware River and We arrived on the 6th Instant in this City, where We have been received and treated with all the Attention that can shew respect for His Majesty's Commission with which We are honoured.—

As no reason had been given to Us before We left England either to believe or Conjecture that the Terms of Reconciliation, however Wise and Liberal, tendered by Parliament to the Colonies would be left almost Solely to their own Operation and Effect, We were naturally surprized to Learn that His Majesty's Army was by Express Orders from Great Britain dated about three weeks before Our departure from London, under a necessity of quitting this Province at a time the most Critical to the opening of our Commission, and with a tendency the most prejudicial to the Conduct of our Negotiation.—⁴

In Consequence of this Order the Commander in Chief had already given Publick Notice of his Intention to Evacuate Philadelphia And a Considerable proportion of the Navy in Obedience to a Similar order had been withdrawn from Chesapeak Bay and other important Stations on these Coasts, so that the Access of French Ships to Supply the Revolted Colonies and Confirm them in their supposed Alliance with France was entirely left Open.—

This being the Posture of His Majesty's Forces by Sea and Land, We found the City and Province of Philadelphia in great Consternation. And the greatest Part of those who had put themselves under His Majesty's Protection were either retiring on Board Ships in the River or endeavouring to make their Peace with the Congress.—

. . . We have as yet received No Answer from the Congress.⁵ And the Evacuation of the Town being determined to take place on Thursday next the 18th Instant We think proper to Reembark on Board the Trident now lying at Newcastle, about Forty Miles below on the River, and proceed from thence to New York.—⁶

In accounting for the Step We have taken in the first Opening of our negotiation by stating Priviledges for America of so Ample a nature We have other reasons which your Lordships knowledge of the Operations projected for the Naval and Military Services of the Year will easily Suggest and which have influenced Our Conduct. But as We cannot state those reasons, though they have been principal Motives with us, We request that in Case our Letter to the Congress should be given to the Public, no Judgement may be formed upon it untill all the Circumstances can be fully explained.

The Separation of the American Colonies from France and their ReUnion on the present liberal Terms with Great Britain were in the Judgement of almost every Person here Practicable in the Compass of one Active and well Supported Campaign, whether this may be Expected from the present Plan of Operations a very little time will now determine. We are with the greatest respect [&c.]

The Movements of his Majesty's Troops & Ships discribed in this dispatch and made in consequence of Express Orders Sent from Great Britain without any Communication to the Commissioners appointed under the Act of Parliament for quieting the disorders in N^o. America or admitting of any discretion or delay in the Commanders in Chief, I consider as a fatal, ill Concerted, & Ill advised, Retreat, highly dishonorable to His Maj^{ty}s Arms & most prejudicial to the Interest of his Dominions.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR JOHN GAMBIER OF THE BAHAMAS TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

Duplicate

Providence Chief of the Bahama Islands 15th. June 1778

I have the Honour of sending to your Lordship the Triplicate of my Letter dated the 25th. of February last.¹ Since which Time there has not been any Attempt made by the Americans to disturb the Inhabitants of these Islands.

In Consequence of my Application to Sir Peter Parker the Admiral commanding at Jamaica requesting some Assistance to protect His Majestys Subjects in these Islands. He dispatched the Hornet Sloop of War Captain Haswell with Orders to him to co-operate with me in any Measures that might be conducive to His Majestys Service or the Protection of these Islands, which Sloop remained here sometime, then sailed for Turks Island.

I have hopes that Lord Howe will send some Vessel of War here, as I have repeatedly by Letter endeavoured to convince him of the Necessity of it.²

Your Lordship will receive herewith the Address of the Council and the Address of the General Assembly wherein they request of me to represent to the Throne their Inability to putt the Forts in a proper State of Defence, and to petition His Majesty to give the necessary Orders for their being repaired, fortified and garrisoned, they likewise request of me to represent to the Throne, the Necessity there is for some Naval Force to be stationed at these Islands.³ The General Assembly have passed an Act whereby they have layd some additional Duties in order to enable me to hire some Men to do Duty in the Forts.

The Forts are in so ruinous a State that I have been obliged to hire Artificers and Workmen to give them some Temporary Repairs, and I have pledged myself that they shall be paid.

I have by this Opportunity wrote to Lord Townshend the General of the Ordinance and enclosed to him the Demand of the Storekeeper for Guns Ammunition and Stores necessary for the Forts, and have also requested of him for Leave to draw on the Ordinance Board, for so much Money as the Expence of repairing the Forts amounts to. Your Lordship has herewith Copy of the Store Keepers Demand.

To you my Lord as the Patron of His Majestys Colonies I must make my Address entreating of your Lordship to represent to His Majesty the necessity there is for the Forts in these Islands to be repaired fortified and garrisoned, as well as that some Naval Assistance should be stationed here for the Protection of these Islands and also that the Board of Ordinance may receive Directions for the paying of such Bills as I may draw on them for the temporary Repairs of the Forts.

When the Independent Company (consisting of 150 Men Officers included) doing Duty here was disbanded. His Majesty was graciously pleased to give Orders that a Detachment consisting of two Companies from some Regiment in North America should be stationed here to do Garrison Duty. Upon the breaking out of the Disturbances in North America, the General commanding there⁴ order'd that Detachment from hence to join his Army in Boston, since which Time the Bahama Islands have been left destitute of any military Force.

I am satisfied if two Companies of His Majestys Forces had been here at the Time of the Rebel Invasion in 1776 the Governor would have been able to have defended the Forts, and consequently the Guns and Stores would have been safe, and for want of such Force, His Majesty has sustained a great Loss, as will appear to your Lordship by the enclosed Return of the Store Keepers.⁵

The very large Quantities of Salt that the Americans are supplied with from these Islands and particularly Turks Island, makes it absolutely necessary for me to have some Orders for restricting that Trade.

I flatter myself with Hopes that in Consequence of my Representations, how very necessary it is, that these Islands should be putt in a good State of Defence that some military Force will be order'd here and if so, I must entreat of your Lordship to give Orders for there being sent to me the Powers for granting Letters of Marque, as many of the Inhabitants are willing to fit out proper Vessels for that Purpose, provided we have a Force to protect their Property from the Ravages of the American Privateers.

I expected to find here the several Acts of Parliam[ent] relating to the Trade of the Colonies. upon my Application to the President of the Council, he acquainted me he had not any. I must therefore entreat of your Lordship to give the necessary Orders for their being sent to me. I have the Honour to be [&c.]

NEW-YORK, June 16.

Last Friday arrived here, after a passage of 12 weeks, the Letter of Marque ship Richard, Captain Lyon, of 16 guns and 70 men, of and from Liverpool:—About the middle of May, he took a snow from France, bound to America, laden with salt, wine, brandy, cloathing, &c. there were found on board of her a number of letters directed to Congress.¹

About ten days since, Capt. Lyon spoke with the Letter of Marque ship Marlborough, from Liverpool for Philadelphia, with two prizes, one of them from Carolina, with rice and indigo, and the other from Chesapeake with tobacco.²

Last Saturday night, about 11 o'clock, a small party of rebels, from East-Jersey, landed at New Utrecht, on Long-Island, who, having procured a waggon and horses, proceeded to Flat-Bush, where several Gentlemen of this city, have country-houses: The rebels, being well informed of this circumstance, proceeded to the house of Major Moncrieff, whom they surprized in bed and, after allowing him time to dress, carried off. They were not so complaisant to Mr. Theophylacte Bache, of this city, who, upon the first alarm, went and opened his door without any other cloaths except his shirt, the skirt of which one of them tore off in the scuffle, and dragged him away in that condition. About the same time they surrounded the house of David Matthews, Esq; Mayor of this city, who ordered his doors to be secured in the best manner, resolving to defend himself to the last extremity, in the mean time he sent a negro to the top of the house, who by discharging a musket gave an alarm, which so intimidated the assailants, that they ran away after breaking two muskets in endeavouring to force into the house: His worship immediately sent an express to Brooklyn, for a party of the 35th regiment, but the rebels, being too expert in a retreat, had got to their boats with their prisoners and a Mr. Forrester, one of their Lieutenants, then on parole there.³

Yesterday was sent in here by the armed sloop Harriot, Capt. William Austin, of this port, the schooner Sally, Charles Henly, master, of North-Carolina, bound to St. Eustatia, with lumber, and the sloop Bacchus, Stilson Hinson master, laden with tobacco. &c. At sea they parted company with the schooner Betsy, — Seldon master. with a cargo of tobacco. These vessels Capt. Austin cut out of Carratuck Inlet, North-Carolina, on the 9th inst. where he burned a sloop after taking four hogsheads of tobacco out of her: A sloop with dry goods, he was obliged to leave aground, not having hands to bring her off.

. . . There are now at Cranberry inlet, in New-Jersey, three gallies, from New London of four guns each, that have taken several vessels, among them a schooner from Cork with provisions;⁴ and a vessel from the West-Indies with rum and sugar.⁵

1. Ship Richard, Capt. Andrew Lyon, burthen 300 tons, was built in 1773 and extensively rebuilt in 1777. It carried 16 6-pounders. It was owned by Benson & Co., of Liverpool. Lloyd's Register of Ships, 1777–1778 (there, however, the captain's name is given as T. Lion).

2. British letter of marque ship Marlborough, Capt. George Dawson, 250 tons burthen, rebuilt in 1776, carrying 14 6-pounder and 2 9-pounder guns. Lloyd's Register of Ships, 1777–1778.

3. Maj. Thomas Moncrieff, an officer in the Royal Fencible American Regiment. He was the brother-in-law of Theophylact Bache, a New York merchant and lukewarm Loyalist, who was also seized. The raiders took Bache and Moncrieff to Morristown, New Jersey, where they were held a short time before being exchanged. Maxine N. David Matthews was mayor of New York City from February 1776 to 1782 when he became Register of the Court of Admiralty. His property in America, including the estate at Flatbush, was confiscated by the Patriots. After the war he became President of the Council and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Cape Breton. Lorenzo Sabine, Biographical Sketches of Loyalists of the American Revolution with An Historical Essay. 2 vols. (Boston, Massachusetts, Little Brown and Company, 1864) 2: 51–52. The paroled American officer who escaped with the American raiders was Capt. Alexander Graydon. Lurie, “Bache,” 828. The New Jersey Gazette reported on 17 June that the raiders, eleven in number, were led by William Marriner and that Matthews, their “principal object,” escaped capture because he was “in the city.”

5. On 10 June, Maj. Gen. Philemon Dickinson of the New Jersey militia reported to Gen. George Washington: “Two valuable Prizes were sunk into Toms River, two days ago, by a small New England Privateer, part of the Cargoes, consists of one hundred & fifty hogshheads Rum—this small Privateer within five weeks past, has taken Prizes, to the amount of, One hundred & fifty thousand pounds.” DLC, George Washington Papers. On 14 June, Brig. Gen. William Maxwell reported to Washington that “a Prize Snow & two sloops” had been captured and brought into Egg Harbor; “the first has 160 puncheons of Rum on Board the two latter is loaded with fruit & Turtle.” He added: “I think they all should be moved to Camp as they would conduce much to the Health of the Troops and will soon spoil where they are.” Ibid.

JEAN HOLKER TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir.

York town [Pa.] June 16 1778.

In consequence of your desire I have the Honour to inclose you an Account of the motive of my Mission in America by which you will see the verbal instructions I have received from his most Christian Majesties Ministers in the Month of November last year.¹ invincible obstacles of which my Court is already informed have deprived me of the happiness of arriving here sooner, and of beeing the first to inform you of the Kings favourable dispositions. but I have now the satisfaction to acquaint you that his Majesty has extended his Goodness and Generosity even to the subjects of the United States, by authorising me to pay to the Owners of two American frigates the Hancock and the Boston commanded by the Captains Babson & Hendrick the sum of Four hundred thousand Livers tournois, by a letter of the first of February last of which I have the honour to inclose you a copy.² and I beg sir that you will be pleased to communicate that Letter to the August Assembly over which you Preside and to assure it of the particular satisfaction I feell in being employd in so interesting an occasion. if during my residence here I can merit its confidence it will be a great increase to my happiness as I am directed to wait here for his Majesties and his Ministers further instructions. I am with Respect Sir [&c.]

[Enclosure]

I am directed by the Ministers of his most Christian Majesty to Declare that his Majesty is most sincerely interested in the happiness and Independance of the united American States and to make known that the ressources and Powerfull assistance they have found in the Commerce of his subjects and the Protection and facility they have met with in his Ports are its Effects and the prooff. I am authorised allso to declare that his Majesty desirous to give them further testimony of it was disposed to receive favourably the proposal of a treaty of Alliance and Commerce with the United States, and that his intentions were not to lay any restraint on their Views in Consequence of which he desires that proper Powers may be sent to the representatives of Congress in France, in case those they have should not be sufficiently extensive.

I am directed to make the strongest representations relative to the Insults committed by American Privateers against the French and Spanish Flags, who have searched and plundered several merchant Vessells belonging to those two Nations, the Courts of France and Spain expect that Congress will take the quickest and most efficacious methods—to put a stop to such insults and give them the most compleat satisfaction on this head, so that their Flags may be respected over all the seas, and that their subjects may enjoy the advantages of a Free trade.

It has been recommended to me to represent how dangerous it would be for the united States to enter into any Treaty with the Court of London without the intervention of European Powers who are concern'd in guarantying the Independance of the United States, the Faithfull Execution of the treaty they should conclude; the Number, nature and situation of the possession still in the Possession of the English on this continent, would point out this Necessity if the ambitious, interested and insidious Views of that Court did not sufficiently demonstrate

L, DNA, PCC, item 96, pp. 1–8 (M 247, reel 124). Docketing: “Letter from M^c Holker/Yorktown 16 June 1778/read 18./Referred to M^r Morris/M^r Witherspoon/M^r M^cKean/Report 27th/Consid: &/disagreed—.”

1. This summary of Holker’s instructions follows immediately below Holker’s signature. Congress was skeptical of Holker’s assertion that he spoke for the French ministry and, as seen in the docketing, on 18 June appointed a committee to investigate Holker’s papers and assertions. Also, the Committee for Foreign Affairs on 21 June wrote the American Commissioners in France asking them to investigate the “Authenticity” of Holker’s mission. The commissioners consulted the comte de Vergennes, who, according to Arthur Lee, responded that “he was astonished that Mr. Holker had no Commission verbal or other from the Ministry; & was only desired to communicate to them his observations on the Country.” Letters of Delegates, 10: 169n. Even before the commissioners received this request, however, the whole matter became moot when the new French minister to the United States, Conrad-Alexandre Gérard, announced on 23 July 1778 that he had appointed Holker “inspector general of trade and manufactures of France, and agent to the royal marine of France” as well as “consul of France in the port of Philadelphia.” JCC 11: 713.

2. Holker enclosed a letter from Jacques-Donatien Le Ray de Chaumont of 28 Feb. 1778 authorizing the payment. Holker announced that the king of France had authorized the payment for the owners of the two American privateers equal to the value of the two prizes they had sent into Nantes in Aug. 1777, but which had been returned to their British owners because of the prizes’ false entries as Dutch vessels. DNA, PCC, item 96, pp. 9–10 (M247, reel 124). The prizes, the Jamaicamen Clarendon, Thomas Cowell, master, and Hanover Planter, Thomas Luney, master, had been re-named Hancock and Boston respectively by their American captors when they were sent into Nantes. Their captors had been the Massachusetts privateer brigantines General Mercer, Capt. James Babson, and Fanny, Capt. John Kendrick. The congressional committee appointed to consider Holker’s letter recommended that Congress “take Measures” to see that the “owners of the Privateers Hancock and Boston” be paid. DNA, PCC, item 96, pp. 13–14 (M247, reel 124). The report was rejected however “because it was a Matter that did not concern the public Interest, & might open a Door to endless applications.” Titus Hosmer to Thomas Mumford, 27 June 1778, Letter of Delegates, 10: 194. It was not until October 1778 that Holker paid the authorized agents of the owners of General Mercer and Fanny. Independent Ledger, and the American Advertiser, 9 Nov. 1778.

PRESIDENT OF SOUTH CAROLINA RAWLINS LOWNDES TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Dear Sir

. . . Commodore Gillon¹ is nearly ready to take his departure for Europe in order to try his Skill in Negotiating a Loan Sufficient to equip three Frigates² for the Service of our State, Our Assembly have granted £500,000 for that purpose, but the purchasing of Vessells, the Charges on Shiping, the Certain loss on the Sales, I imagine will leave but a small Ballance applicable to this use, and will render it necessary for the Commodore to use all his Address, supported by the Great Seal of the State, to establish himself in his post. If you have any Regulations respecting the Rank or Subordination of Officers in the Service of the particular States, when joined with the Continental Navy, be pleased Sir to make me acquainted therewith—³ . . .

1. Alexander Gillon had been appointed a commodore in the South Carolina Navy on 11 Mar. 1778. Paullin, Navy of the Revolution, p. 435.

2. Gillon had set out to acquire three frigates on behalf of South Carolina and was accompanied by John Joyner, John McQueen, and William Robertson, who were the prospective captains for the vessels. D. E. Huger Smith, "Commodore Alexander Gillon and the Frigate South Carolina," The South Carolina Historical and Genealogical Magazine Vol. 9 No. 4 (Oct. 1908): 189-219.

3. In his reply of 5 Aug., Laurens wrote nothing about the mission of Alexander Gillon. However, in a letter to Lowndes of 6 Oct. 1778, Laurens included an undated note from French ambassador Conrad-Alexandre Gérard expressing concern about Gillon's mission because "this step executed by a single State in contradiction with the Plan of Confederacy, could hurt in Europe the Idea of the uniformity of the Governments to rely on Congress for the exertion and application of the common forces and it might be misunderstood or misrepresented to the prejudice of the confidence and the consideration Congress has so justly acquired." Laurens Papers 14: 388.

[Translation]

My dear sir: I have received the letters you sent me yesterday that made me see the situation in which you find yourself, and that does not leave you any means of returning to your colonies other than to make a voyage on the sea in your frigate and, for security, to arm and place yourself in a state of defense. I regret very much to find myself in a situation of breaking the resolution I had adopted of not permitting in this place any of the two parties at war to be armed. But now, considering the critical situation in which you find yourself and the hazard of the war at hand, I consent to your petition permitting you to mend and repair the said frigate in a fashion that might serve the two objectives, of transport and of defense, it being well understood that for this to proceed depends on you and the officer who commands it, on his word of honor and according to his oath in writing, that the purpose of the said armament is no other than to make a direct voyage without committing any extortion against the English, unless they are the attackers.¹ May the Lord keep your life for many years. New Orleans 17 June 1778. [&c.] Bernardo de Galvez.

DIARY OF SIMEON PERKINS

[Extract]

Thursday, June 18th, [Liverpool, Nova Scotia]—Pleasant morning. Wind N. The Car-teel is gone out.¹ A Fishing Boat, which Stephen Page, and some others redeemed from the Privateer, that was lately run on shore at Portmetway,² going out, was seized by the crew of the said Privateer, in the Harbour, and carried off. Two Privateers are seen to go by the Harbour. Rob. Lloyd, the owner of the said boat, comes for her, and brings me a line from Mr. Creighton to Assist him in gitting her, but he is too late, otherwise he would have her.³

Perkins, Diary, p. 205.

1. According to Perkin's diary entry of 17 June, this was a cartel schooner carrying ninety American prisoners from Halifax to Boston.

2. Massachusetts Privateer sloop Fox, Capt. Jonathan Tuksbery, had been forced ashore at Port Medway.

3. The fishing boat, Ranger, was forced to carry Tuksbery and nine of his crew to the United States. Perkins, Diary, 204n.

JOHN BRADFORD TO LEONARD JARVIS

Dear Sir,

Boston June 18th 1778

I have just receiv'd a line from Cap^t Gorham¹ in which He writes he has receiv'd from Bedford 35 Hhds & on [e] Tierce of Sugar, among them are six Hhds belonging to Col Sears,² but He cannot find any Marks to distinguish y^e One from y^e other, pray let Me know by the first Opportunity whether they have been weigh'd, or if you have any Way of knowing those ship'd by You. The Sloop³ has brought up 19 Hhds & one Teirce. If I should not find any Marks of Sears, I shall take Care of y^e Whole till I hear from you—the Cap^t that brings them up tells Me a Number of Cask are so shatter'd it's impossible to move them, therefore am sending down a Parcell flour Barrells for y^e Purpose of shifting them. I gave Demand for Tallow &c to the Navy Board⁴ a fortnight since, who promis'd Me to furnish you—I find M^r Agent Trivet⁵ has gone go⁶ Congress—I've represented his Conduct to y^e Marine Board⁷ therefore believe he'll not meet with so favourable a Reception as he may wish for. Rathbourn⁸ complains of him bitterly, & says, by his Conduct as Agent, He has lost fifteen of his best Men, he says he is content with the Decree of Court, & would have dissuaded him from going forward. we have a certain Account of y^e *Bostons*⁹ Arrival in France—No News of Consequence offers—yours &c

JOHN BRADFORD TO ROBERT MORRIS

Dear Sir,

Boston 18 June 1778

Your Fav^r under y^e 1 Ins^t came to hand last Evning pr Post, as you make no Mention of the three Friends Cargo, I suppose my Letter under 13 May had not reach'd you, tho it was due, two Days before your last Date, the Commissary for purchasing Cloathing from Rhode-Island State, has been waiting, here to make a large Purchase but as your former Letter¹ forbid me doing any thing I shall not touch y^e Goods 'till I receive further Orders—the Navy Board² has taken Charge of y^e Cargoes which came in Cap^{ts} Green³ & Nicholson⁴ & have parted with a considerable Quantity but on shewing your former Letter to M^r Warren⁵ they declined parting with any more. M^r Warren told Me he saw an Impropriety in the Boards taking Charge of ye Goods and said the Whole ought to be put into my Hands, but as they sold a part, I told him, I thought it best to let them rest where they where, The Henrietta's⁶ ready to sail having a Cap^t ready to step on Board when I know your Pleasure, the Ship is completely overhaul'd that when they arrive at Carolina⁷ they will have nothing to do, but to take out their Ballast & load. We have been in Pain about M^r Adams,⁸ hearing he was carried to England, but we have a Certainty of his Arrival at Paris, When will the Enemy leave your City, we have been strangely amus'd for ten Days past by many Accounts of their removing from it.⁹ God grant you a peaceful Possession of it again & very soon—I'm yours &c

 OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT

Gentlemen

[York, Pa.] June 18th 1778

This will be handed you by Captain Peter Landais whom Congress has appointed to take Command of the new frigate Alliance.¹ We desire you will put that Vessel under his care and use your utmost endeavours to have her speedily fitted and manned for the sea. We have desired Captain Landais to proceed as far as Portsmouth in New Hampshire to give his advice as to the Construction of the 56 Gun ship now building there,² he will afterwards return and attend the fitting & manning of the frigate which he is to command, and in which we doubt not you will find him very assiduous You will please to pay him the balance of his wages at the Rate of Sixty Dollars per month from the date of his Commission. He hath not been paid any money at this place only what we agreed to allow for his travelling Expences to Boston.³ Inclosed is a Resolution of this Committee passed in consequence of a memorial from Sundry Captains of French Merchant Ships which you will please to order to be duly executed.⁴ We are Gent^o [&c.]

LB, DNA, PCC, Marine Committee Letter Book, fol. 158 (M332, roll 6). Addressed before opening: “The Commissioners of the Navy Board at Boston.”

1. Congress’ appointment is dated 19 June. JCC 11:625.

2. Continental Navy ship of the line America.

3. The committee wrote Capt. Pierre Landais on the same date repeating much of what they wrote in their letter to the board. Concerning Landais’ compensation, they did add that they had “agreed that the consideration of a gratuity to be made you be deferred until we shall be enabled by consulting with Silas Deane Esq^r to judge with propriety what sum will be adequate to your services.” DNA, PCC, Marine Committee Letter Book, fol. 159 (M332, roll 6).

4. The resolution has not been found, but it concerned “A memorial from Tallemon and others, French captains in the port of Boston . . . complaining of an affront offered by the captain of the Warren frigate [John Burroughs Hopkins] to their commandant, and praying redress.” Congress referred the matter to the Marine Committee on 16 June. JCC 11: 608.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO THE CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE MIDDLE DEPARTMENT

Gentlemen

[York, Pa.] June 18th 1778

We desire that a Court of Inquiry may be held to enquire into the Cause of the loss of the Continental Brig Independence John Young Esq^r Commander And if it shall appear that the same was occasioned by the negligence or MalConduct of the Captain or any other Commissioned Officer belonging to that Vessel that then a Court Martial be held for the Trial of the Officer so offending agreeable to a Resolve of Congress of the 6th of May last.¹ We have ordered Captain Young to repair to Baltimore and hope you will be able to proceed upon that business immediately It is our desire that you Order the seamen of the Independence to be paid off their wages. We have agreed that the Officers of the said Brig shall have liberty to make a voyage in Private service their pay to cease during that time, and to inform us when they return that they may be again ordered upon service should there be occasion for them. We are Gentⁿ [&c.]

LB, DNA, PCC, Marine Committee Letter Book, fol. 157 (M332, roll 6). Addressed before opening: "The Commiss^{rs} of the Navy Board at Baltimore."

1. The Marine Committee on this date sent an almost identically worded letter to Capt. John Young. PCC, DNA, Marine Committee Letter Book, fol. 157 (M332, roll 6). For more on the loss of the Independence, see Marine Committee to Young, 6 May, in NDAR 12: 277. The Court of Inquiry was not held until October 1779.

JOURNAL OF AMBROSE SERLE

[New Castle, Del.] Tuesday, 18th. June.

After a Gust of Wind, attended with Thunder & Lightning, usual in this country, the morning was pleasant & cool. The Wind likewise changed to the Northwards, wch favored the Descent of the Vessels, which have been going down for several Days.

About 8 o'Clock this morning, the last Detachment of the Troops, consisting of about 5000 men, closed the Evacuation of Philadelphia & the Embarkation to the Jerseys from Gloucester Point, about 2 miles below the Town, which was effected without the least molestation from the Rebels. The Precaution was taken to destroy the Bridge wch led over the marshes to Gloucester Point. The Bridge over Schuylkill formed of cut masts, was destroyed a few Days before; and another Bridge, for the same Place, constructed formerly by the Rebels, was burnt at Mud Island.¹ In coming down, the *Vigilant*² ran ashore upon the Spit opposite Mud Island, wch occasioned some Delay; though it was a happy Circumstance for a Detachment of about 180 men, whose Retreat was cut off from Billingsport by a Party of 500 Rebels, & who were taken off by the Flat-Boats, however injurious the Delay was to the Sinking of the Vessels, filled with Stones, to obstruct the two narrow Channels,³ which Business was not so well effected by the strong Flux of the Tide.

Serle Journal, pp. 310–11.

1. In his journal entry of 14 June, Serle reported that in the evacuation "Several Ships & Frames upon the Stocks were burnt, to prevent their being employed against us by the Rebels." Ibid., 309.

2. H.M. armed ship Vigilant, Comdr. Brabazon Christian, commander. Vigilant and "a few Row Gallies" remained in Philadelphia to cover the crossing of the Delaware River by British troops as they evacuated Philadelphia. John Laurens to Henry Laurens, 16 June, Laurens Papers 13: 469.

3. Serle refers here to the Delaware River as it flowed past Billingsport, New Jersey.

The Governor having laid before the Board a Letter from the President of Congress inclosing a Resolution of Congress laying an Embargo on Provisions & recommending to the respective States to take the most effectual measures for carrying the Same into immediate execution² they do advise his Excellency to accompany the publication of the said Resolution in the public Gazettes with a Requisition to the Naval Officers to pay due attention and to enforce the Law as it respects Embargoes—³ the Board also advise the Governor upon this occasion, to write to the Commissioners of the Navy desiring them to give direction to the Commanders of the Armed Vessels belonging to this State to exert their Vigilance in preventing & detecting the Violation of this Salutory measure.⁴

Journals of the Council of the State of Virginia 2: 149–50.

1. Gov. Patrick Henry.

2. Henry Laurens, President of the Continental Congress, enclosed a copy of the resolution, dated 8 June, in letters to Gov. Patrick Henry of 9 June and, because the copyist had omitted a clause of the resolution, again on 13 June. JCC 11: 578–79; Letters of Delegates 10: 51 and 88. In a letter to the States of 10 June, Laurens explained the rationale that led Congress to enact the embargo: “Experience hath shewn that the Marine force of our Enemies enables them to secure, for the support of their Armies, almost the whole of our exported provisions, and therefore Congress, impressed with the necessity of preventing the supplies derived to our foes from this source, and desirous of supplying the Armies of the United States, have, upon mature deliberation, laid an Embargo on provisions of all kinds, and they earnestly request the vigorous exercise of the powers of your State to carry into effectual execution this most necessary measure.” Letters of Delegates 10: 67.

3. The Virginia Gazette on 19 June published the text Congress’ resolution and immediately below it the following notice: “Williamsburg, June 18, 1778. The several Naval Officers in this state are required to conform strictly to the foregoing resolution of Congress, and more especially to take bonds from the masters of vessels, and to give the notices required by law in cases of embargo. By advice of Council. PATRICK HENRY.”

4. In the minutes for the Virginia Navy Board’s meeting of 18 June is the following notation: “Letter from the Governor rec’d read and fil’d,” but there is no mention of Board instructions concerning the embargo in the minutes for that day or subsequent days. MEMORANDUM OF GOODS SHIPPED TO VIRGINIA FROM CAPE FRANÇOIS,
ST. DOMINGUE, ON BOARD POLLY

[Williamsburg] [18 June 1778]¹

Memorandum of Goods Shipped by Rawleigh Colston Esq^r² at Cape François, on board the Polly, Captⁿ. Trapp³ to the care of Captⁿ Peter Singleton near the North Landing,⁴ Consigned to Thomas Smith, Agent State at Williamsburg.—

4 Cases Arms
3 Hghds Sulphur
1 Hgh^d. Gun Flints
5 Barrels Gun Powder
1 small Box Jesuits Bark⁵

LB, Vi, Thomas Smith Letterbook, vol. 3: 73.

1. The place was taken from Smith's location as given in the text of the memorandum; the date was taken from a letter Smith wrote Peter Singleton that follows this memorandum in the letterbook and refers to it. Ibid.

2. Colston was Virginia's agent in St. Domingue.

3. Probably Edward Trapp.

4. Singleton was a merchant; North Landing is in present-day Virginia Beach, Virginia. In his letter to Singleton of 18 June, Smith wrote that he had sent several letters to Singleton concerning the goods shipped from St. Domingue but had not received a reply and that Virginia State trading schooner Mayflower was "bound up James River" and could pick-up and carry the goods to Williamsburg. Ibid.

5. Jesuits' bark, also called Peruvian bark, was from several species of the genus Cinchona; it was used to treat malaria. OED.

June 1778

Sol^o. Perkins R C A⁷

D, DNA, Revolutionary War Prize Cases, Records of the Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture, no. 105. The deposition was taken in the trial concerning the disposition of Schooner Liberty between a group of North Carolina militiamen, who asserted that they had captured the vessel while it was in enemy hands, and Peter Kerwin, the North Carolina representative for the owners, who contended that the vessel never passed from the control of its captain. Cook was one of six seamen serving with the schooner.

1. Capt. Bridger Goodrich, a Loyalist commanding the Bermudian privateer sloop Hammond. According to a letter written by Capt. Middleton Belt of Liberty to the vessel's owner, Hammond chased Liberty into Currituck Inlet early on 8 June and then later that day entered the inlet and attacked five ships, including Liberty, moored within. Ibid.

2. Charles Lee, the Virginia Naval Officer for the Lower Potomac District, certified that Liberty, a twenty-ton Virginia-built schooner, owned by Joseph Harper and Co., had left Alexandria, Virginia, on 25 Apr. 1778 bound for Cape François. Ibid.

3. In his letter to Joseph Harper of 16 June, Belt asserted that during the boarding Hammond's crew "Broke the Hatches and Plunderd Considerably." Ibid.

4. According to Belt's deposition, the anchor was used to pull Liberty to open water and then "the Privateer" ordered that the line be cut and the anchor abandoned.

5. Robert Ferguson, another seaman with Liberty. He mentioned his spotting the stakes in his deposition. Ibid.

6. In his deposition, Belt said that three men from Hammond were then aboard Liberty.

7. "RCA" presumably means Register, Court of Admiralty. The Court found that the militiamen deserved one-eighth the value of the Liberty and its cargo. The owners successfully appealed the verdict to Congress, but in the meantime, a group of the militiamen seized Liberty and its cargo.

ABRAHAM LIVINGSTON TO LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR JOHN GAMBIER OF THE BAHAMAS

Sir;

Charlestown S^o: Carolina, 18th: June 1778

Having receiv'd information that the Schooner Lewis the property of the United States of America was in the Month of February last carried into New Providence as a Prize of the Subjects of His Brittanick Majesty.¹ I transmitted this intelligence to the Hon^{ble}. Continen^l: Board of Trade, informing them also of such circumstances of her Capture as came to my Knowledge, in consequence of this Communication I have it in Command immediately to write to the Governor of the Bahamas to demand restitution the Vessell and Cargo, or the Neat proceeds if Sold. From the pacific disposition and friendly conduct of the good people of these States, towards the Inhabitants of your Islands (Altho Subjects of a Prince with whom we are at open War) I persuade myself that this demand will be chearfully granted.—Since I cannot doubt that a Contrary Conduct will involve the Inhabitants of the Bahamas in a predicament we wish to Avoid, I rest assured your Excellency will endeavour to prevent it.—I am [&c.]

Abrm Livingston—

P:S, An Answer to this requisition is expected within three months from the date, the want of it will be deemed a Refusal of the demand—²

Copy, MiU-C, Sir Henry Clinton Papers. Addressed at bottom: "His Excellency Governor Gambier." Enclosed in Gambier to Clinton, 31 July 1778. Livingston was writing as the Continental Agent for South Carolina.

1. Schooner Lewis was seized by part of its crew and taken into New Providence I. on 17 Feb. 1778. NDAR 11: 519.

2. In his letter of 31 July to Gen. Henry Clinton enclosing this Livingston letter, Gambier wrote: "Two Days ago I received a Letter from the Principal Officer of the Congress Board of Trade, a Copy of which Letter you have enclosed. The Vessel therein demanded was brought in here by part of the Crew, who rose on the other Part, the Vessel was here libelled and condemned to the King. The Congress Board of Trade must be convinced, it is not in my Power to make Restitution of such a Vessel. I am therefore apprehensive they make this Demand as a Pretext for putting an End to the Neutrality they have hitherto permitted to these Islands." MiU-C, Sir Henry Clinton Papers.

some of the Officers of said Vessels have imprudently enlisted sundry Men belonging to French Ships trading here, either on the Continental Account, or otherwise, to the great Damage of their Trade with us:—

Therefore Resolved, that such Practices be discontinued for the future; and it is hereby recommended to all civil Officers in this State to see this carried into Execution.

THE CONNECTICUT GAZETTE; AND THE UNIVERSAL INTELLIGENCER,
FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1778

NEW-LONDON, JUNE 19.

Thursday Evening of last Week a Schooner Privateer belonging to Newbury, Capt. Bentley,¹ arrived here: The Day before, off Montauk Point, he fell in with and re-took a French Snow, bound into Newport; her Cargo consisted of Salt, a large Quantity of Calicoes, &c. the most valuable Articles were taken on Board the Privateer and brought in here: The Snow was ordered to Newbury.

Sunday last a Boat bound from Block-Island to Newport, was taken and carried into Stonington, by an armed Whaleboat. She had on Board 14 Calves, 30 Bushels of Corn and some other Articles of Provision for the Comfort of the Inhabitants of Newport.

Wednesday last, a Brig with 62 Pipes of Wine, was brought in here by Capt. Pelton:—She was owned in Boston, and bound to that Place from Tenerif, but had been taken six Days before, by Sir James Wallace,² and ordered into Newport. There were two Midshipmen on Board.

Capt. Lathrop in a Ship,³ and Capt. Ripley in a Brig,⁴ both from this Port, were lately taken, on their Passage from North-Carolina to Holland, and carried into Delaware-River.

The sloop Friendship, Capt. Crary, from Stonington, bound to North-Carolina was taken ten Days after she sailed, by a ten Gun Sloop fitted out at Bermuda.⁵

The ship Betsy, Capt. Wm. Packwood, belonging to this Port, is arrived in North Carolina, from the West-Indies in 46 Days Passage

The French Ship Lyon, Capt Michel,⁶ sailed from hence last Friday; and we have since an Account from Long Island, that she fell in with an English Frigate, south of that Island, with whom she had an Engagement which lasted four Hours, and that they afterwards parted.

1. Massachusetts privateer schooner Hornett, Capt. Nathaniel Bently. It was commissioned on 22 Jan. 1778, was owned by John Tracy and Samuel White, of Newburyport, mounted 10 carriage guns and 8 swivels and was manned by a crew of 50 seamen. CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO THE CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT

[York, Pa.] June 19th 1778

We have been favoured with yours of the 25th. ultimo 2^d & 8th Current which we have considered & as we wrote to you fully by Captain Barry and other late conveyances we shall now only reply to such parts of your Letters as have not been determined on.¹ So soon as will be convenient we wish to be furnished with the accounts of your transactions. We agree that you shall appoint a Naval Paymaster for your Department and hope you will be able to get some proper person for that purpose. It is an office of much importance and should be filled by a man of integrity and capacity who will keep Regular and fair Books of accounts with all persons belonging to the Vessels of war within your department and pay them their wages as it may become due taking care always to keep a months pay in hand from the seamen until their time of entering is expired. Congress has not yet fixed A Salary for the Paymaster—when they do we presume it will be adequate to the importance of the Office. Before this you will know that we have appointed Captain Barry to the Raleigh & as he is an active good Officer, we have strong hopes she will shortly be manned.²

Exclusive of the Vessels you have provided to carry dispatches to France, the sloop Providence will also be wanted for that purpose, and we request you will get her ready as soon as in your power.³ The Committee for foreign affairs will send off their dispatches to go by her in a day or two.—⁴

We have only to repeat our former request that you will use your utmost endeavours to get our Vessels fitted for Sea and sent out together as Speedily as possible. We hope the news of the Bostons Safe arrival in france may be true and congratulate you on the Enemys having been obliged to evacuate Philadelphia.⁵ We are Gentlemen [&c.]

P:S: we have Received a Petition Signed by Stephen Hill, Simon Gross, Joseph Adams, Adam Thaxter, Esek Hopkins & John Deamon—⁶ should they not be wanted in their Stations on board any of the Continental Vessels—we have agreed that they shall be at liberty to make a voyage in Private service their pay to cease during that time, which you will please to inform them.—

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO WILLIAM SMITH

Sir

[York, Pa.] June 19th 1778

In a letter from the Eastern Navy Board dated the 2nd instant they write to us—“that they have already sent forward to Senpuxent three schooners which if they arrive safe will take more flour and Iron than is already provided, and shall soon get another which will be sufficient to bring the whole quantity proposed you will therefore please to order the remainder to be ready” It is the opinion of this Committee that if there is not already at Senepuxent a Sufficient quantity of Flour and Iron (which we Suppose is the case) to load these Vessels that shall be sent out for that purpose by the Navy Board of the Eastern Department and arrive & the navigation of the Bay should be open—they should be ordered round to Baltimore and you are desired to send your Orders accordingly. We are sir [&c.]

SAMUEL ADAMS TO JAMES WARREN

[Extract]

My dear sir

I have Time only to write you a few Words by Captⁿ Landais who is appointed by Congress to the Command of the new Ship of War Alliance.¹ This Gentleman is esteemed for his Experience & Knowledge in Marine Affairs & will go first to Portsmouth to direct in the Construction of the Ship designd to be built there.² I wish you would (with the other Gentlemen of your Board) assist him with a good popular as well as able Lieutenant—popular, because as he is a frenchman, it may be difficult for him to procure a sufficient Number of American Seamen. He is in hopes of getting french Sailors out of the Vessels that are or may be at Boston &c . . .

Sir

I have the honor to inform you that, having decided to make on my private account the warlike preparations that I have had the honor of proposing to Congress for Africa, with the deduction, however, of one of the two frigates, because the expense would be too considerable for me. I venture to ask you to deliver to me in Consequence two Commissions from Congress, for a frigate of thirty-six guns, called the Laurence, commanded by me, and the other for a corvette of a dozen guns, called the Washington, for which I ask you to leave the name of the Captain blank. Be assured, Sir, and certify it, I pray you, to the Congress, that I shall not Compromise the honor of the American flag, and I shall not fail to inform you of the operations that I shall make in Africa. I ask you even to honor me with your orders to this effect, which you may be assured I shall follow to the Letter. The frigate will be armed with 300 men, and the Corvette with 130. I propose to leave in the month of November next. Have the goodness of sending them to me as soon as possible, to the address of Governor Cazowel of North Carolina.¹ Please accept, Sir, for you and the honorable Congress, my wishes for the prosperity of your Cause, and the assurance of the profound Respect with which I have the honor to be [&c.]

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

Number 66.

Eagle Delaware [River]

Sir,

June the 19th: 1778.

The Town of Philadelphia having been evacuated, and the last Division of the Army passed over the Delaware to Gloucester, for marching through the Jerseys to New York yesterday, without Interruption; I am preparing to proceed with the Transports and Ships of the Squadron assembled in this River, for New York: From whence the Troops are to be embarked for the Secret Service directed, immediately upon their Arrival.¹

The King’s Commissioners² will go to New York in the Trident,³ which they have desired me to detain until they can determine with more Precision, on the probable Time of their Stay in these Provinces; I have therefore dispatched the *Porcupine*⁴ with the Advices to be transmitted of the State of these Colonies at this Period, for His Majesty’s Information.

The farther purpose of my Instructions of the 21st of March⁵ respecting the Frigates first ordered to England, will furnish me with an Opportunity to give You the earliest Notice of the Departure of the Armament under Commodore Hotham, when he leaves New York.

I⁶ am informed by Captain Griffith,⁷ that a Detachment of the Garrison of Rhode Island under the Command of Lieutenant Colonel Campbell⁸ of the 22^d: Regiment, was embarked the 25th: of last Month in the Flat-Boats conducted by Captain Clayton;⁹ And, by a well-concerted Operation, was destroyed one hundred and twenty five Boats collected by the Rebels in Kickamanet River;¹⁰ Together with a Galley under repair,¹¹ meant to be employed in Conjunction with the Boats for a purposed Invasion of Rhode Island. A large Quantity of Pitch, Tar, Plank and other Materials for Ship-building was burnt with them.

Another Division of Boats from the Ships of War, supported by the Pigot Galley (lately armed and commanded by Lieutenant Stanhope¹² of the Nonsuch) under the Direction of Captain Reeve,¹³ were at the same time ordered against, and succeeded to surprize and take, a Galley of Force,¹⁴ which the Rebels had placed in Warren Creek. And on the 30th. of the same Month, a second Detachment of the Troops were sent in the Boats of the Squadron conducted by Lieutenant Christian,¹⁵ Commander of the Kingsfisher, to destroy the Saw-Mills on a Creek near Taunton River, then in Use for preparing Materials to build Boats and other suitable Craft for the purpose as before-mentioned. This Service was performed with equal good Effect.

The Behavior of Captain Reeve, and of the Lieutenants Kempthorne,¹⁶ Stanhope and Christian, is greatly commended by Captain Griffith. I am at the same Time to observe, that the good Disposition made for these Undertakings, as well as the vigorous Execution, appears to have contributed much to their Success. I am, with great Consideration, Sir, [&c.]

THOMAS SMITH TO CAPTAIN PAUL LOYALL

Sir,

Williamsburg [Va.] 19^h June 1778—

Captⁿ Samuel Healy¹ was with me Yesterday, and the account he gave me of the situation of the Boat building under Westwood's direction was actually astonishing—How such a concatenation of unfortunate Circumstances should rise in Judgment against me is amazing.—Surely there is a failure in some person;—and when the Interest of the Public is concerned (which is ultimately the case in the present instance)—it becomes my immediate duty to enquire into the cause which produces the disagreeable effects—I have good reason to suppose you & Westwood misunderstood each other in some respect, and that inattention in a measure on your part, has kept the matter back so long—I wish to be mistaken, but Sir, circumstances plead a justification of the assertion; and if your other engagements are such as diverts your attention from the Public's claim, I would be glad to know it. JOHN LANGDON TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

Dear Sir—

Portsmouth New-Hamps^{re}. June 20th. 1778

Your esteemed favour of the 1st. Inst.¹ Rec^d. last Night inclosing your Letter, which I've forwarded. also the News Paper, for which, I thank you— I have not received any Orders for going on with the Ship² therefore they must have miscarried, if they were sent on, should Orders come without a supply of money it will be impossible for me to carry them into execution, to order the Board at Boston³ to supply me with money will by no means be so well as for me to have it directly here, for if it goes to Boston, of course their own wants must be first supplied & if any left it will come to me. therefore if anything fails it must be at this Port for want of proper supplies, give me but an equal chance here, and if the Shipping is not as soon dispatched, & as well equip^t from this place & with as little expence as any other Port then the fault will be here.— I could wish that Yards were once established, at the most proper places, thousands might be saved, in my Opinion.

I wrote you in my last Letter to desire the Marine Committee to forward on the amount of the several sums of money I've received of them, as I intend closing my Acco^{ts}. with the Board at Boston. pray see this done immediately if you please & that the Board at Boston have full Powers to settle my Acco^{ts}. with the Marine Committee.—

We have Just heard of the arrival of the Commissioners at New-York⁴ should this be true, please to make short work with them, by their acceding to our Independance, withdrawing their Fleets & Armies, & their Trade will take it's course; numbers of Cruisers are in our Bay, we have Just heard of the loss of the Ship Portsmouth—⁵. . . I am, [&c.]

MINUTES OF THE PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

[Extract]

The Council met

Lancaster, Saturday, June 20, 1778.

Present. Hon^{ble}. George Bryan, Esq^c. Vice President. [blank] Mackay Esq^c. Matt^w. Smith Esq^c. Jacob Arndt, Esq^c. John Bambright, Esq^c. & Thomas Scott, Esq^c.

Capt. Hugh Montgomery applied to Council for Ten Waggons for the accomodations of the Officers & Men belonging to the State Fleet, now going to Philadelphia: And an Order was drawn and Signed by the hon^{ble} Vice President, directed to the Waggon Master, of the County of Lancaster requesting him to furnish Capt. Montgomery with Ten Waggons. . . .

An Order was drawn on the Treasurer in favor of Hugh Montgomery, or his Order, for the Sum of One thousand Pounds, to be paid to the Officers & Men belonging to the State Fleet, & charged to William C, Bradford, paymaster of the State Fleet. . . .

The Officers of the State Fleet represented that they had been at a very considerable expence in removing themselves & families from Trenton to this Borough¹ & that they had not been supplied with their Rations on the Road, by which their expences had been extravagantly high & such as they were not able to bear; On consideration Ordered, That the Officers of the State Fleet, who were ordered up to Lancaster be allowed for their extra expences on the road two Dollars a day each, besides their back Rations.

1. The memorial could not be located in PHarH. There is, however, a summary of its contents in Jackson, Pennsylvania Navy, pp. 293–94. It was in response to the Council’s determination to dismiss from service all except fifteen or twenty officers and to give the discharged officers a bonus of two months’ pay and arrearages due them. In their memorial, the officers recounted their devotion to duty and their heroic conduct and that of their men during the engagements in the Delaware River in October and November 1777. The officers wrote that they did not consider themselves discharged, but rather suspended from their commands, and contended that they were entitled to the same emoluments as those still employed in the fleet. “Eleven officers signed the memorial and asked that all officers be covered in their petition for a commutation of their service to half-pay." Quoted in ibid. It was presented to the Pennsylvania General Assembly on 23 May, who unanimously resolved, on 25 May, to continue the officers in the service until the meeting of the next Assembly.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE

My Dear Sir,

York Town [Pa.] June 20th 1778

I congratulate you on our army's being in possession of Philadelphia. We rec'd the intelligence this morning by express from General Washington;¹ the particulars of which important event and the circumstances and movements of the armies in consequence, I expect you will receive before this reaches you, and I believe we shall soon take leave of this dirty place and remove Congress to some place where we may be better accomodated. I make no doubt you have heard of the arrival of his Britannic Majesty's Commissioners, and of their letters being sent to Congress;² I now enclose you a paper which will inform you of all the transactions of Congress relative to that affair which will I hope give full satisfaction to every honest American.

I have the pleasure to inform you that every member of Congress was firm and steady, never to make peace, but, on the principles of absolute Independence. I am sorry that the answer was deferred some days on account of the zeal of some members for sealing the letters up and sending the letters back without reading, in consequence of some harsh expressions against the King of France: however it was overruled as you will see and a more proper method in my opinion taken. What will be their next steps, time only can discover. In the packet to Congress were enclosed a great number of letters to the separate members—some from Governor Johnstone to such of the members as he was acquainted with;³ and others from other persons in England who had any acquaintance with them. The enclosed from Robert Trail came directed to you as a Delegate of Congress which was opened and I now enclose it to you.⁴

As to Marine affairs, Congress are very sensible some very essential alterations are necessary and seem determined to attend to it, as soon as the Confederation and some other very important matters are finished. I wish I could inform you that I thought it would soon happen, but the multitude of business that is daily crowding upon us, and the time it Sometimes takes to determine on some not very important matters makes me fear it will not take place So Soon as I could wish. Besides the want of men in Congress acquainted sufficiently with marine affairs is another great difficulty and causes that Committee to be filled with some persons like myself, unacquainted with the business they are ordered to superintend.

"I heartily wish (with you) to see the American Navy respectable, and hope it will be put wholly into the hands of men whose private business does not militate with the public";⁵ but I cannot be fully of your opinion that it would be for the public service to put an active Stop to privateering, as I think experience has shewn that privateers have done more towards distressing the trade of our enemies and furnishing these States with necessaries, than continental Ships of the same force, and that is in my opinion the greatest advantage we can at present expect from our Navy: for at this early period we cannot expect to have a Navy sufficient to cope with the British. However I am quite convinced that it might with proper management be in a much better Situation than at present and Should be happy to see it soon take place.

The Congress is at this time pretty full. I know not whether you are acquainted with the President, Mr Laurens: I think him a very sensible, judicious man, acquainted with the world and makes an excellent President.⁶ Mr Drayton, the Chief Judge of S^o Carolina is a sensible judicious man, a good speaker, firmly attached to Independance and not given to the chicane common to lawyers.⁷ Mr R Morris⁸ from New York is an eternal speaker, and for artifice a Duane⁹ and for brass equal to any body I am acquainted with. Mr Adams from Virginia is a member;¹⁰ he informs me that he was innoculated with you at Elizabeth Town and desires to be remembered to you. On the whole I think we have a pretty good Congress and if we have nothing more to fear from British arms and policy than from their gold, I think you may make yourself perfectly easy as is your sincere friend & most ob^t serv^t

J.B.

Mr Wentworth desires to be remembered to you.¹¹

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

My Dear Sir—

Portsmouth [N.H.] 21st June 1778

... will not the peace establishment give Vigour to our army? I fear not, for if the Officers have half pay the Soldiers will say they have a right to expect it—we are now giving 200 dollars p^r man for men to go to Road Island for a few months, in addition to what is allowed by the state this I impute chiefly to Privateering I think I may venture to assert that there are more men at this time in Privateers from the four Eastern states) & in the Enemies hands that have been taken in Privateers then Gen^l Washington has in his Army whether this business does not very essentially injure both Army, navy, & Agriculture, I must leave you to Judge—several Privateers have lately been taken,¹ but that does not abate the Rage two ships one of 18 & the other of 20 Guns are now fitting out here how many there are in the Neighbouring ports I know not but no doubt a considerable number while these ships are daily sailing the Public ships are laying by the walls, & cannot (as I am inform'd) get men to do the commo[n] necessary duties of the ship.—It Grieves me to see men who have made fortunes in the public service & are still adding to them doing every thing in their power to injure their Country & at the same time blinded by their own interest will not see it.—

I am anxiously expecting to hear from you every post² in the mean time be assured that I am with great sincerity most affectionately Yours

JOHN HARWOOD AND OTHERS TO THE RHODE ISLAND COUNCIL OF WAR

To the Hon'ble Council of War sitting at Providence on the 22^d. Day of June 1778.

Humbly shew the Subscribers that they in an armed Boat under the Command of William Bentley captured Three Fish Boats belonging to Newport, and a Boat belonging to a Transport-Ship of the Enemy: And that the Expence of trying the Captures before the maritime Court will be so great that it will eat up the Profits: And thereupon they pray as there is not the least Doubt of their being legal Prizes that they with the said William Bentley may be empowered to sell the said Boats with their Tackling either at publick or private Sale and share the Money according to their Articles. And as in Duty bound will ever pray.

CONTINENTAL COMMITTEE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS TO CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT

Gentlemen

York Town [Pa.] June 22. 1778

The bearer M^r Taylor¹ has instructions to proceed to France immediately, This Gentleman having been along time Confidentially employed by M^r Hancock² While President of Congress, we think it proper that the delivery of one of the Packets sent to your care yesterday for our Commissioners in France should be intrusted to him.³ It is not however meant that you should Suffer any delay in the Sailing of the Vessels in Which you intended our dispatches F and G should be forwarded. It is only meant that you should give M^r Taylor the offer of delivering one of them personally at Paris, in preference to other persons mentioned conditionally to you when the Packets were sent. We are gentlemen &c

And

James Madison jun

James Innes² Esquire is appointed a Commissioner of the Navy, in the room of James Maxwell who hath resigned his appointment, until the pleasure of the General Assembly shall be known.

It appearing that the retailing of sundry Articles now in the public Store which are not wanted for the Army & Navy hath become very Inconvenient for the Commissary of Stores³ to attend to, & must necessarily occasion the said Commissary to neglect Business of greater Consequence to the State—the Board do advise the Governor to direct the Commissary of Stores to forbear selling or retailing any more such Goods at large but that he deliver the Articles unfit of the Army & Navy to M^r Robert Prentis⁴ to be by him disposed of on account of the State, so soon as he may be ready to receive them Which the Governor directs accordingly

The Governor having communicated to the Board a Complaint from the Naval Officer at South Quay⁵ & the Merchants concerned in the Trade there, respecting the Conduct of the Naval Officers of North Carolina taking upon them to grant Permits to Vessels coming to this State to trade here, and also giving Clearances to them when outward bound after clearing out in this State and receiving Fees for so doing they do Advise his Excellency to acquaint Governor Caswell of these practices & to inform him that it is the Opinion of this Board that it is sufficient for Vessels coming from Sea to South Quay & returning again from thence to enter & clear out there without doing either at any Naval Office in the State of North Carolina unless they break Bulk or take on board any Articles within its Limits. And his Excellency wrote a Letter accord^{gly}.⁶

Tuesday, June 23d, [Liverpool, Nova Scotia]—I go on board the Blonde with Wm. and Joseph Freeman. Dine with the Captain,¹ and have verbal orders to sell all the Goods belonging to the wreck, except the Musquets, which I send on board the Blonde,² in

No. 44, viz.-31 from my store, (returned guns), and 13 from Capt. Freeman, that were saved from ye Privateers.³ Thos. Harrington put a rudder brace [?] on board, weight about 100 lbs.

Perkins, Diary, p. 205.

1. The captain of H.M. frigate Blonde was John Milligan. According to Perkins' diary entry of 20 June, when Blonde arrived at Liverpool, Milligan sent for Perkins and expressed unhappiness that "no more of the Goods belonging to the wreck of the Ship Duke De Choiseul are recovered, and Particularly the musquets." Ibid.

2. In his entry of 25 June, Perkins noted that the "wreckd Goods" "sell pritty well." Ibid., 206

3. As seen in Perkins' diary entry of 4 June, above, American privateers had been stripping Duc de Choiseul.

ACTS AND RESOLVES OF THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL COURT

[Boston] Tuesday June 23. 1778

M^r Partridge came up with a Message from the Honb^{le} House to enquire of the Board whether they had passed upon a Resolve directing the Board of War to lay before the Council a Nomination of some person to command the Brig *Hazard*¹

John Pitts Esq^r went down with a Message to the Honb^{le} House to inform that the Board had Nonconcurred the Resolve referred to in the foregoing Message.

In the House of Representatives. The House made choice, by Ballot, of Capt. John Foster Williams to command the Brigantine Hazard.

In Council Read and Concurred.

Consented to by Fifteen of the Council.

JOHN CUSHING AND SAMUEL WHITE TO CAPTAIN ISHMAEL HARDY

Sir

Boston June 23^d 1778.

You being commander of the General Hancock a private ship of war of Eighteen Guns, now fitted and ready for Sea, to cruize against the Enemies of the United States of America, as by authority of your Commission from the Honourable Continental Congress Our Orders are you embrace the first favourable opportunity and proceed on your Cruize as follows VIZT.

From this wou'd have you proceed to the Southward, so as to cross the Latitudes to cut off [f] the West India Fleets, bound home to England and Ireland, how far to the Southward or Northward, We would not limit you, as You being on the spot will be the best Judge where it will be most for the benefit to cruize. Should you take any Vessels with Negros would have you send them to South Carolina or the West Indies, any with Lumber and Fish would have you send them to the West Indies there Invest the neet proceeds in Molasses and Sugar, the Prize master giving me us the earliest intelligence, all other Vessels you take would have you send them to this Port consign'd to Cushing & White, agents for the Ship General Hancock.

After your Cruize is up you are to return with your Ship to Boston, and your People are not to be discharg'd until they deliver the Ship at this Port.

Shou'd you think fit to prolong the Cruize, and want to refit you are hereby empower'd to draw on the Owners of the Ship to the amount of Five hundred pounds sterling money, and your Bills shall be duly honour'd.

As to the proceedings of the Cruize, We shall intirely confide in your prudent management, not doubting you will do the utmost in your power for the benefit of the concern'd, so We wish you health and a successful Cruize and safe return and are,—sir your friends & part Owners.

NEW-YORK, June 23.

Saturday last was sent in here by the Letter of Marque sloop General Howe, Capt. Carey,¹ the brig Benjamin, Andrew Walker, late Master, from Nantz, in France, with a very valuable cargo; and a schooner from Alexandria, in Virginia,² with tobacco, bread and flour: Capt. Carey took them off North-Carolina, out of a fleet of eleven sail; he could have taken them all, but had not seamen to man them.

The 10th inst. Lieutenant Farnham, Commander of his Majesty's armed brig Diligent, sent two boats into a harbour in Connecticut, called Scot's Cove, at noon day, and cut out a sloop having on board 250 barrels of flour, and a parcel of wheat, on account of the Congress, which sloop arrived here the Monday following.³

Yesterday were sent in here by the Letter of Marque brig Enterprize, Captain Squires of this port;⁴ a schooner and a sloop from Georgia for Martinico, laden with rice and indigo.⁵ Captain Squires captured another schooner, laden with salt, rum and molasses, and sent her into St. Augustine. The prize schooner which arrived here yesterday, was chased off Egg harbour last Sunday evening, by a rebel privateer.

1. In a list of New York privateers prepared in November 1778, the sloop General Howe, Capt. John Ceary, was described as carrying 12 guns and 6 swivels and having a crew of thirty. UKLPR, C.O. 5/1109, fol. 109. According to a note to that list, the modernized spelling of Ceary is Carey.

2. Schooner Hampden. UKLPR, H.C.A. 49/94/155.

3. Sloop Eagle. Ibid. According to the 10 June entry in the journal of H.M. armed brig Diligent, Lt. Thomas Farnham, commander, three armed boats entered Scot's Cove and "Cut out" Eagle. UKLPR, Adm. 51/4163.

4. Privateer brig Enterprize, Capt. Daniel Squires. In November 1778, Enterprize is described as carrying 4 guns, 16 swivels, and a crew of 110. UKLPR, C.O. 5/1109, fol. 109.

5. Schooner Friendship and sloop Unity. UKLPR, H.C.A. 49/94/155.

[York, Pa.] 23^d June [1778]

. . . Col^o Malcom¹ lately informed me, that having heard one of the Enemy's ships lay near—in North River he caused an 18 & 24 Pounder to be dragged down in the night with 51 shot when the flood tide had made strong he opened his little masked Battery of Bushes and at the distance of 500 to 700 Yards pierced her 47 times when he had only 1 shot remaining a breeze of Wind favouring, the Swift, I think she is called, of 16 Guns cut her Cable and towed off, he took up the Cable and Anchor and returned without loss—the Crew of the Ship, the Colonel says passed their time in great confusion but fired not a shot in return². . . .

2. The logbook of H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Swift for June 1778 contains no mention of this episode. UKLPR, Adm. 51/964. The vessel may have been misidentified. It was probably H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Swan, Comdr. Thomas Totty, commander.

THOMAS SMITH TO DAVID STODDER

Sir

Williamsburg [Va.] 23^d June 1778

I received your favour of the 19th Ins^t & observe the Contents,¹ I am exceeding glad you have got your Boat in such forwardness, but would rather she shou'd have been agreeable to the dimensions I gave you, but I hope she will answer—²

I have mentioned it to the Governour & Council³ about having another Boat built which they seem to be rather undetermined about (I mean as to the size), we have some thoughts of enlarging the Keel to 70 or 80 feet & rigg her as a Ship, but as the Council Board are taken up to day in chusing Officers they cannot possibly attend to it, I shall urge it to morrow, & shall certainly write you immediately on their coming to a Resolution, I am sorry Cap^t Wrenn should have left this place in the precipitate manner he did,⁴ as I meant to have sent the sum of money you wrote for, however I hope you will sustain no material inconvenience till I have an opportunity that may be depended upon, the present I think rather precarious, With respect to the Rum mention'd in your mem^o to Cap^t Wrenn, I grant may be customary⁵ but the Custom must be laid aside for the present, as we have not any in the Public Store neither is it to be bought here, You may expect to hear from me very shortly & am Sir [&c.]

MAJOR GENERAL ROBERT HOWE, CONTINENTAL ARMY, TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Camp at Cow Ford upon great Satilla's River [Ga.] 23^d June 1778—

Sir

. . . I take the liberty to trouble Congress upon a subject of all others the most disagreeable to me, as I may appear to be interested in their determination upon it; but Service requires it of me, & Congress may be assured, their opinion will always be binding upon me—

The prizes taken by detachment from the Troops under my Command & acting under my Order have been condemned—¹ my Right to any of the Prize money is disputed & denied—I therefore presume to apply to Congress to be informed, whether the General of an Army, if he send out a Detachment, is not entitled to a share of the money arising from any prize or prizes they may take, and if he is, what proportion he draws—A copy of the Orders I gave upon this occasion, which induces this reference to Congress, I have I believe already transmitted I however send another Copy, by which it will appear that in the execution of those very Orders, to annoy attack & dislodge any Enemies of the United States,² this Capture was made, & if the General commanding the department draws no Share of any thing taken by detachments sent out by his Order, he can hardly have any claim at all, as almost all Captures are made by detachments where in person, it is more than propable he never may be—Congress however will be pleased as immediately as possible to resolve me upon this head, which will settle the present & prevent all future disputes—³ I am Sir [&c.]

JOURNAL OF MAJOR JOHN FAUCHERAUD GRIMKÉ, CONTINENTAL ARMY

[Extract]

[June] 23 [1778] [Cantey's Plantation], [Ga.]

. . . A Scouting Party sent by the General¹ to Wrights landing at the mouth of S^t Marys to learn if the Galleys² were there & derive some intelligence of the Enemy's Motions, is Returned & Reports that the Galleys are laying at Wrights landing, with Two flats each Mounting a 12 pounder, & several small Craft to the Amount of 12 Sail in all.—The Sick have recovered surprisingly there being now but 28 ill & none of them dangerously in the whole fleet—the Sick sent to Sappalo & S^t Catharines are also doing better.

The Commodore³ is to make use of a few Manœuvres to decieve the Enemy into an Opinion that the Army will Cross S^t Marys at Wrights landing: He is therefore to light large fires in the night in the Woods & in a few days is to move up the River S^t Marys about 5 Miles with all the Parade of Landing Troops & commense a Cannonade under which fire the Army is supposed to land: Whilst the enemy are thus Amused the Troops will embark on rafts & cross the River 10 or 12 Miles from hence. By Prisoners Our Scout Boats have taken We learn that General Prevost & Governor Tonyyn are at Variance—that 500 Negroes have been shipped off the Province of Florida since they have heard of the Present Expedition, & that the Governor has issued a Proclamation any more Slaves to be sent off away. That the Governor had wrote to the Country People & advised them to Embody, but that they had refused to do it, but had nevertheless promised him all assistance with their Horses, Waggons, Provisions & Boats.—that on the former claim when the Vessels were taken at Frederica Col^l Brown⁴ evacuated Fort Tonyyn & that it was believed he would do the same at present—That the Scopholites⁵ who were Stationed at Trout Creek⁶ had been very discontented & that some of them had Threatened to Return to Carolina & throw themselves upon the Mercy of their Country: that they were reconciled again & that Major Prevost was ~~with~~ drilling & Exercising them; & that they were enlisted for the War in the British Service. That a Vessel which was cut down in S^t Augustine to Serve as a Galley was arrived in S^t Johns River—⁷ that they had fortified Hester's bluff & mounted Two 42 Pounders there—that the Cow Ford was also defended by Works & that they had resolved not to engage Us on the Northern Side of S^t Johns River.⁸ That the Militia at Present did Duty in Augustine & that they did not Consist of fifty Effectives.— That the Americans had many Friends in Florida who had not moved their Furniture or Negroes.—The Commodore Reports that there Are but 70 or 80 barrels of Clean Rice & 50 barrels of Pork in the fleet for the service of the Army—that the Rebecca Prize Sloop⁹ was expected daily laden with Rice & mounting 16 Guns & that 150 barrels of Pork would arrive in a day or two from Charles-Town—the Galleys are to go by Sea, the delay which would be Occasioned by cutting a Channel thro Amelia Narrows would be detrimental to Service when the most Sudden & Vigorous Exertions are Required,—

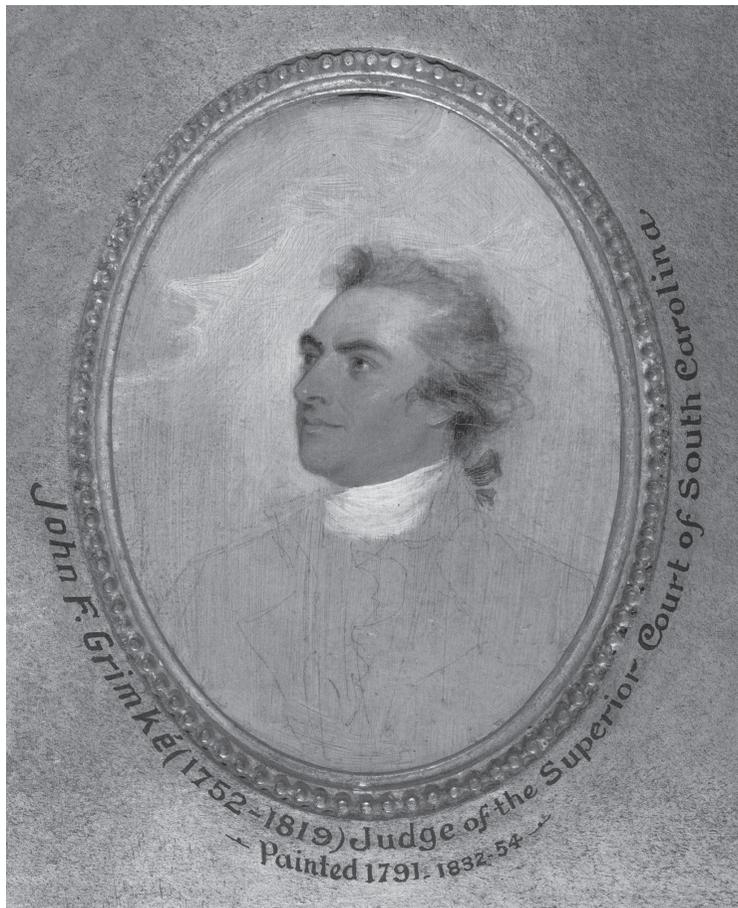

To Excite the suspicions of the Enemy respecting our Embarking at Wrights landing to Cross the River, Col^l: White¹⁰ with so many Continental Troops as can be spared from the fleet will land, mark out a few Works & lay down an encampment on the Florida Shore—Intermitting Showers

Intelligence is Rec^d that Gen: Scriven¹¹ is on his March & that he may be Expected here to Day or tomorrow

The Governor is yet at Reids bluff.¹²

THOMAS SHAW TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL OF CONNECTICUT

Sir

New London June 24 1778

This is to inform your Excellency that on y^e 21st. Inst. Jason Chester¹ & C^o. belonging to arm’d Whale Boats have taken of [f] Long Island & bro’t to this Town Tho^s Fanning & Tho^s Willson, and delivered them to me as Commiss^y of Prisoners (in the absence of my brother²) & by the Advice of the Authority here, I have sent them to the Sheriff at Norwich to hold in Custody untill Committed or discharged by proper Authority, & at the same time desired the State Attorney to look into the matter. Those persons that bro’t over Fanning have nothing in particular against him, only the general voice that he is a Tory. Willson they found tending a saw mill & bro’t him off knowing him to be one from hence to the enemy; he must be rather a hurt to them then any Service, as he is a poor miserable wretch. As for getting either of them exchanged is very improbable especially the latter. With submission, I think that these kind of expedition on Long Island should be check’d—as they are carried on by men without principle—they have in one instance given out on the Island that they had Orders from Gov^r. Trumbull to Plunder &^c. and as you will see by the inclosed Letter that M^r Shaw encouraged them to bring of [f] Fanning, & at the same time was in Boston. I am intirely unacquainted with this Young & know not what Credet ought to be given to it. I dont mean to have them discouraged from taking our enimes on Long Island in arms or bearing Commission under the English King, if in this they were to be encouraged perhaps it would be well.

There is one Osborn bro't from Long Island in the same way by Griffing³ which I sent to Norwich to the state Attorney, who promised to write your Excellency for advice &^c.

I have nothing new to communicate—only m^r Sheffield of Stonington a prize master of a prize to y^c *American Revenue*⁴ made his escape from New York & arrived in this Town last Friday He informs that the enemy have four prison ships, on board of which are about Seven hundred Prisoners, half of which are French-men; he was on board only Six days, being ordered on shore to attend the Court of Admiralty, made his escape by the help of a Gentleman there who secreted him & set him over on Staaten Island. The suffering of the prisoners on board these Ships by his Acco^t are beyond any description. The hot Season coming on makes it very Sickly, in the short time he was on board three of his people died & five or Six every day he was on board. I purpose to attempt giving a description by this Mans Acco^t of their Sufferings for the nex [t] weeks N. Lond. Paper.⁵

I so far compassionated those wretches on our prison ship as to write M^r Williams on the expediency of exchanging them, looking upon them as a pawn in our hands of the lives of our bretheren, & whether I might wright to New York and propose the exchange of the whole, and at the same time as I had a Flag going to N Y would have him send me Eight or Ten for a Trial, which he has sent, but fail'd in sending me an answere, which has prevented my writing to N York on this Subject. However have sent the Ten together with three & twenty more that I pick'd up here—hope to have a return soon. I desired M^r Williams to advise with your Excellency on exchanging the whole of the prisoners at Norwich, & I wish that every one might be sought out & sent down to N York, willing or unwilling to go, that the Lives of our Country men might be saved & that from the horridest of all deaths. I am [&c.]

Tho^s Shaw

In Confidence,

Query, By men being bro't of [f] the Island, are they not more fully acquainted who is Friend & who is Foes on the Island, are they not sour'd & imbittered, will they not on their return persecute & distress our Friends?

Any belonging to New York State ought not they to be sent there?

But as for Willson if he could be banished without any further expence to the State by tryal &^c believe it would give great satisfaction—whether he can hurt our friends on the Island is matter of consideration, but believe him to be such a drunken Fellow that he cannot do much hurt

I beg your Excellencys pardon & am with all Respect &^c

1. According to the Journal of H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Raven, Comdr. John Stanhope, commander, armed boats from Raven, H.M. frigate Fowey, H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Swan, and H.M. brig Halifax, joined those from Diligent in attacking the American raiders. UKLPR, Adm. 51/771. The Connecticut Journal reported on 1 July that "17 or 18 armed Boats" attacked the Americans as they neared "Stanford [Conn.] harbor."

2. The journal entry for 25 June of H.M. frigate Fowey, Capt. Henry Colins, commander, and the records of the Vice Admiralty Court of New York identify the captured vessels as the 8-gun Rhode Island privateer General Arnold, Capt. Paul Anderson Cartwright, and the 6-gun privateer Mehitable, Capt. Daniel Jackson. UklPR, Adm. 51/367; List & Index Society, vol. 27 (Records of the High Court of Admiralty 32 Prize Papers) [London: H.M. Stationery Office, 1967], pp. 263 and 306; for more on the General Arnold, see August Newman and Joseph Sherman to Gov. William Greene of Rhode Island, 20 May, NDAR 12: 402–3. Comdr. Stanhope reported that the British also took one whaleboat and recaptured the “wood Sloop” that the Americans had “taken in the morning,” despite vigorous American opposition that subjected the British boats to “a very hot fire.” UklPR, Adm. 51/771. The Connecticut Journal reported that after a “smart Engagement of several Hours,” the British captured “two small Privateers,” three whaleboats, and retook the American prize. Both Raven’s journal and The Connecticut Journal agreed that 24 Americans were killed or captured, while the journal of H.M. frigate Fowey stated that 23 Americans were killed and 25 were captured.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO JOHN WEREAT

Sir

[York, Pa.] June 24th 1778

We have received your favour of the 18th May advising the Capturing of three of the enemies Vessels by the Gallies under the Command of Oliver Bowen esq^r and approve of your intention to purchase the said Vessels for account of the United States which we expect you have executed and that they are employed in assisting of the Continental Troops upon the expedition to the southward.¹ We expect shortly to have from you an account of your proceedings in that business.² We enclose herewith a set of Rules & Regulations for the Navy and a Resolve of the Congress of the 30th of October 1776 for your government³ a new set of Rules & Regulations for the Navy are now forming when they are finished we shall send you Coppies thereof⁴ in the mean time We are with much regard Sir [&c]

THE GAZETTE, OF THE STATE OF SOUTH-CAROLINA, WEDNESDAY,

CHARLES-TOWN, June 24.

Last Monday se’nnight Capt. Richard commander of the Theresa of Nantes,¹ gave an elegant entertainment on board his ship, to a numerous company of foreign gentlemen and inhabitants, on the joyful occasion of the late alliance between France and the United States, which was conducted in a manner as much to his honour, as it was satisfactory to his guests. The ship was decorated with a variety of colours, and fired 13 guns after each principal toast, the first of which was Louis XVI King of France. Captain Daniel’s sloop *Volant*² was also decorated with colours and fired; and all the other French vessels in the harbour followed the fire of these two vessels. The Connecticut state ship, Oliver Cromwell, also fired 13 guns, upon the King of France's health being drank.³

Yesterday se'nnight both the pilot boats that attend the bar of this harbour, were chased in by a sloop, supposed to be the privateer Active, of Liverpool, Capt. Powell, from St. Augustine.⁴

On Wednesday the same sloop was again seen, S. of the Light-House, standing off S. by E. At the same time, a brig and a sloop, not having a friendly appearance, were discovered S.E. of the bar, standing to the N.E.—Having passed to the Northward of Sullivant's Island, they hawled off more Easterly, in the evening.

The same evening, Capt. Samuel Stone, late master of the sloop Little Sue, of and for this port, from St. Croix, came to town from North-Edisto, having been taken the preceding Monday night, at eleven o'clock, by a brig of 10 six, 4 four, and 2 three-pounder guns, called the Enterprize, and commanded by Capt. David Squires;⁵ who had been fitted out at New-York, but not being able to get a commission there, went 7 weeks since to Bermuda, where he procured one from Governor Bruere. As soon as the commission was obtained, Capt. Squires cut a large sloop belonging to this port, called the Welcome,⁶ out of Ellis's harbour, and then came to cruize on these coasts, where he has taken, besides Captain Stone's vessel, a schooner commanded by Capt. Rains, and a sloop, Capt. Stiles,⁷ both from Georgia, and 4 other vessels.—Capt. Squire's behaviour to his prisoners was very polite and humane; nothing was taken from them, nor any of their chests searched. He gave Captain Stone his boat, and leave to take all that belonged to him that he could carry, and on Tuesday morning stood in as near Stono as he could venture, in order to see him safe. He also gave at the same time, another boat to Capt. Stiles, who is gone for Georgia.—When Capt. Stone left the brig, her crew did not consist of more than 35 men. The day before, Capt. Squires spoke with the Active, so that it is probable, the vessels seen off the bar this day were, the Enterprize and Little Sue, and the Active. The Enterprize intended to cruize near Okerecock⁸ for some tobacco vessel.

Last Friday morning sailed upon a cruize the Connecticut state ship Defence, commanded by Samuel Smedley, Esq; and the sloop Volant, commanded by Capt. Oliver Daniel, and before night took two privateer sloops fitted out from St. Augustine, viz. the Governor Tonyn's Revenge, of 12 carriage guns and 72 men, commanded by Capt. Peter Bachop;⁹ and the Ranger of 8 guns and 35 men, Captain Osborn commander;¹⁰ who were both brought into port the next day. The Active privateer of Liverpool, of 12 guns, and 57 men, would have been likewise taken, but took advantage of the near approach of night and thick weather, and made off, while the prisoners on board Bachop were securing, and Osborn was coming up. It reflects particular honour on Capt. Smedley, that immediately, upon His Excellency the President's¹¹ application to that gentleman, he had his ship prepared and ready for sea by Wednesday evening, notwithstanding the difficulties of her then performing quarantine in Rebellion Road;¹² Capt. Daniel's vessel was unloaded, manned with volunteers and proceeded to the Road on Tuesday night; and the service was greatly forwarded by the animated exertions of Commodore Gillon, who, with Capt. Robinson, and Capt M'Queen afterwards went volunteers in the ship.¹³

[Lord Romney’s plantation, St. Christopher’s, Leeward Islands]

June 24, 1778 . . . Our Company at Dinner, besides our own party, were as follows, V^{izt.}, Cap^t Crass¹ and one of his Lieut^s of the Thetis, a Dutch 24-Gun Ship now laying at old Road, Mr. Bees, a Dutch Gentleman of uncommon strength, Mr. Virchild, &c &c.

Cap^t Crass, of the abovementioned Dutch Man of War, came here as usual, for a supply of Water; but it seems he has been refused taking any on board, by General Burt,² on acco^t of the American Flag, being permitted to fly at S^t Eustatia; and suspecting, from the very freq^t trips, the Dutch Ships make to this place, for that necessary article, that they supply the American Privateers &c, with it. They will hereafter, be obliged to go as far as Guadaloupe, being the nearest Island, to S^t Eustatia, where Fresh Water, can be procured. . . .

JOHN BRADFORD TO CONTINENTAL COMMERCE COMMITTEE

Hon^{ble} GentlemenBoston 24th June 1778

I Beg leave to Acquaint you, that when the Ships *henneritta*¹ & *Three Friends*² Arrived in this port, the former without any papers, Captain Brown who commanded her told me he knew not the Contents of the Cargo or to whome it was to be delivered. But supposed it principally belonged to the hon^{ble} M^r Morris,³ and having orders to receive any Goods that might Arrive here on his Account, I took Charge of them, The Other ship Arriving a few days After, the Supercargo⁴ told me, the Goods ship'd by M^r John Ross at Rochfort were on the same Acco^t with those ship'd by Brown, and delivered them Also into my Charge. they are safely stored. I imediately On the Arrival of the Vessels Advis'd M^r Morris therewith,⁵ Supposing the Cargoes were on his private Account, But long Ere this it is known by the hon^{ble} Commercial Board,⁶ for whose Account those Goods were ship'd, As the Three Friends brought the Duplicates of the heneritta's Invoices &^{ca}. Which must have Reached You some time since. By Conversing with Cap^t Green⁷ who Commands the Queen of France,⁸ I have reason to believe that those Cargoes are partly on Account of the publick, and partly on private Account, I shall be happy in following any orders The Commercial Board may please to give me respecting those Goods, or any other Commands they may be pleased to favour me with, It gives me pain to inform you that the Brig Tryton Cap^t Collis⁹ was taken, and sent into Guernsy, And lately, scarcely any vessels inward Bound have escaped the Enemy, this day a Flag returned here from hallifax, which place they left this day week, in her came the third Lieu^t.¹⁰ of the Ship Boston,¹¹ who was Retaken, prize master of a very rich ship,¹² he says worth 74,000 Sterling, taken by the Boston within one hundred & fifty Leagues of Cape Finnister,¹³ when retaken he was within twelve hours sail of Boston, this gentleman Assures us, the Frigates are Called home to hallifax from their respective Cruizes. that without distinction the Prisoners are Closely Confined, and neither suffered to see, or receive Letters from any person in the town, the General Conjecture of the prisoners was, that they Expected a Visit, from some quarter, As they were repairing their works & making redoubts &^c they have very lately sent in three Privateers. viz the Blaze Castle,¹⁴ the *Wexford*¹⁵ & the Washington,¹⁶ I hope in time our Frigates will Again make their Appearance at Sea, The Boston was Chased by two frigates off this Coast for thirty six hours, and play'd with them,¹⁷ pity it is her fast sailing trim was not found out before. I have the honor to be with all due respect Hon^{ble}.
Sirs [&c.]

J: Bradford

The hon^{ble} Timothy Pickering has in Consequence of an Application made to the board of War for Musquets, ordered me to deliver to the Order of the Gov^r & Council of the state of Rhode Island, the forty Chests received by the three friends. if on publick Account, which I hope to days post will determine, if they belong to the publick shall get y^m. valued & deliver them.¹⁸

Honorable Sirs

Boston 25th June 1778

The foregoing I confirm the former part of which I trust will in some measure Appologize for my not troubling the hon^{ble}. Commercial Committee with the Acc^o. of the Arrival of the ships Heneritta & Le Brune (now the Queen of France) as immediately on the first intimation I Received that it was Supposed part of their Cargoes were on publick Account, I had wrote the foregoing, the Cargoes of the two ships remain entire saving some part of the Lead Which I have lately sent to Springfield in order to make out a proper Weight for the Carts that had been Carrying away the Sulphur & nitre which came in the dispatch,¹⁹ two Casks being too heavy & one too light I shall make Application to the Navy Board²⁰ as directed But no papers Yet Appear from M^r Morris. I Earnestly Expected them the last Evg by post. the hon^{ble}. Committee are Sensible it will be attended with every Inconvenience to touch the Goods till the Invoices arrive. And from [that] time your Orders shall be most punctually obeyed. by not delivering any Goods but to the Order of Congress, the Commercial Committees order, or the Order of the Continental Board of War, I very Sensibly feel your reproof for exceeding the bounds of my duty in the purchase of a part of the Mermaids cargo without your orders and Distributing them to the Several departments here.²¹ that cargo was Sold at vendue saving the Articles wanted for the publick A sample of Each was sold to Make a price for the Whole, and it amounted to much more money than I Expected, the Clothiers were in the greatest Necessity at that time for the Articles I Delivered them, & the Next post will bring You a dra^t for their Amount The Navy Board was Also in want and as they have lately taken the Supply of the Navy into their own hands I delivered them All the Goods Suitable for that purpose. What I delivered to the D Q M G.²² they produced their orders from the Board for Goods at that time were very scarce & the Clothiers Suffering for want, the 4000 dollars in favour of Cap^t Brown was to Enable me to pay the Agent for them Goods.²³ I am much Obligated by your honorg the dra^t and shall Carefully make it my study to retain that respect, which was your inducement to do it, and for the future will never more [go] beyond my line; When I Advised the Marine Board²⁴ with the Arrival of the Mermaid, I suppos'd that part of the Members of that Board were also members of the Commercial Committee which has been formerly the Case, and at that time being much hurried and having but Little help was the Occasion of my neglect in [not] giving the information Due to the Commercial Committee, Your information of my having wrote to the Board of war Respecting the Arrival of the Heneritta Could only Arise from my making a return to that board of the Arrival of a parcell Lead in that Ship & forty Chests of Arms in the three friends. I am thoroughly impress'd that I am not to confer with that board on Commercial matters

I will endeavour to furnish the honble Committee with the Account of the Continental part of the prizes taken by the Sloop *providence*²⁵ & Warren Frigate²⁶ by next post. I was not Culpable by not being more particular respecting the french Ships²⁷ arriving at portsm^o²⁸ As I had it only from Mumford the post, who was from Exeter and Could give no farther Information And as M^r Langdon²⁹ was on the Spot I knew he would give the particulars, I thank you very kindly for the Good opinion You entertain of my being actuated by the best of Motives and can with great truth say my whole Attention is employed in the publick Service, having done with All private concerns Fifteen Months Since, and to give Satisfaction to my Constituents is the highest ambition I have, which if I can Effect will make me happy. I have the honour to be with every Sentiment of Respect [&c.]

COMMODORE ALEXANDER GILLON, SOUTH CAROLINA NAVY, TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir

Chares Town S Carolina 25 June 78

I am much indebted to you for your very kind favour of y^e 4th past¹ with it I rec^d. A letter from y^e Commercial Committee inclosing A Resolve of Congress which assigns y^e Reasons why I was not to pursue my Contract² with them, all I wish'd for was to have it known & believ'd that I did not accept of my present Command³ but with this Proviso that Congress acquiesced in it in conseq^c. of my App^t here being prior to my contract with them as I always held myself engag'd to them & shou'd most certainly have exerted my utmost to've executed y^e Contract had they not consented to y^e app^t here As to y^e Gentleman who Observ'd that had he been in Congress y^e Bargain with me shou'd not have been concluded⁴ must have suppos'd himself to have had very much influence in Congress indeed I lament that those whom I think myself entitled too to look up too as my friends did not Remark to that Gentleⁿ. the Reason why I was debar'd of going to Europe to perform my other Contract, you know Sir that by y^e fatigues of going from one End of y^e State to y^e other to procure Vessels, Seaman & c^e caus'd A very Alarming Attack of A Complaint that had reduc'd me much several times before & tho I had my baggage & every thing onb^d. so as to depart in 24 Hours it was pointed out to me as certain Death to go to Sea, but to immedly set off [/] for y^e Northw^d at my leisure by Land Query then which was most for y^e Interest of this Continent, my going to Sea to be thereby totally depriving Congress of getting what was so much wanted or else to send one of my partners who was healthy & equal to y^e business. Answer y^e Latter was, because he compleated what he went for & as to y^e acct^s not being settled that Gentleⁿ. will send very weighty Reasons for, in my letter to y^e Commercial Board inclosing them & as your hurry of Affairs may not admit your perusing that letter (which I wish you cou'd) I quote you y^e Reasons I never rec^d. A/ Sales of one of y^e Cargoes as it wou'd not sell in Cadiz (say y^e Indigo) but was reshipd & my partner rec^d. a Credit equal to what was suppos'd it wou'd nett, besides I knew y^e ball^e wou'd be trifling either way thus I wanted no after acct^s. & had I not been quitting y^e Continent for A while I wou'd wished to've postpond sending any acct^s. till I had Rec^d. y^e above A/s but I have sent them now & I flatter myself on examining them it will appear that my Contract has been y^e best executed of any made of that kind & most sincerely do I wish that that Gentleⁿ. as a member of y^e Community in General may find Every contract he Knows of or has y^e adjusting of as faithfully compleated as mine thus instead of being Reflected on I thought to have Rec^d. thanks for Risking £45,000 this being of my own property at A time so early that many had hardly determin'd what part to take in y^e American Opposition, but Sir I did it with pleasure & at y^e Repeated Request of 6 Gentlemen of Congress I had y^e pleasure of being acq^d.

with & I Glory in saying, y^e Exports was made on y^e best terms practicable from here they all got safe to Europe[,] was Sold to A profit of 36 p C^t or thereabouts, that one half of y^e Nett proceeds has there laid out on acc^t of y^e Continent in Powder Arms &c^a on as good terms & as good in quality as cou'd be procur'd in France & deliv'd to them at first Cost; that ab^t Lv^s 49000—of my Moneys was laid out in same Manner & deliv'd to their order at y^e very Moderate Advance of 131¹/₃ p C^t that y^e remaining part of my funds in this Contract was expended to pay for Bills I had accepted to pay in Lisbon or Cadiz & Some foreign debts that my partners saying Americans cannot expect to pay our debts was of any force thus I was compell'd to Use A little of my own Moneys, to my own disadvantage without injuring y^e Continent, & above all no part of these adventures either going or coming was taken, Pardon me for troubling you So much to explain this matter to you that you may be able to judge how far I merit Applause or Censure & to Vindicate y^e Character of one who as A Citizen of y^e State you Represent, takes y^e liberty of saying he Claims your protection. y^e Small bal^{ce} due I've Required them to order how it is to be paid, I expect to Set of[f] for Europe in 10 days to procure y^e Frigates I am to Direct^s which I shall try to keep together to protect this Coast & Trade or Obey any other Orders I may Receive, if there is any thing I can do in France that will give you pleasure permit me to Receive your directions thereon under Cover to Mess^{rs}. H,L, Chaurand freres Merch^{ts}. Nantes⁶ will you present my best Respects to your promising & worthy Son⁷ & believe me that I am happy in having y^e Honour to Subscribe myself Your Excellencies Most Obed^t [&c.]

JAMES WARREN TO SAMUEL ADAMS

[Extract]

My dear Sir

Boston June 26. 1778

I have had the great pleasure of receiving your several favours, ph Blaisford,¹ Cap^t Barry.² & one by an Unknown hand. . . .

I am Extreemly Glad to find you on the Marine Committee. for Notwithstanding you have not been used to Naval Matters. I Conceive you will do great Service there. I shall write to you often the little time I shall be Connected with you in that Station. & very freely. for the Subject must be better Understood. & more Attended to. or the Navy given up. though I Conceive it will soon be more Important & more necessary than An Army. did your Committee attend to this matter would they write us that they hoped 50,000 dollars would supply all our demands for sometime. we received that Money. we have recv^d. the greatest part of 80,000. dollars. we drew for in favour of M^r Shaw.³ & this Morning we had not A 100 dollars in the office. & if Cap^t Bradford⁴ had not been good enough to Supply us with £1000. we could not have p^d. the Bounty to Seamen this day Entered. we must stop payment of all Bills. however reasonable or Justly due. or however hard we are duned. where to look next. or what is to be done next week I know not. this is Indeed Embarrassing. why Sir we want 500,000 dollars if it be meant we should do any thing to purpose. is it feared we shall Squander profusely. or apply fraudulently. our Accounts will be at any time ready. in three days for the strictest Scrutiny. I am my Friend also Mortified. & it is hard to be both perplexed & Mortified, while we work for Nothing. & spend necessarily more than our pay. Many things take place to make me feel very small in this office. to say nothing of our Inability to Answer the Expectations of the public & of their never knowing the reason; why when you have Appointed Captains in the Navy cant it be left to us to say which shall go in any Ship here on A vacancy. & while we & every Body else sees the service suffering must we wait for an Appointment from the Marine Committee. they Expect the *Raleigh*⁵ is prepared for the Sea. but two days ago a Captain for her Arrived here.⁶ & every Body acquainted with Seamen must know they will not Engage in A Ship till they know the Captain. the public have Clamoured. to save our Reputation. we have been Obliged to take pains to let it be known. that you dare not trust us so far. the Brig^t Resistance has lai[n] some time. to get her to sea we appointed or rather order[ed] Cap^t Olney⁷ to take Command of her. he is A deserving Officer. & I think would make A figure in A better Vessel. he readily obeyed & things were going on finely. An Appointment Arrives for Burke.⁸ he may be A good Officer but besides the Mortification to us. the Brig^t will be delayed. My favourite plan was to get A Number of these Vessels to Sea in Company. Your Committee have Approved. & desired it, but how is it possible. the Raleigh would have been ready for the Sea. if she had A Captain. she has now no Men. you have Appointed A Good one. I believe we shall Man her soon. but the Warren is almost Manned.⁹ Must she wait for her. I wish you would make that A Question & give me An Answer. Why when you have packets of Importance to be sent to Your Commissioners must they go through the hands of the Council of this State in Vessels provided by us.¹⁰ are your own Immediate Officers, Insufficient for such A purpose? if not it seemed a more regular Channel of Conveyance. if they are you may form a Board here of persons as Competent to that or any other purpose as the Council. & I will be ready to resign & make way for such An Appointment. I wont mention some Other Instances. because I wont be tedious. I own I am A proud fellow. but after all it is a subordinate passion to my Wishes for the Good of the Voyage. I am well pleased that you have given A Name to the New frigate at Salisbury.¹¹ and that it is A New One.

I hope our Friend Adams is safe Arrived we hear so. & believe it. 22 days after they were out. they took perhaps the richest prize that has been made this War.¹² she was retaken on this Coast & Carried to Hallifax. within 14 hours sail of this Port. she made some resistance. Our Friend¹³ would keep the Deck. & shew great Marks of Courage, tho the first Shot cut away the Mizzen Topsail or Cross Jack Yard over his head. . . . & am assuredly yours

CAPTAIN WILLIS WILSON, VIRGINIA NAVY, TO GOVERNOR RICHARD CASWELL OF NORTH CAROLINA

Sir

Caswell, Ococock 26th June 1778

I Sent a Pilot and Crew to Beaufort after our Tender¹ and have receivd her at this place, but in a most wrecked condition, in So much, that She has drove from her anchors twice, and once had near been lost, I have got her alongside the Caswell, heaving her down to Stop her leaks—

The enemy (one Ship two Sloops & a Brigg) take a peep at Us every now & then— but are not dispos'd to venture in, Some few arrivals Since I last wrote your Excellency. The pilots of Ococock have finally Stop'd bringing in or carrying out vessels, having enterd in an association to that purpose, the reasons they give me for this extraordinary Step is; that having no branches, they are liable to a penalty for taking charge of any Vessell, and that they will not take branches because the Legislative have rated their pilotage at too low a price, being all in a Clan, I fear our trade will be hurt by the Infamy of these people—Pursuant to your Excellencies recommendation I have wrote to Rich^d. Ellis, Esq^r to know if he will accept the agency for the Ship² as our Crew are beginning to be taking down very fast with Scurvies attended with fluxes, which fish

(the only fresh provision to be got here) Docter Cooley does not approve of in the latter disorder. I hear there is fresh beef to be purchased at Marm[illeg.] which will be much cheaper, as well as more wholesome for the Crew. Have wrote to M^r Ellis for a Barrell Brown Sugar a bag Coffee a Hogshead Rum and a ditto of Molasses, being quite out of those articles, will be exceedingly obligd to your Excellency to hurry the paymaster with our money, as we are all distitute of that Necessary article, at present & the whole in great want. I am your Excellencies [&c.]

P.S. I am distressd for Commission Officers having only M^r Cheshire the Master of the Ship on Board at present, and not another officer I can depend upon, as a Seaman, if your Excellency knows of any, that woud make a good second Lieu^t will esteem it a favor if youl Commission him, otherwise please Lend a ~~Blank~~ Commⁿ of Lieu^t for M^r Cheshire who is now Master & a good officer—³ Docter Cooley Waits on Your Excellency, in want of Med'cine, he is an assiduous Gentleman in his duty to the Sick—⁴ if M^r Ellis declines to furnish us, I hope Your Excellency will appoint, or order us the things wrote for to M^r Ellis— Your Excellency's obd^t [&c.]

ALEXANDER ROSE AND JOHN TORRANS TO COLONEL JOSEPH TRUMBULL

Sir,

Charlestown South Carolina June 26th. 1778.

We refer, to what we had the honour of writing you on the 3^d instant¹ on the arrival here of the Captains Parker² and Smedley³; And have now the pleasure to Acquaint you of a short but successful Cruise which Captain Smedley undertook since in the Defence.

On receiving intelligence of several of the Enemys privateers being on our coast & annoying our trade with impunity, Cap^t Smedley (notwithstanding he was at the time performing quarantine for the small pox) on an application from His Excellency our President,⁴ fitted out the Defence immediately, being assisted by Commodore Gilton⁵ & Captains Robeson⁶ & MacQueen⁷ (all in the sea service of this State) And last friday⁸ sailed over our Bar in quest of them, having in Company with him a French Armed Sloop called the Volant, Commanded by Cap^t Daniel⁹ who voluntarily offered his Service on the occasion.

Before night they fell in with Three privateer Sloops, two of which they took & prove to be the Tonyn's revenge Commanded by Cap^t Peter Bachop of 12 Carriage guns besides sweevles & 72 men. The other is the Ranger of 8 guns & 35 men Commanded by Cap^t Osborn¹⁰ & both belonging to S^t Augustine The other¹¹ got off while Cap^t Smedley was securing his prisoners the weather proving heavy & night coming on—

The Defence and Volant, with their two prizes, Returned into Port the next day And the Defence is now out of quarantine Cap^t Smedley has acquired great Reputation on this occasion & has done an essential Service to the commercia[l] interest of this State.—

The prizes have been libeled in the Court of Admiral[ty] in the names of Captains Smedley & Daniel And we on behalf of your State have claimed half of what may be adjudged to the Defence, which will we hope go a great way towards paying the expences & outfit of the Oliver Cromwell & Defence.

We hope in a few days that Cap^t Parker will be ready to receive his Indigo & when it is on board we shall give you the earliest notice of it with whatever else may occur.
We are with the greatest regard D^r Sir [&c.]

Rose & Torrans.

THE PROVIDENCE GAZETTE; AND COUNTRY JOURNAL
SATURDAY, JUNE 27, 1778

PROVIDENCE, June 27.

On Wednesday arrived at Head-Quarters Mr. Thomas Gates, acting Lieutenant, and Mr. Henry Stevens, Surgeon's Mate, of the Lark Frigate.¹ Being weary of the British Navy, and sensible of the Injustice of carrying on the War against America, they determined to quit so disagreeable a Service; they accordingly went from the Ship to Newport, where they purchased a Boat, and in the Night rowed over to Point-Judith, and surrendered themselves to our Guards, from whence they were conducted here.

Sunday Night last, four fishing Boats from Newport were captured in the Bay by a Whaleboat, and ten Men made Prisoners, among which are the Gunner and Carpenter of one of the Enemy's Ships.

Since our last a Number of the Inhabitants of Bristol and Warren, who were captured by the Enemy in their late burning Expedition to those Towns, have returned in a flag of Truce. Three or four other prisoners, taken at the same Time, are returned on Parole.

The Privateer Ship Blaze-Castle, Capt. James Munroe, of this Port, was lately captured by the Unicorn British Frigate, and carried into Halifax.² Capt. Munroe had previously taken and manned five Prizes, which greatly reduced his Crew; and the few Hands that remained refusing to support him, he was compelled to the hard Necessity of striking without firing a Gun.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

My Dear Sir—

Portsmouth,¹ [N.H.] June 29, 1778,

I have sometime expected to be favored with a line from you, but have not yet been so happy,² though by other hands I have had the pleasure to hear of your arrival. I hope by this time your colleague has happily passed through the small-pox—please present my best regards to him;³ I could wish to be informed of his health, how he like his present employment, &c., &c. by his own hand.

. . . I wish I had something new or entertaining to give you, but I have not; we have not even had any prizes lately arrived, but several of our privateers have been taken,⁴ and the jails at Halifax are full of American prisoners, where they are treated as usual, some compelled to go on board their ships,⁵ others starved to death in prison. By the last accounts, between four and five hundred were there treated in the most inhuman manner by those barbarians, who still laugh at our threats of retaliation, and well they may when our officers suffer themselves to be insulted in the grossest manner by prisoners; general Phillips⁶ letter to general Heath,⁷ is an instance of their insufferable impudence—but I must quit this subject, for I find the recollection of those matters will soon put me out of all temper.

I find it is determined to go on with the ships that were originally designed for 74's, on a plan that is proposed by Mr. Landais.⁸ This plan I have been informed of, and am much surprised that the committee should adopt it, for sure I am those ships never will be got to sea with two tiers of guns. I cannot conceive what arguments Mr. Landais could use to persuade the committee that a ship with fifty-six twenty-four and eighteen pounders, on two decks, will fight as good a battle as a seventy-four that carries fifty-six, fifty-two,⁹ and eighteen pounders, besides her quarter-deckers. The fifty-six gun ship is under the same disadvantage of fighting her heaviest guns between decks, that a seventy-four is; her lower guns will be as near the water, within a small trifle, as the seventy-four's. But she is to cost much less, that is true; she will cost as much less as fifty-six guns will cost less than seventy-four, and that, I am sure, is all the difference in the cost. But then, again, she will require fewer men; that I also agree to: she will not require as many men by one hundred as a seventy-four. She is also to sail much faster, as she will swim two or three inches lighter; it is probable she may sail a trifle faster, but there can be no material difference in their sailing. I understand that Mr. Landais is appointed a captain in the American navy—¹⁰ perhaps he is to command one of these ships—I must allow that a two-decker will have much genteeler accommodations for officers than a ship that carries only one tier of guns; and experience has taught us, that our officers, both by land and sea, are fond of becoming genteely accommodated; perhaps this consideration may, in some measure, have influenced Mr. Landais' opinion in favor of two-deckers; otherwise, if he is really acquainted with maritime matters and the peculiar circumstances of America, I think he would give the preference to such ships as I sometime ago proposed to Mr. Ellery;¹¹ which was to turn those ships that were designed for seventy-fours, into frigates that might mount thirty-two thirty-two-pounders on the gun deck, and fourteen twelve's on the quarter-deck and fore-castle. They will carry their heavy guns between three and four feet higher than Mr. Landais' fifty-six gun-ship will carry her lower tier, consequently will be able to fight them as long as any two-decker can fight her upper tier, and will have an inconceivable advantage in fighting those heavy guns on an upper deck. They would swim more than a foot lighter than the fifty-six gun-ship, and would have much less top hamper; consequently, would sail much faster, and cost much less, and would not require so many men by one-fourth.

If it is not too late, I could wish the experiment might be made with one of them. I have not heard whether Mr. Morris¹² is returned to congress or not; if he is, and should think worth while to consider my plan, I flatter myself he would not disapprove it, for I know him to be a very good judge of those affairs. But, perhaps, it is too late to make any alteration in the plan, I must therefore leave it to your discretion to take any notice of what I say on the subject or not; but I must take the liberty to predict that those two-deckers will never go to sea; and I believe I may venture to say, that the frigates that are in Boston will never get to sea till a stop is put to privateering. As to our state affairs I must refer you to those of your correspondents who are on the stage of action, as they can much better inform you than is in my power.

Please present my most respectful compliments to those gentlemen who you know I esteem, and accept for yourself the best wishes of your very affectionate friend and Most obedient, humble servant,

W^m: Whipple

PROTEST OF CAPTAIN HECTOR McNEILL, CONTINENTAL NAVY, AGAINST HIS COURT-MARTIAL

Hector M^cNeill, Protests against the doings and proceedings of the Courtmartial held on Board the Raleigh in Boston Harbour between the 9th. and 24th. of June 1778, On a Complaint Exhibited by the Hon^{ble}. Navy Board, for the Eastern Department, against the said Hector M^cNeill, for Misconduct and Neglect of Duty comprized in six Articles of Charge.—

The Protests

1st. Because a Courtmartial Constituted cheifly of Men, totally unacquainted with War-like operations at Sea, (some of whom not being Seamen, are unacquainted with Ships in general, more especially Ships of Warr) cannot possibly be competant Judges of the Conduct of a Captain of a Ship of Warr, so as to determine upon his Life, or Character; Especially where the manœvering of a Ship, is the point in question such Men having no knowledge of their own in these affairs, can only be governed by the Opinions of other Men, and Consequently are as liable to Vote wrong as right, Especially where the Minds of particular Members of the Court are prejudiced, either for or against the person on Trial.—

2^{dly}. Because, the Courtmartial did Introduce a Certain Mode of Conduct, in the Trial of Cap^t Manley,¹ which Mode was not followed in the present Trial.—The Mode spoken of as Introduced on the Trial of Cap^t Manley was, That all the Evidence in Support of the Charge should be first heard and the Accusers observations deduced therefrom, before the Person accused should be put on his defence,—after which the Accuser was not to reply, or Animadvert on the Prisoners defence—The above Rule was strictly followed in Cap^t Manley's Trial.—but was not adher'd to, in M^cNeill's; on the Contrary the Judge Advocate acted as the Accuser, produced what Evidence he could to support the Accusation, after which, he sum'd up the whole with his own Remark[s] which according to the Mode spoken of (in Captain Manleys Trial,) was all he ought to have done on that side of the Question.—but not Contented with all this, he has remarked severely on some of the Evidence, and rejected others, which were offer'd in defence of the party Accused, and he has also Animadverted on the said persons defence.

3^{thly}. Because, the deposition of Benjamin Crowninshield² taken before a Majestrate at Salem, the very day the said Crowninshield went to Sea (which happen'd also during the recess of the Courtmartial) was rejected, and not admitted as Evidence in the Court aforesaid.—

4^{thly}. Because, all the Articles of Charge except the Third Article, were repeatedly given up, the Judge Advocate saying that only would be Insisted on.—Whereas in the diffinitive Sentence, the first Article is revived, and part of the Fourth, is also said to be found by the Court, even after the party Accused had made his defence, without thinking it necessary to be particular on those points which had been given up.—the Court appearing Satisfied that they were not to be Insisted upon any further.

5^{thly}. Because, the said Courtmartial in their Sentence of the 24th June 1778,³ have presumed to give their opinion as Law.—without any refference whatsoever, to the Articles of Warr, thereby condemning a Man to perpetual Infamy, without compareing the Nature of the Supposed Offence, with the Rules and Regulations of the Service, as prescribed by the Hon^{ble}. the Continental Congress for the Government of the American Navy, or any article of Warr, whatever which is contrary to their Oath, and the decipline of the Sea Service.—

6^{thly}. Because, the Positions of the Ships on the 7th of July 1777. Exhibited by the said M^cNeill in December last to the Court of Enquiry,⁴ (and from their proceedings brought into the present Courtmartial) were not adverted to by the Court, but another sett of positions, drawn by a person in the Town of Boston, who never had seen the Ship he pretends to discribe, nor had he any Original Memorandums, made at the time the Transaction happened, for his direction, but meerly to serve a Turn, in drawing these positions, Traced out the present (not the True) Ideas of the Officers most culpable, for the Misfortunes of that day; Whereas the Positions offer'd by M^cNeill, were done from Original Memorandums made by himself on the Spott, as the different Scene's turn'd up.—

7^{thly}. Because the Courtmartial did not agreeable to Law and Custom, make the said M^cNeill acquainted with their final Sentence against him which of right, they ought to have done Immediately after their determination, that he might have it in his power to enter his protest, or appeal, agreeable to his Natural Right.

NEW-YORK, June 30.

Sunday and yesterday the second and third division of the fleet from Delaware, arrived here under convoy: They left Cape Henlopen, last Friday forenoon, with a fair wind: When they had gained a sufficient offing to clear the shoals, a sail hove in sight to windward, and about the same time a sloop, at a considerable distance to leeward, a signal was made to the Bellahoe armed schooner¹ to chase the latter, and the fleet shortned sail, until the former joined them, she appeared to be a packet from England, the Bellahoe came up with the sloop, and found her to be a tender to one of his Majesty's ships upon which the fleet made more sail and stood on their course. On Saturday night, off Shrewsbury, they observed a great fire on the land, and on Sunday morning about sun rise, a conflagration appeared at two different places, not far distant from the first, supposed to be raised by the rebels, in order to destroy their magazines of provision and forage; to prevent them from falling into the hands of the royal army, now marching through the Jerseys.

Yesterday was sent in here, by the Letter of Marque brig Tryon, Captain Sibbles, of this port,² the brig Esther, Alexander Kennedy, late master, from James-river, bound for Boston, laden with 100 barrels of flour,³ 50 barrels of bread, and seven hogsheads of tobacco, taken off the capes of Virginia; a few days before, the Tryon took a French polacca of 150 tuns, bound to Virginia, which not having arrived, is supposed to have been re-taken. About three weeks ago Capt. Sibbles captured a sloop of 90 tuns, bound to Carolina, with 150 chests of tea on board; she was unfortunately lost upon the bar of St. Augustine, but the lives of her crew were saved.

Yesterday two cartel ships from Boston, having on board a number of the gentlemen of General Burgoyne's army, and other British officers, who have been held in captivity among the rebels, and are now to be exchanged, were spoke with between Sandy-Hook and Staten Island; the intelligence brought by them is, that previous to their departure from Boston, a French frigate had arrived there with intelligence so pleasing to the rebels, that they were elevated to the highest pitch of exultation.⁴

Last Wednesday a number of whale boats well manned, from Connecticut, convoyed by the Wild Cat galley, and a little sloop, formerly the Raven's tender, made their appearance at Lloyd's Neck,⁵ in order to harass his Majesty's wood cutters at that place, and soon took a boat then going out of the harbour, which they endeavoured to carry off, but they were immediately pursued and attacked by a number of boats from the ships, when the Wild Cat, the Raven's tender, and the wood boat were taken, as also some of the whale boats. Thirty men were made prisoners, and two killed, without any loss on our side.⁶

Friday last was sent into this port by the Prince of Wales privateer, Capt. Lee, of this port,⁷ the brig Patsey, Matcum, late Master, from Edentown, in North-Carolina, for France, with 200 hogsheads of tobacco, and some naval stores.⁸

1. This was perhaps Virginia pilot boat Ballahoo, tender to H.M. frigate Roebuck, Capt. Andrew Snape Hammond, commander.

2. New York privateer brig Tryon, Capt. George Sibbles. In a warrant dated 22 Oct. 1778, Tryon is described as carrying 16 carriage guns, 16 swivel guns, and a crew of 72. UkLPR, C.O. 5/1109, fol. 109.

3. The Pennsylvania Evening Post of 6 August includes a report taken from a letter from New York of 25 July that gives the cargo of Esther as "a thousand barrels of flour, fifty of bread, and seven hogsheads of tobacco."

4. These officers were referring to the arrival in Boston of the French Navy frigate Nymphe, Lieutenant de vaisseau Chevalier de Beaudot de Sainneville, commander. On board Nymphe was Capt. Harmon Courter who had been sent to Congress by the American Commissioners in France with copies of the Franco-American treaties, including the treaty of alliance. NDAR 11: 1014.

5. That is, Lloyd's Neck, Long Island, New York.

6. For a discussion of the engagement mentioned here, see Journal of H.M. armed brig Diligent, 24 June, above. As seen there, the captured vessels were the American privateers General Arnold and Mehitable. There was no mention of a Wild Cat galley.

7. New York privateer sloop Prince of Wales, Capt. Misper Lee. In a warrant dated 5 November 1778, Prince of Wales is described as carrying 4 guns, 8 swivel guns, and a 35-man crew. UkLPR, C.O. 5/1109, fol. 109.

8. Patsey was 180 tons burthen and carried a crew of eleven. UkLPR, Adm. 1/489, fols. 208–11. In a report on the capture published in the The New-York Gazette; and the Weekly Mercury, 29 June 1778, the name of the late master of Patsey is given as “Marcum.”

GOVERNOR RICHARD CASWELL OF NORTH CAROLINA TO RICHARD ELLIS

Sir,

Dobbs¹ 30th. June 1778—

Your favor of the 28th. Inst.² I have before me, 'tis true I advised Capt Wilson³ to appoint an agent for his ship at NewBern apprehending by that means he might be furnished with greater certainty and much more ease and convenience to himself and the Ships Crew. As to the money which may be expended for such necessaries as the Ship may want, it is to be paid in the usual way by the Governor's Warrant on the Treasury and charged to this State only. The assembly did not appoint an agent, I have received no Commissions or letters of Mart⁴ from the Gentleman who presides at Congress,⁵ I believe there are at NewBern one or two signed by M^r Hancock,⁶ if these will answer your purpose when I come to NewBern you can be supplied, this I expect will be about the 10th. of July, and at that time if you have not disposed of all you propose selling in the privateer,⁷ I will inform you what part will be agreeable to me to take, in the mean time, do not miss disposing of what shares you think proper.

I hope every son of Freedom who is also an American or an Inhabitant of any of the United States, will cheerfully celebrate the anniversary of our Independence⁸ but I must be excused giving any order for public powder on the occasion and also from lending it on any other occasion. the reasons are obvious to every one—and on reflection, I know this must strike you forcibly. I am dear Sir [&c.]

R. Caswell

LB, Nc-Ar, Executive Letter Book, p. 356. Addressed below close: “Rich^d Ellis Esqr—.”

1. By “Dobbs,” Caswell meant Dobbs County, which existed in 1778. In 1779, Wayne County was formed out of the greater part of Dobbs County; the remaining portions of the county were annexed to other counties. In 1791, Glasgow and Lenoir counties were created out of lands formerly included in Dobbs County.

2. See Ellis to Caswell, 28 June, above.

3. Capt. Willis Wilson, commanding the Virginia galley Caswell.

4. That is, letters of marque and reprisal.

5. Henry Laurens.

6. John Hancock, former President of the Continental Congress.

7. Brig Bellona. In his letter of 28 June, above, Ellis had proposed that Caswell become a part owner.

8. As seen in Capt. Richard Cogdell to Caswell, 4 July, below, they did celebrate Independence Day in New Bern.

GOVERNOR RICHARD CASWELL OF NORTH CAROLINA TO CAPTAIN WILLIS WILSON, VIRGINIA NAVY

Sir

Dobbs,¹ 30 June 1778

Your favor of the 26 Instⁿ.² I have before me am sorry the Tender was not delivered you in better fix Capt Easton informed me that at Time he purchased her she was much out of repair but that he Intended to have her properly overhalled & fixed

Your Pilots I fear are not Governed by the best principles in their Combinations, they have other views than Honest Men ought to have, but nothing can be done respecting them 'till the meeting of the Assembly

I have written to M^r. Ellis, from whom I received a Letter on the Subject of the Agency of your Ship.³ I imagine He will Accept it & Supply you whenever the paymaster can be Supplied with Money He shall be ordered to Attend and pay off your Crew⁴

I sent you Commissions for all the officers you required from NewBern, And without information whether the persons who were named in them refused to Accept them or have Conducted themselves unwo[r]thy I cannot think of Superseding their appointments

I at present consider D^r. Cooley as a Surgeon in the Service of the United States, if he is so, of Course he cannot be appointed to your Ship, However I shall lay your request regarding him before the Council who meet two days hence, and inform you their Resolutions thereon.⁵ I am Sir, [&c.]

Notes Made on board the Languedoc

July—1778

- Sunday 5. The *Zélé*¹ signaled trouble with its top crosstrees. At sunset saw the land from the heights of the masts. At 9:30 o'clock in the evening the Engageante reaches and attacks the privateer the Rose, which was taken possession of after 5 hours of battle.²
- Monday 6. The Aimable chases and takes the brigantine the Bonite, which was under convoy the day before with the Rose.³ The general dispatches Silby⁴ to Chesapeake Bay in order to have pilots.
- Tuesday 7. Discovered Delaware Bay; the *Cesar*⁵ ran aground. It was assisted by the Zélé and the Chimère.⁶ Refloated at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The entire - squadron anchored at 9:30 o'clock in the evening.

- Wednesday 8. Under sails at 6:30 in the morning. Entered into the Delaware, the sounding line in hand. The English frigate the Mermaid forced ashore the day before by the *Fantasque*⁷ and the Chimère.⁸
- Thursday 9. Disembarked Messrs. Gérard and Deane,⁹ as well as the prisoners of war. We have still 20 days of water. The César and the *Protecteur*¹⁰ 12 days of water. Weighed anchor at 10 o'clock in the morning
- Friday 10. Took the sloop of war the *York*¹¹ of 14 guns of 4 pounds.
- Saturday 11. Rejoined the squadron, which we had lost from view in the night. Anchored at Black Point.¹² We took possession of some fishing boats, which we had been able to reach. We paid for their fish and retained them.
- Sunday 12. Took the snow the Carcasse, laden with powder, bombs, and balls.¹³
- Monday 13. The general¹⁴ went ashore to reconnoiter the entrance of the Shrewsbury River. The Engageante sent a prize crew aboard the snow the Lord Howe, coming from Barbados, laden with rum, cacao, and sugar—¹⁵
- Tuesday 14. An American schooner brought a packet to M. the Comte d'Estaing, containing letters from the minister with news of the squadron of Admiral Byron.¹⁶
- Wednesday 15. M. Clapier, Garde de la Marine,¹⁷ and 4 seamen of the Aimable were drowned in passing the bar. I ran the same danger.
- Thursday 16. I saved myself in the end. The Engageante sent a prize crew aboard the English privateer the Fanny of Liverpool, 14 guns, 6 swivels, and 45 men.¹⁸ Our large dinghy stove on the bar, two men drowned and several sheep.
- Friday 17. The Fantasque sent prize crews aboard 6 ships coming from Barbados, laden with rum, sugar, etc.¹⁹
- Juillet—1778.
- Sunday 19. Made 5 small prizes, among them the brigantine the Stanley of 12 guns of 4 pounds.²⁰
- Monday 20. The Engageante took possession of the schooner of war the Dauphin, 2 guns and 6 swivels.²¹ M. the Chevalier de Borda confirmed to me the powers that he had given me to act and come to terms for him ashore.
- Wednesday 22. Weighed anchor at 8:30 in the morning
- Monday 27. The ships of the line the Marseillois and the *Vaillant*²² visited a three-masted ship that had been half burned, capsized on the shore and in part sunk, without being able to discover of what nation it was.
- Tuesday 28. Retained a privateer boat from Block Island, outfitted with 8 men, which came aboard by mistake
- Wednesday 29. Anchored before Rhode Island
- Thursday 30. The *Sagittaire*²³ set sail and entered the West Passage, silenced a battery of two guns and another of three. The Fantasque also entered the same passage and no longer found any attempt to fire. The Aimable, the Alcmène,²⁴ and the Stanley set sail and went into the East Passage. The English set fire to their corvette the *Kingsfisher*²⁵ of 16 guns which was anchored under one of their batteries with two galleys to which they set fire to direct as fire ships onto our frigates. M. de Grasse, ensign in the Aimable, and M. d'Orcet, ensign in the Alcmène,²⁶ turned these two fire ships away, which leaped into the air while our long-boats held them with hooks and tried to extinguish the fire. No one of ours was lost on this occasion.

19. According to the prize accounts for d'Estaing's squadron, the French captured the following vessels on 17 July: César took the sloop Isabelle, master Alexander Thomson, from Grenada carrying a cargo of coffee, rum, and other goods; Fantasque captured Peggy, a privateer under the command of William Buddicom that carried 10 cannon of 4-pounds; César captured Phenix (or No 1), master Robert Cunningham, with a cargo of rum, syrup, and other goods; and César took Polly, master Ebenezer Peine, carrying rum, syrup, and other similar goods. In addition, Fantasque recaptured Heureuse Famille, a French brig with a cargo of rum. It is likely that the sixth ship referred to was L'Etoile du Matin, which is enumerated in the French prize lists between Polly and Phenix. See “Liste des Prises faites sur les anglais Par l'Escadre du Roy...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fols. 131-132; “Liste des prisonniers Anglois fait par l'Escadre du Roi...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fols. 155-56; and “Etat des prises faites par L'Escadre du Roy Commandée par M^r Le Comte D'Estaing,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 152, fol. 196. See also Journal of French Navy Frigate Engageante, 17 July, below, for further details on these captures.

20. H.M. armed brigantine Stanley, armed with 12 cannon of 4 pounds, Lt. Richard Whitworth, commanding. The French placed it under the command of officier auxiliaire Boulouvard de Barentin and used it in subsequent operations. For more on the capture of Stanley, see Journal of French Navy Frigate Engageante, 19 July, below.

Besides Stanley, the French prize lists mention only three other captures for 19 July. A boat from Protecteur captured Flying Fish; a boat from Languedoc captured the Requin (or Roquin); and César captured Rosamond (or Rosamore), a sloop from Antigua carrying a cargo of rum, master John Ahall. “Liste des Prises faites sur les anglais Par l'Escadre du Roy...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fols. 132; “Liste des prisonniers Anglois fait par l'Escadre du Roi...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fol. 157; and “Etat et montant des prises faites par l'Escadre du Roy Commandée par M. le Comte D'Estaing...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 152, fol. 177. For more on Flying Fish, see Journal of H.M. Frigate Sphynx, 29 July, below.

21. The schooner Dauphin or Dolphin, armed with 2 cannon and 6 swivels, under the command of Lt. Christopher Christie. Formerly under the command of Capt. Josh Peck, an unidentified tender of H.M.S. Roebuck had captured Dolphin. After capturing the vessel, d'Estaing placed it under the command of Frédéric-Alexandre Bouquier, a garde de la marine aboard Languedoc, with twelve sailors from Engageante sent aboard to crew the vessel. See Robert Morris to Jean Holker, 29 Sep. 1778, Letters of Delegates 10: 711-12; Journal of the Languedoc written by Duc de Cambis, 20 July 1778, FrPNA Marine B⁴, vol. 147, fol. 15; Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing's “Liste des prises...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fol. 132; “Liste des prisonniers Anglois fait par l'Escadre du Roi...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fol. 157; “Etat et montant des prises faites par l'Escadre du Roy Commandée par M. le Comte D'Estaing...,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 152, fol. 177; and “Etat des prises faites par L'Escadre du Roy Commandée par M^r Le Comte D'Estaing,” FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 152, fol. 197.

22. Ships of the line Marseillais, Capitaine de vaisseau Louis-Armand de la Poype Vertrieux, and Vailant, Capitaine de vaisseau Joseph-Bernard, marquis de Chabert Cogolin.

23. Ship of the line Sagittaire, Capitaine de vaisseau François-Hector, comte d'Albert de Rions.

SAMUEL PHILLIPS SAVAGE, PRESIDENT OF MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO CAPTAIN JOHN FOSTER WILLIAMS, MASSACHUSETTS NAVY

Sir,

War-Office, Boston July [blank] 1778

You being Appointed & Commission'd to the Command of the Arm'd Brig^t Hazard^d in the Service of this State.—It is our Order That you proceed to Sea on a Cruise in the Track of the Homeward bound Brittish West-India Vessels, which we apprehend to be between the Latitudes of 30 to 36 North, to the Eastward of Bermudas, & there to use your best, & utmost Endeavours to take, Burn, Sink, & Destroy, all Armed & Other Vessels with their Cargoes, belonging to y^e. Subjects of the King of Great-Britain, Enemies to the Sovereign Independant United States of America, & to the natural rights of Mankind.—As the Fleet from the West-India Islands always sails on or about the 25th. day of July,— should you be so unfortunate as not to meet with any of them in such time as you may apprehend they must have pass'd the above-mention'd Latitudes,—You are then to proceed to the South East parts of the Banks of Newfound-Land, where, some Vessels inward or outward bound, from Great Britain & Ireland, we are in hopes you will be able to make up your Cruise,—Should you make Prize of any Vessels loaded with Fish &c. proper for the West-India Market, you are to send them to Martinico to our Friends Mess^{rs}. Godfrey & W^m. Hutchinsons Merchants there,—or should they be loaded with Merchantable Fish, or other Articles usually exported to Europe, you are to direct them to our good Friends Mess^{rs}. Joseph Gardoqui & Sons Merchants in Bilboa.—Should you be so fortunate as make any Captures, other than above-mention'd, you are to send them under proper Prize-Masters into this or some other safe Port in the United States,—giving the preference to the Ports Eastward of Boston, from whence the earliest Notice is to be given this Board by Express.—You will bring, or send in all the Prisoners you may take, as shall be practicable, in order to their being exchange'd for our suffering Country-Men in the Hands of the Enemy;—You are to be extremely Cautious not to molest the Navigation of the Subjects of our good Ally the King of France, or other Powers in Amity with these United States, But in every thing strictly to conform yourself to the good & wholesome Regulations of Congress for that purpose made & provided.—Be careful to send us by every Prize all the Necessary Papers.—We most heartily wish you Success, & are your Real Friends,

By order of the Board
Sam^l Ph^{'s} Savage Pres^t

By necessary Papers we mean all Invoices, Bills Lading, Letters, & all News Papers.—

I acknowledge the above to be a true Copy of the Orders I have rec'd from the Hon^{ble}. Board of War, & promise to obey the same—

CAPTAIN THOMAS THOMPSON, CONTINENTAL NAVY, TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE

Sir

Boston June [July]¹ 1st. 1777 [1778]

I would have wrote You Long ago had an enquire been made into my Conduct during a late Cruise, but as nothing of that kind took place I knew not any thing except Complaints for Ill usage. which I had no right to take the freedom to trouble You with—I am now under Trial for misconduct how it will end I know not but this I know if it ends Quikly I shall be Honourably acquitted. when the Trial is over I shall stand much in need of your Friendly advice, as you are Considered my sponsor in Congress. this is only preparity to the Conclusion of the Trial. at which time when sentence is Pronouncd I shall write you very particular as also m^r. Langdon.² the Letter from the Marine Committee, was to enquire into my Conduct.³ if nothing appeard against me to restore me to my Command; Imediatly on the Rect of ther Letter comes a resolve of Congress to supercead me in my Command appointing Capt. Barry in my stead.⁴ this suden Resolution before my Trial makes me think I am unfairly dealt with I will submit it to you to Judge even supposing I am guilty of an Error in Judgement which is the worst thing that can ever be laid to my Charge—the officers of the ship are all superceaded. by the navy board here.⁵ in short every irregular step is here making to render the service disagreeable. non of the officers would have left The ship without your Consent. nor shall I take the least step after my Trial without first hearing from you, as the Command I have lately held who by Your Recomendation. altho I should be acquitted I Cannot think The service will be an Object worth my persuing after what has pass'd. this is as it now appears to me. but shall beg Your advice I am Sir [&c.]

Agreeable to your Orders I inclose an Inventory of the Prize Goods brought in by the Warren Frigate which was taken out at Sea, & the Vessell was afterwards retaken,¹ the Snow Robert arriv'd at Bedford² with a Cargo of Flax Seed & no person appears to purchase her³ I this Day receiv'd a Letter from M^r Jarvis⁴ who says the most he can get for the Snow & Cargo is £1300 I shall wait your Orders to know your Pleasure respecting the Purchase of Vessel & Cargo for public Acc^t by manifest it appears her Cargo consists of 386 Trs⁵ & 4 Punch^{ns.6} of unclean's'd Flax Seed with 50 Tons of fustic by the Character I've had of the Snow she [is] worth the Money without the Cargo. Im endeavouring to get in Forwardness my Accounts with the commercial Committee to transmit which shall be done as soon as possible, the Navy Board⁷ have desired Me to receive Capt Green's⁸ Cargo—We are waiting for ye Invoices from York Town⁹ to compleat that Business they have lately had a Survey on y^e Ship¹⁰ & find she is not fit for a Cruizer, & desir'd me to take her under my Care, should be glad the honbl Board would give Orders what to do with y^e Salt that remains on Board, at the same time to receive their Orders respecting the Ship, M^r Deveil,¹¹ lately second Lieutenant of y^e *Alfred*¹² of good Character, has applied to Me & would be glad to take y^e Command under his present Commission & proceed on such Voyage as he may be order'd he makes no doubt he could man her with Frenchmen immediately—I beg leave to mention that I some time transmitted to y^e hon^{ble} marine Committee a Copy of y^e Sales of the Ship *Alexander*¹³ captur'd by the Sloop Providence amounting to £2676..10..6 also the Sales of the *Active*¹⁴ captur'd by the Alfred & Providence amounting to £2065..3..7 as they were sold at Bedford. & M^r Jarvis was in Advance a considerable Sum for the public I desir'd the Auctioneer to pay the Money into his hands the part they've acted with y^e last Prize¹⁵ the Providence captur'd is of a very extraordinary & singular Nature the Agent¹⁶ contemning all Resolves of Congress, the Decree of y^e marine Court, & the Advice of his Consti[t]uents by keeping back the valuable Cargo of y^e Ship Mary, which he has sent into y^e different parts of the Country, & our Attorney¹⁷ tells Me I can't legally break open Doors for y^e Recovery of it, the Cap^t.¹⁸ & officers are heartily sick of his Management & solemnly declares it is not their Instance he is gone forward to Congress. I heartily congratulate the honb^{le}. Board on ye Success of the Brig Gen Gates,¹⁹ which saild from Cape Ann this Day five Weeks²⁰ & yesterday sent in a Ship²¹ & Brig²² bound from Dominica to Quebec a Schedule of their Cargoes as below, these Vessells were taken in partnership with the Brig Hawk mounting 12 Guns & having 73 Men,²³ Cap^t. VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO GENERAL SIR HENRY CLINTON, BRITISH ARMY

Eagle Off Sandy Hook [N.J.]

July the 1st 1778

Sir/

By the Grantham, the Packet wherein the enclosed Dispatches which I have the honor to transmit to your Excellency were forwarded, I received Advice from the Lords Comm^{rs}. of the Admiralty, concerning the supposed destination of the French Squadron,¹ and detachment of His Majesty's Ships under Vice Admiral Byron, therein mentioned. But no particulars being added in my Letter, regarding the Armament ordered for the West-Indies,² I have presumed to open your Dispatches also, in the belief that I should from thence obtain some further Information of the King's Intentions, for my guidance with respect to the departure of the Armament in case it should not put to Sea before the Receipt of the important Intelligence now communicated to us, and for regulating my own Motions at this critical period.

I was induced in consequence, to postpone every other consideration, and to wait at Sandy-Hook until I could have the benefit of your Sentiments with reference to the measures most advisable to be adopted under our present circumstances, for the Advantage of His Majesty's general Service in this Country. I have the honor [&c.]

NEWS FROM CHARLES-TOWN, JULY 1.

The following Articles were left out of our last Paper, for want of Room and a Sufficiency of Types:
CHARLES-TOWN, July 1.

Last week two of the anchors and cables left by Sir Peter Parker's squadron near Sullivant's island, when they silently withdrew from the attack on Fort Moultrie, in the night of 28th of June 1776, were weighed, about 480 yards distance from that fort, and brought up to town: One of them was the Bristol's (of 50 guns) Sir Peter's own ship. These make 8 of that squadron's anchors and cables, that we are now in possession of, besides 16 of the guns (fine double-fortified 9-pounders) belonging to the Acteon frigate, which was burnt in the morning of the 29th.¹

Last Friday, between 12 and 1 o'clock, a sloop came in sight from the Eastward, off Bull's Island. At the same time 3 ships appeared coming up from the southward and standing to the northward. At half past 6 in the evening, the ships were observed to tack and stand to the eastward, the sloop with them, and towards the close of the day they all hawled off to the S.E.—The same evening Capt. Dillingham, late master of the sloop Betsey, of and for this port from Bedford in New-England, came to town from Bull's, and informed, that the above-mentioned sloop was his: That he had been chased the whole day by 5 ships (two of them without those that were seen from town) three of whose boats pursued him so closely, that he was at last obliged to quit his vessel, which they immediately after boarded and carried off.

Three of these ships and the sloop were again discovered on Saturday, in the S.E, with crowded sail, as if in chace to the southward. And that night Capt. Cornelius Schermerhorn, in the schooner Swift, of this port, arrived from Cape Francois, who informed, that he had been chased from 4 o'clock in morning, by 4 ships, with a schooner and a sloop in company; That, as the wind was very light, they sent 7 boats in pursuit of them; but that by incessant rowing he at length got clear. He adds, that in the morning, he passed the mast-head of a sunken schooner, which he imagined had been taken and scuttled by the above ships of war.

As none of these vessels have come in sight since, and the wind has been easterly, it is not improbable, that they were passing ships, destined for, and have proceeded off St. Augustine, St. Juan's, or St. Mary's Rivers.²

The anniversary of the repulse of a squadron of the British navy, under the command of Sir Peter Parker, in their attack upon Fort Moultrie, on the 28th of June 1776, and of the retreat of the British army, under the command of General Sir Henry Clinton, falling this year upon Sunday; the public rejoicings upon that glorious occasion, were deferred till monday.—The morning was ushered in with ringing of bells, and a display of colours from all the forts and shipping. At noon the forts (beginning at Fort Moultrie) each fired a salute of 13 guns. At one o'clock the like salute was fired from each of the following vessels of war, viz. the Oliver Cromwell and Defence, state ships of Connecticut;³ the Notre-Dame of this State;⁴ the Tartar and Volant, private armed vessels;⁵ and the Tonym's Revenge and Ranger, prize privateers late of St. Augustine.⁶ And at night, the illuminations surpassed all preceding ones: King Street, and environs, in particular, appearing uncommonly brilliant; and the Notre Dame making a very grand appearance—

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA, JULY 2, 1778

A letter from Halifax in Nova Scotia, dated July 2, says, "Information being received of some privateers infesting our coasts, a detachment of the Highland battalion¹ was, on Tuesday the 18th instant, by order of Gen. Massey,² embarked on board the Buckram and Washington armed vessels, and proceeded eastward under the command of Lieutenant Charrington, of his Majesty's frigate the Diamond.³ On Saturday evening they discovered four sail in Ship Harbour, which, as it was late, they could only block up until the morning, when it was found that the rebels had landed swivels, and were fortified behind a battery of logs. By the information of a Midshipman belonging to the Rainbow,⁴ who had been taken prisoner by the rebels and retaken by our troops, their numbers amounted to above 100. The troops therefore were landed under cover of the armed vessels guns, who quickly drove the rebels into the woods. They attempted to make a stand at a post about two miles in the woods, where they had previously lodged their provisions, stores, &c. but on the approach of the troops, and firing a few vollies, they were dispersed in great confusion, and one of their Lieutenants and three men found dead on the spot. Forty of them made their escape to Little Harbour, where they accidentally met a privateer, which took them on board. An inhabitant of Little Harbour informed our troops, that several of the party were wounded, and that they lamented much the fate of their remaining comrades, who being dispersed in the woods, and forlorn in that desert part of the world, and many of them wounded, would most inevitable perish through hunger. The four privateers were burnt, and thirty-two swivels, with a number of small arms, and a quantity of provisions and goods they had taken and secured. They belonged to Salem and Marblehead.⁵

DEPOSITION OF LIEUTENANT WALTER HATCH, MASSACHUSETTS NAVY

Suffolk-County

Boston July 3^d. 1778.

I Walter Hatch of Hingham in the County afores^d. of lawful Age, Gentleman, testify and declare, that about the twentieth Day of April last past, being second Lieutenant on Board the Brigantine called the Hazard,¹ commanded by Simeon Samson Esq^r: on a Cruize at Sea against the Enemies of the United States of America; in the Morning it being my Watch upon Deck, William Spear of said Boston, then being on Board s^d. Brigantine, came to me, and informed me, that the People on Board were about signing a Round-Robin, and that they wanted him to write something for them, upon which I advised s^d. Spear not to have any Thing to do with that Matter;² And I declare that I never said or did any Thing to encourage it myself: that soon after (s^d. Spear being then gone below) Captⁿ. Daniel Turner, a Prize-Master, came on Deck, to whom I related what s^d. Spear had said to me, relating to the Round-Robin before-mention'd, who said let us talk with him, meaning s^d. Spear, upon which I called s^d. Spear, who immediately came to us; I then in Presence of s^d. Turner, and s^d. Spear repeat what he had before said to me, concerning the Round-Robin, which he accordingly did, using the same Expressions which he had before used, relating to the People's signing a Round-Robin: S^d. Turner and I advis'd him not to have any Thing to do with that Matter; upon which s^d. Turner and I parted from s^d. Spear, and went immediately down into the Cabbin, and informed Captⁿ. Samson that s^d. Spear had just told us that the People were about signing a Round-Robin; to which s^d. Samson return'd for Answer, let it rest: I farther declare, that I heard nothing more from the People concerning a Round-Robin for two or three Days; after which Time, I being in the Cabbin with Captⁿ Samson, he shew'd me the Copy of a Round-Robin, which he had just received from the People, (as he informed me) and also said in my Hearing, and in the Hearing of Lieutenant Dyer,³ who was at the same Time in the Cabbin, that what he had received as aforesaid, was only a Copy, and that it appeared to him, Viz; Samson, to be wholly wrote by one Hand: I farther declare, that from that Time, I never heard Captⁿ Samson say any Thing to the People, nor the People to him concerning a Round-Robin, 'till we had taken a Prize,⁴ which was about a Week or ten days afterwards, when some of the Men whose Names were wrote in the Copy aforesaid, applied to s^d. Captⁿ Samson for Shoes, who, Viz; Samson answer'd them, that no Persons whose Names were wrote in the said Copy, should have any Shoes of him, neither had they any, though he furnish'd others with Shoes, whose Names were not wrote in the Copy aforesaid: I still farther declare, that I heard a Number of the People at sundry Times say, that they thought that after the Expiration of five Months, the Cruize would be out, but that I thought, and also told the People, that our Time was not confin'd to five Months only, but that Captⁿ Samson had ship'd us for a Cruize: And farther I say not

FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1778

NEW-LONDON, JULY 3.

Monday Evening arrived here the Le Despencer Packet, a fine Snow 160 Tons, mounting 14 Carriage Guns, besides Swivels, and had 50 Men, late commanded by Wm. Pond. She sail'd from Falmouth about the 12th of May, with Dispatches for New-York, but was taken in lat. 34, by the Brig Nancy,¹ Capt. Melally,² of this Port, after a short Engagement, in which they threw over the Mail.³ By the Passengers we learn, that no more Troops will be sent to America this Year: That 4000 Germans design'd for America, had arrived in England, but were detained for the Protection of that Kingdom: That War between France and England, had not been declared when they sailed.

1. Connecticut privateer brigantine Nancy, which was commissioned on 23 Apr. 1778, was on her first cruise.

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO VICE ADMIRAL JOHN BYRON

Copy.

Eagle Off Sandy Hook [N.J.]

Sir

July the 3^d: 1778.

On the 29th: past I received Notice from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that a Squadron of French Ships of War, of which You have been advised, had put to Sea from Toulon for the Coasts of this Continent;¹ And that being appointed to proceed with a Squadron of His Majesty's Ships directly to Halifax, You were to be further governed after your Arrival there, by the Tenor of your Orders dated 3^d: of May,² of which a Copy has been at the same time transmitted to me.

The Commander of the Packet,³ by which I received those Dispatches, informs me that he was chased or followed by a French Squadron of sixteen Sail, from the 6th: to the 8th: of June; when the French Squadron, then in Latitude of 30°. 30' and Longitude of about 48° West, hauled to the Wind in the South West Quarter on the Larboard Tack.

From many concurring Circumstances I cannot doubt that this was the Squadron under the Comte d'Estaing. But I do not see that any just inference can be thence formed, of the particular Port on this Continent for which the French Admiral is destined. Wherefore he may be still intending for Boston; and in that Case, I shall hope You may be able to obtain Intelligence of his Motions from some of the Frigates of the Fleet under my Command assembling at Halifax.—⁴ You will please, however, not to quit the American Coast under the Licence given in your Orders to that Effect, until you have further Instructions from me thereon; But as You may be drawn away from this Continent, in any actual Pursuit of the French Squadron, upon having the good Fortune to fall in therewith at Sea. I make no Doubt that You will in such Case, and at all Times, let me know your Movements and Intentions, by every suitable Opportunity, addressed to me at this Port.

The British Forces having evacuated the Province of Pensylvania pursuant to the King's Command signified to that Effect; And being very lately arrived on the Jersey Shore to embark for New York, to all Appearance in the Face of the Rebel Army; I am necessarily detained here until that important Operation is completed. I propose then to attempt joining You, with such Force as some material Circumstance respecting the general Benefit of the King's Service (of which I cannot immediately judge) will admit. But I shall be attentive to advise You in the mean Time of all the Intelligence I obtain concerning the French Admiral's Measures, and of my proceedings with Reference to the Purpose of your Orders of the 3^d: of May as before-mentioned. I have the Honor to be, [&c.]

Howe.

GOVERNOR PATRICK TONYN OF EAST FLORIDA TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

[Extract]

My Lord,

Since I had the honour by my letters of April and May last¹ of acquainting your Lordship with the State of this Province, and the preparations to defeat the mischievous designs of the Rebels, I have exerted my utmost strength and diligence to have the Fortifications repaired and strengthened, and a naval force equiped and manned.

The ship Germain of eighteen Guns, the Brig the Dreadnought of two twenty four pounders in the Bowes, two in the Stern, all which can occasionally remove to the Broad Sides untill supplied with nines or twelves for them expected from Lord Howe, and the Galley Thunderer carrying two twenty four pounders are stationed in the Saint Johns River.²

The rebels after collecting a considerable Force and erected some Fortifications on their frontiers are advanced to Saint Marys River.

By the inclosed letters from Lieutenant Colonel Brown and Captain Shaw of the 60th. Regiment your Lordship will perceive that their numbers and strength by Land and Sea is greatly superior to ours, and that we are to expect success by the [b]lessing of God from superior Valour and conduct.³ . . .

Since the departure of the Carysfort and Galatea about the middle of May last I have not heard that there has been a King's Ship on this Station. . . . I have the honour to be [&c.]

Louisa Susannah Wells, daughter of a prominent Charleston loyalist exile, was a passenger in Providence and left a journal of the voyage that included an account of the capture. According to Wells, the ship's company were concerned that the pursuing ship was American or French, and therefore tried to outrun their pursuer. Wells reports: "we were within hail of the other ship, when a Gun was fired to bring to, it flashed, a second was fired, and the ball went through our rigging. They then hailed us 'Whence from, where bound &c.' to which we answered without hesitation. They then hoisted out a boat, which was well manned to take us, as a prize. The boat passed under our stern, and as I was then sitting on one of the Lockers at the Cabin window I heard a voice cry out 'Get ropes ready'; at this moment a Volley of Musketry was poured on the deck from the Ship. The Shot whistled over the Passengers' heads, upon which they came below, not being yet willing to leave this World. The Man at the Pump was shot through the hat, upon which every sailor quitted the Deck and went under hatches, none but poor Stevens being left to combat a twenty gun ship, the people on board of which swearing at him for not laying to; however the Lieutenant, and his men in the boat, boarding us, soon relieved him from his solitude by taking him prisoner. . . . Our conqueror [Lieutenant Lock] soon sheathed his weapon, on seeing such a number of helpless Women and Children, but 'owned he was uneasy at coming below amongst so many people, still thinking us French.' Captain Stevens had been a great while in the Danish Service, and therefore spoke English like a Foreigner; and besides we had several French sailors on board. As soon as the Papers were got ready the Master and Owner [Mr Manson] accompanied the Lieutenant, in order to explain our situation to Captain Reid, but without success. This hungry Vulture guessed the value of our cargo, as coming from Carolina, and would hear nothing in our defence. He desired Mr Manson to particularise the contents of the Hold. 'Seven hundred Tierces of Rice, Seventy casks Indigo and seventeen Hogsheads Tobacco.' 'Seventy of the latter you mean.' 'No Sir' returned Mr Manson. 'It is no matter,' resumed this disgrace to the British Navy, 'I shall know when the Court of Admiralty shall condemn the 'Providence' and Cargo as my lawful prize at New York.' Upon finding this, Mr Manson left the 'Rose' and returned to us, with his heart full of pride, indignation and resentment at being thus treated by the servants of that King for whom we all had suffered so much." CAPTAIN RICHARD COGDELL TO GOVERNOR RICHARD CASWELL OF NORTH CAROLINA

[Extract]

New Bern 4th. July 1778—

Eve of the 3^d year of Indep^c—

Dear Sir,

By a person very lately from Charles Town we are informed that two English Privateers who have captured many of our Merchant vessels on our Coast, have been lately taken and brought into Charles Town—and one of those Pirates was commanded by Capt Osbourne I believe from Jamaica fitted out. The Capt of the other, I have heard his name—but it has slipt my memory[.]¹ The manner of their being taken is as follows—They were seen off the Bar some days, Cruizing at the same time a Twenty Gun Boston Ship,² lying in the harbor of Charles Town—The Commander of which offered his service to go out and take those privateers provided the Inhabitants would man his Ship, which they did, many Gentlemen of the Town were of the number, who went on board for the laudable purpose of enabling the Captain to execute the plan he proposed, at the same time fitted out a proper vessel and manned her also as a Tender to the Ship. They proceeded in quest of the Pirates, in short time saw them, the Tender going pretty near the two -Pirates, gave chase to the Tender upon seeing the ship, they left the Tender and gave chase to the ship, seemed to stand for Charles Town Bar, her Ports all closed the Privateers pursued the Chase, making all the sail they could until they run along side of the Ship on each side, when the Ship opened her ports and gave such a Salute that the two Pirates was under the necessity to strike and being near the Inlet was in a few hours brought to an Anchor in Charles Town Harbor.

Since writing the foregoing account of the Privateers being taken, I have received a Charles Town paper wherein is mentioned the same account, under the Charles Town Head June 24th in the words following to wit. . . .

In celebration of this day great numbers of Guns have been fired, at Stanly's³ Wharf, and M^r Ellis' ship⁴ three different firings from each from early in the morning midday and Evening, and Liquor given to the populace. Stanly and Ellis seemed to vie with each other, in a contest who should do the most honor to the day, but M^r Ellis had the most artillery. . . . I am your Excellencys [&c.]

JAMES WARREN TO SAMUEL ADAMS

My Dear Sir

Boston July 5. 1778

I have wrote you very lately & very lengthy. if they come so fast as to be Troublesome. you will give me Notice. & I will stop my hand.¹ The Army was the principle Subject of my last. I will now in turn give you a few more of my Sentiments with regard to the Navy. The Manning & dispatch of your Ships here depend very much on the Character. of the Commanders. all we can do seems to little purpose. unless the Captains & Officers are popular. & such as the Seamen have A Confidence in. Cap^t Burke² may be A good Officer. but there are suspicions subsisting & a certain Unpopular Air & Manner in his Behaviour that has Occasioned those Men who Intended to go in that

Brig^t.³ to leave her. & I fear in spite of every thing I can do it will be long before she goes to Sea. This Appointment seems to be a matter of Speculation. & as the Service is retarded by it gives great Occasion for the observations of the Speculators.⁴ but Nothing has Afforded a more ample subject. for those People & for the resentment of the Navy Officers than the late Appointment of Cap^t Landais to the Alliance.⁵ I am afraid this will be productive of much Confusion & Mischief. he is An Ingenuous & well Behaved Man. I am pleased to see him taken Notice of. but this Appointment seems to be marked with some degree of Enthusiasm⁶ you have certainly Exceeded his Expectations if not wishes. and have you done Justice to some Exceeding good officers here. who have Older Commissions than his. & with their Familys been long starving on their bare pay. Manley⁷ Olney⁸ & Waters⁹ have reason to suppose them selves Neglected. especially the first. as he was made acquainted that the Marine Committee (as they wrote us) Intended that Ship for him if he was Honourably Acquitted by a Court Martial.¹⁰ Cap^t Landais when he went from here seemed to Expect no more than some kind of Superintendency in the Construction of Ships. there are two very good Lieutenants in that Ship but I am told they will both leave her. & the service. I fear he will never Man her unless with Frenchmen & I Suppose that would hardly be Agreeable to Congress. she is much the finest Frigate you have had. however my Exertions shall not be wanting more especially as I find there is An Opinion that you was his chief Patron. Cap^t Manley will hand you this he is A Blunt. Honest. & I believe Brave Officer he was first in the Service. & merited much by his Conduct. I hope therefore he will be Continued & satisfied, more especially as he is Extreemly popular with Officers. & Seamen. & can Man a Ship with dispatch when A Man as deserving could do Nothing in that way. which is an object you must Attend to or be Content to have your Ships lay in Port. Cap^t Barry's¹¹ Character stands high. & his Conduct is agreeable. I think therefore we shall have but little difficulty in Maning his Ship¹² tho' he is A Stranger.

Cap^t McNeil¹³ is gone to make you a Visit his Address is Insinuateing. & his Assurance great¹⁴ he may tell you fine Storys. but be Assured he has had as fair & Impartial A Trial as A Man ever had. & as much Tenderness & delicacy both in the prosecution & Sentence as he ought to wish for. We have frequently wrote for an Establishment for Pursers. & Pilots. the Service suffers for want of it. do see it done both with regard to wages & prize money. and Expedite the Other Business we have wrote about particularly send us Money. We Celebrated the 4th. of July here yesterday with great parade. & festivity. we have no News here we long to hear how matters stand with the Army & where the French Fleet are. I am with regards [&c.]

did you ever propose An Allowance of Hay & Oates for our Horses since we have been in this Service.¹⁵ our Board and Horse-keeping has from the begining Cost us more than our pay. & since last December we have been at least a dollar A day out of pocket the Service is hard enough the least that could be done is to afford us support here. if we are not Enabled to take any kind of Care of our Familys we are Obliged to give Carpenters. Riggers & some other Tradesmen 5 dollars. a day while we have but ab^t 4. Ceteris paribus¹⁶ they have the Advantage of us they are at Home with their Familys we are Abroad & Absent from ours. your Resolve ab^t the Frenchman. Pendant is thought very Extraordinary.¹⁷ it is a great Triumph to the Skippers & is Improved with some marks of Insult. & is mortifying to your own Officers. if it is A fact that our Ships are allowed to wear their pendants in the Ports of France in presence of Men of War. all the Officers lately [from] there. give us wrong

Information. & certain it [is] one of your Vessels of War lately at Martineco [was] not permitted to wear her pendant. to the Mortification of Cap^t. Chew.¹⁸ who was A Man of great Spirit. I hope proper respect will be paid to the Judgment of Courts Martial. & their Sentences never altered but where Errors. fraud. Injustice or partiality plainly appear. Honb^l. Sam^l. Adams Esq^r.

At 6. o'clock the *Zélé*⁴ made the signal of Distress in her top cross-trees.

At 6:30. o'clock I signaled the frigates to Sound, by a blue Flag at the mainmast, and by a Red flag at the Foremast, with an English pennant.

At 8:45. o'clock the *Guerrier*² made the signal for an Unknown Ship; I asked at what point of the compass it bore, by a blue Flag at the Mizzenmast, and by a red Flag at the foremast: the Guerrier signaled NW¼N.

At 9:30 o'clock the Zélé made the signal for an Unknown Ship. I asked it what Was the number of Ships it saw.

The Guerrier then signaled One.

At 11. o'clock the frigate *Engageante*³ signalled that it was going to describe the number of fathoms that it had found; a moment later it signaled 65 Fathoms.

At 15 minutes after Noon the same frigate made the signal for two Unknown Ships.

At 12:30 o'clock I signalled the *Chimère*⁴ to Come to alongside, by a red and blue Flag at the mizzenmast, by a white Flag at the mainmast, and by a white Flag at the mainmast, and by a white and blue Flag at the Foremast, with its private pennant.

At 1:15 o'clock the Engageante Signalled Four Ships: at 2:45 o'clock It signaled one more.

A moment later one of the Ships of the Line made the signal for another Unknown Ship.

At 5. o'clock I requested the Engageante if it could swiftly come up to the object being chased, by a white Flag and a blue Flag, one above the other, with its private pennants.

At 5:15. o'clock the *Alcmène*⁵ signaled Land; I replied that I had observed its signal, by an English flag blue at the tail,⁶ and one at half-mast below it.

At 9:30 o'clock the Engageante began an action at sunset with a Ship, which had brought to with an English Flag.

from South-West to North-North-East with light breezes, the sky clear and a heavy sea; The Course estimated at North-West-¼-North. Course Estimated—12 Leagues

The Course Corrected, from yesterday Noon until today at the same time, is set at North-West 1 degree 30^{min} West.

There was only 18 minutes of difference farther North than what was Estimated.

Latitude Observed—37. d 37^m

Longitude reached West 72. d 52^m

The Wind then to the North-West with light breezes, we continued the course to the North-West ¼ West.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon we Saw a Ship and a snow in front of the Squadron, and in the West quarter; The frigates the Engageante and the Alcmène chased them; the Engageante had closed the Ship which had brought to with an English flag. At 9 o'clock in the evening that frigate began to fight the enemy; Being in a calm the Action was smart and lasted about 2½ hours until morning when the Ship surrendered; after having manned the prize, the Engageante, with its prize, rejoined the Squadron the following day at 9 o'clock in the morning; This Ship proved to be a Privateer named the Rose fitted out in Carolina, and mounting 22 Cannon in broadside;⁷ because of the strong defense which it had made, that having been judged disabled from sailing, we decided to sink it after having removed everything we could use.

JOURNAL OF FRENCH NAVY FRIGATE ENGAGEANTE, CAPITAINE DE VAISSEAU
CHARLES-RENÉ, CHEVALIER DE GRAS-PRÉVILLE

Combat du 5. Juillet 1778.¹

[devant les Caps du Delaware]

Relation du Combat de la frégate L'Engageante, Commandée par M. Le Ch^{er}. De Gras de Preville, Contre la frégate la Rose un Corsaire Anglais.²

J'avais reçu l'ordre de Chasser de L'avant de toute mon Escadre, de Sonder tous les 4. h. ; à 11. h. du matin je braissais en panne pour la Seconde fois, je Sondais, je Signalais au Général³ 65 brasses, je fis ensuite Servir, je ne tardai pas à Signaler à M. le Comte D'Estaing deux Navires Etrangers, on me répondit par le Signal ; aperçu le mien, je Continuais ma route, toutes voiles dehors, petit Vent faible, belle mer, je gagnai beaucoup mon Escadre.

La frégate Anglaise avait mise en panne et mit le pavillon de Sa nation qu'elle assura d'un Coup de Canon. je ne derangai point, je Continuais ma Chasse, je fis Signal que je decouvrais la terre, (la fregatte L'Alcmene fit aussi dans ce moment le même Signal) abord du Languedoc, je vis hisser mes flammes avec le Signal, Si je m'apercevais que je gagnais l'objet que je Chassais, je répondis par le Signal, Oui, il me fit alors celui Si j'étais Certain, je repondis encore par le même Signal Oui.

A mon bord, Comme ce bâtiment étais fort Elevé debous et avait grande apparence, le Capitaine Eléazar Jonhon⁴ [Américain ?] me dit que Son oppinion etait qu'il le Croyait plus fort que L'Engageante, il ne fut pas le Seul dans ce moment, a enporter le même jugement, cet observation ne derangea point mon projet ni ma manœuvre, je m'aperçus que L'anglais fit hisser un pavillon Jac a Son peroquet de fouques et tira un Coup de Canon, a ce Signal je vis le Senaut faire route pour S'eloigner, ce qui me le fit juger une prise; la nuit s'approchant je fais le dessein de L'attaquer de fort près et de lui tâcher deux bordees dans Son Arriere en me mettent ensuite par son travers au même bord que lui, le tener entre mon Escadre et moi, pour qu'il ne put m'echapper, le vent faible Se decida de la partie de la terre, ce qui me mit alors Sous le vent, je me rangais au plus près pour acoster plus promptement mon Ennemi. à 8. heurs ayant Jugé être a demie portée du Canons, je fis hisser mon pavillon blanc, Ordonnai d'hisser un fanal Sur le bâton d'Enseigne et d'allumer mon fanal de poupe, etant par Son travers a la distance a pouvoir engager le Combat. j'ordonnais de tirer une demie bordée du grand mât en avant, ce qui Comme nous l'avons Scû après lui avait mis cinq hommes hors de Combat, je lui ai tiré deux bordées Sans qu'il Se fut mis en deffense, ce fui à la troisiemme qu'il Commença a faire feu Sur moi de toute Son Artillerie et de sa Mousqueterie, assez bien Suivie et ajustée; je me suis battu deux heures et demie Sans lui faire beaucoup de mal et Sans mavoir reçû, je me Suis enfin rapproché à la portée du fusil, le Combat fut beaucoup plus vif et mon feu très Supérieur a ce de l'Ennemi, je restai a cette distance tout le reste du Combat, et vers la fin je le maltraitai de telle maniere, que je l'obligeais de Se rendre à une heure après minuit, (la Lune se Couchait) ayant toutes Ses manœuvres et Ses Voiles hachés et etant prêt à Couler bas ; le bâtiment Se nommait la Rose. il était percé pour trente Six Canons, mais il n'en portait que vingt Six en batterie, dont Vingt deux de Six, et quatre de neuf, dont deux de Chasse et deux de retraite. le nombre d'hommes d'Equipage était d'Environ 100. hommes non Compris ceux fournis à des prises, — le nombre des morts est de 18. de neuf blesses dont plusieurs grièvement. le Capitaine se nommé James Du Can Master and Commander de Sa Marine Royale⁵; il fut blessé légèrement à la main et à la Jambe, je mis en panne très près de lui, vent si foible qu'à peine on pouvait gouverner, je mis mon Canot à la mer—je fus abordé par ma prise, la Secousse fut petite pour moi, par L'abordage, il perdu Son mât de beaupré qui était très endommagé par les Coups de Canons et mitrailles qu'il avait reçu, je me Suis battu Sous les huniers, par Intervalle en panne ou faisant Servi pour présenter toujours mon travers à L'Ennemi et Suivre Ses mouvements, j'avais jugé necessaire de ne mettre personne Sus mon passe avant pendant l'action, pour les Exposer moins et renforcer ma batterie d'hommes, cette précaution à fait que ma batterie a été mieux Servie, J'ai perdu un Caporal du Regiment de foix, blessé par un Coup de Canon qui lui a Cassé le bra et la Cuisse dont il en mort; et trois personnes de blessées légèrement; mes Voiles et mes agrès furent assez mal traites, je reçus 7. Coups de Canon au raz de la fottaison qui percerent et me donnerent une Voie d'Eau de douze ponces, dans la partie de ma Soute poudre, je m'occupais et J'ordonnais de la reparer le plus promptement possible ayant Craint que mes poudres fussent mouillées, je reçus 47. boulets dans mes Œuvres mortes, deux boulets passerent par les Sabords de la batterie Sans faire mal à personne: Jenvoyai àbord M. Herault⁶ mon second, et je Chargai M. le Ch^{er}. De la Baume Pluvinel,⁷ de ramener le Capitaine de la prise, d'avoir pour lui les Egards que méritent une Si belle deffense.

M. le C^{te}. D'Estaing au jour, m'envoya un officier de Son bord nommé M. Dorsin,⁸ avec ordre de Sa part de me faire Compliment Sur mon Succès et de me demander de mes nouvelles, ainsi que de Celles de mon Etat major, et me lasser le choix de lui proposer L'officier que je jugerais apropos pour Commander la prise, je proposai M. herault pour Commander la ditte prise, qui fut jugée et trouvée en Si mauvais Etat qu'on a ordonné de L'abandonner et de la Couler bas, ce qui fut Executé dans la matinée du 6. du Courant, après en avoir pris les Canons. J'allai avec empraisement abord du Languedoc pour avoir L'honneur de rendre Compte à mon Général de ma Conduite et de la Situation ou Se trouvait ma frégate et lui présenter ma Capitaine prisonnier, a qui J'avais rendu son Epée comme un marque de mon Estime, ce que le Général approuva et me reçôit a Son bord avec distinction, ayant été témoin de mon action ainsi que tous les Vaisseaux qui Composaient L'Escadre Sans avoir pû me donner de Secours.

J'appris àbord du Commandant que le Senaut avait été pris a la pointe du jour par la frégate L'aimable Commandée par M. de S^t. Cosme,⁹ prise estimée Cinquante mille Ecus, Conduite à Philadelphie.

J'ai L'honneur de vous mettre Sous les yeux la maniere distinguée avec laquelle mon Etat major ma Second M. herault Commandant Sus le Gaillard davant, M. le Ch^{er}. De la Baume Pluvinel ma batterie, M. le Camus Enseigne,¹⁰ M. le Baron D'Aguillard, garde de la Marine étaient Sus Ses ordres,¹¹ cette batterie n'a Cessée de faire un feu vif et [illeg.] je me loue beaucoup de mes Canoniers, de la troupe de foix et de la marine;

Engagement of 5 July 1778.¹

[off the Delaware Capes]

Account of the Action of the frigate the Engageante, Commanded by M. the Chevalier De Gras de Preville, Against the frigate Rose, an English Privateer.²

I received orders to cruise in front of the Squadron, and to take soundings every four hours; at 11 o'clock in the morning I braced up and hove to to take soundings for the Second time; I Signaled to the Flagship³ 65 fathoms, I then put the ship into motion, at the same time signaling M. le Comte D'Estaing of the presence of two Strange Vessels, I was answered by Signal; perceiving the same, I Continued my course, all sails out, light winds, beautiful sea, I quickly outstripped the Squadron.

The English frigate had hove to and hoisted the flag of his nation, which he confirmed with a cannon shot. I was not at all disturbed, Continued my Chase, and Signaled that I had sighted land, (at that moment the frigate Alcmène also made the same Signal) on board the Languedoc, I saw my pennants hoisted with a Signal [asking] if I was gaining on the vessel that I was Chasing, I responded by the Signal, Yes, he then made one [asking] If I was Certain, I answered again by the same Signal, Yes.

In my ship, as the vessel ahead of us was very lofty and appeared large, American Captain Eléazar Jonhon⁴ told me that he believed it stronger than the Engageante; he was not the only one at that moment to hold the same opinion; this observation did not change my plans nor alter my actions at all. I perceived that the English ship hoisted a jack at his mizzen topmast and fired a cannon; at that signal I saw the snow take a course to distance itself, which led me to judge that it was a prize. With night approaching, I determined to move in close for attack and to make two tacks in its rear and thus place myself abeam of him on the same tack as he was on, putting him between the squadron and myself, so that he could not escape. A light wind coming off the land put me then to the leeward; I quickly closed so as to engage the enemy as soon as possible. At 8 o'clock, having judged myself within half-cannon shot, I raised my white ensign, ordered a lantern hoisted on the ensign staff and lit my stern lantern, being abeam of him and close enough to engage him. I ordered a half broadside fired from the mainmast forward, which we learned afterwards put five of his men out of service, I fired two broadsides before he returned fire; it was on the third that he returned fire with all of his artillery and his musketry, well served and regulated. I fought for two and a half hours without doing him much damage and without receiving much; I finally approached within musket range, when the action became hotter and my fire being very superior to that of the enemy; I remained at that distance the remainder of the fight, and toward the end of it I injured him in such a manner that he was obliged to surrender an hour after midnight (the moon had set), having all his rigging and sails cut up and being close to sinking. The ship was called the Rose. It was pierced for thirty-six guns but carried only twenty-six, of which twenty-two were six pounders, and four nine pounders, two of which were in the bow and two at the stern. The crew numbered around 100 men, not counting those sent in prizes,—their casualties were 18 killed, with nine wounded, several seriously. The captain's name is James Du Can, Master and Commander in the Royal Navy⁵; he was slightly wounded in the hand and the leg. I moved very close to Rose, the wind being so light that one could hardly steer. As I put my boat into the water—I was struck by my prize, the blow was inconsequential for my ship, but in the collision he lost his bowsprit, which had been badly damaged by cannon shot and grapeshot. I had fought under topsails, by intervals heaving to or maneuvering always to present my broadside to the enemy and to follow his movements; I had decided not to station any of my crew on my gangways during the action in order to lessen their exposure and to reinforce my gun crews; that precaution meant that my broadsides were better served. I lost one corporal from the Regiment du Foix, wounded by a cannon shot which broke his arm and thigh, from which he died; and had three men slightly wounded. My sails and my rigging were rather badly shot up; I also received 7 cannon shot at the waterline, which pierced the hull and resulted in the ship taking on twelve inches of water in the area of my powder magazine; I applied myself and ordered it repaired as promptly as possible, fearing that my powder would get wet. I received 47 balls in my upper works, two balls passed through the gun ports of the battery without causing harm to anyone. I sent on board M. Herault,⁶ my second in command, and I Commanded M. the Chevalier De la Baume Pluvinel⁷ to bring over the captain of the prize, showing him the regard that such a smart defense merits.

M. the Comte D'Estaing during the day sent an officer of his ship named M. Dorsin,⁸ with instructions to compliment me on my success and to ask for my account, as well as of that of my staff, and to allow me to choose the officer to command the prize. I named M. Herault to command the said prize, but it was found to be in such bad shape that it was ordered abandoned and sunk, which was executed the morning of the 6th current, after removing the guns. I eagerly went on board the Languedoc having been accorded the honor of giving an account of my conduct and of the condition of my frigate to my general and to present to him my captain prisoner, to whom I returned his sword as a mark of my esteem; the general approved of this and received me on his ship with distinction, having been witness to the engagement, as had all the ships of the line that composed the squadron, but without having been able to assist me.

While on board, I learned from the commandant that the snow had been captured at daybreak by the frigate Aimable, commanded by M. de St. Cosme,⁹ that this prize had an estimated worth of Fifty thousand ecus, and had been sent to Philadelphia.

I have the honor of relating the distinguished manner with which my staff behaved: my second in command, M. Herault, commanding on the forecastle, M. the Chevalier De la Baume Pluvinel, commanding my battery, M. le Camus, Enseign,¹⁰ M. the Baron D'Aguillard, Midshipman being under his orders, this battery never ceased delivering a smart and [illeg.] fire.¹¹ Many of my gunners I borrowed from the troop de Foix and from the navy; I also commend M. the Chevalier de Gras de Préville,¹² signal ensign on the forecastle, bearer of [illeg.] with M. the Chevalier D'Ampierre,¹³ lieutenant in the Regiment de Foix, and Captain Eleazar Jonhon.

Messieurs the officers have shown much valor and intelligence, and my crew has followed this good example.

SAMUEL ELIOT, JR., TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL OF CONNECTICUT

Honord Sir

Boston 6 July 1778

I embrace the opportunity of M^r Mumfords^l return to Connecticut, of handing the Invoices & of the Cargoes of the Ship Cyrus & Admiral Kepple—² Agreeable to your

Excellencys direction I have dispos'd of such Articles as were of perishable Nature, which are mark'd in the Manifest.—As it was for the Interest of the State to have an early Sale, I obtain'd permission to dispose of them before Condemnation, and upon my petition to both houses of Assembly, setting forth my reasons for, I was indulg'd with a publick Auction, for which I hold myself under an Obligation—As soon as, the accounts can be obtain'd from the Sheriff, they shall be forwarded to Connecticut—The Board of Warr of this State, and the Continental Navy board,³ had some Articles, for which they are to pay the same as the others Sold for—

It has been a tedious undertaking, we have been oblig'd to Open, and take an Inventory of all the Packages, for want of the Invoices—it has employ'd five Men Constantly, We have now gott them arranged properly for a divission, which shall be made as soon as I receive your Excellencys Orders, I hope they will be perticular in regard to the Goods which are to be dispos'd off, and what are to be sent forward to Connecticut—Your Excellency will pardon me, I think it would be best to reserve the States half off all Naval Stores

When I receiv'd your Letter to M^r Shirley,⁴ I made enquirey of several Gentlemen of the Hon^{ble}: Councill, and many other Gentlemen upon the propriety of granting his request of purchasing such a Vessell as would be agreeable to him,—some were for his purchasing a Vessell, others were against it—upon the whole M^r Shirley tho't best to charter or hire a flag, and we petitioned to purchase or hire, as would be most agreeable to the Hon^l Councill, the report of the Committee was favorable, and I expected before this time to transmit the report for your Excellencys Approbation, and that M^r Shirley might have been in readiness to leave this place before the 20th of this Month—My Surprize was great when I was informd that our Petition was order'd to lay on the Table, their motive I am at a Loss to determine—by what was hinted by a Gentleman, I found two reasons Assign'd, the first that Letters respecting M^r Shirley should have been directed to the President of the Councill,⁵ the other, a determination of Lord Howe to exchange no Prisoners till a Number were accounted for, who rose and Captur'd the Ship Royall Bounty,⁶ bound from Hallifax to New York in January last—To Obviate the first, I would earnestly entreat, that a Letter might be sent to the Hon^l M^r Powell respecting M^r Shirley, and also the Seamen Prisoners, that are now in this Town, and those who may be captur'd in future, and bro't into this State—

The other I think does not affect M^r S: as Lord Howe has no Controul over the Fleet, or any thing Else belonging to Jamaica—I have reason to think Some of our Councill are displeas'd, that they have not the whole direction of the Prisoners brot into this State,—I beg leave to assure your Excellency, I have closely adher'd to the Instructions of my Hon^l Constituents, and if I am blamed it is for doing duty—With due respect [&c.]

THE NEW-YORK GAZETTE; AND THE WEEKLY MERCURY, MONDAY, JULY 6, 1778

NEW-YORK, July 6.

On Monday last arrived the Little Sue Privateer, of 8 guns, formerly the Rutledge, of fourteen;¹ she was taken by the Enterprize brig, of this port,² off Charlestown Bar, in sight of the Rattlesnake, privateer, of 20 guns,³ her cargo consists of rum, sugar, china, dry goods, molasses.

A few days since the Schooner Betsey, Capt. Hamilton, of 10 Guns; and the Schooner Sir William Erskine, of 14 Guns, both Letters of Marque, bound for Jamaica, went into Sinepuxent River, and brought off a Brig called the Polly, loaded with 130 Hogsheads of Tobacco, &c. and arrived here with her last Thursday Night.⁴

The same Night arrived here a Prize Ship loaded with 900 Tierces of Rice, taken by the Letter of Marque Brig Lord Howe,⁵ and carried into St. Augustine, some time since.

Last Tuesday at Noon Day, Mr. Hoyt,⁶ with a small party of Refugees went from Lloyd's Neck, in Whale Boats, to New-Field Harbour, in Connecticut, and brough[l] off a Schooner: He tow'd another Vessel down the Bay, but being pursued from the Shore, was obliged to leave her; however he brought the Schooner safe into Huntington Harbour; and the Galley that was set fire to some Days since by the same Party, was burnt to the Water's Edge.

The following Vessels were laying in Boston Harbour the 17th ult.

The Warren, Hopkins, 32 Guns.⁷ The Raleigh, Thompson, 32 do.⁸ The Deane, Samuel Nicholson, 32 do.⁹ The La Brune, French Indiaman, 22 do.¹⁰ The Cumberland, 20 do.¹¹ The Tyrannicide, Harding, 14 do.¹² The Independence, 14 do.¹³ The Hazard, Sampson, 20 do.¹⁴ Hancock, olim the Weymouth Packet, 20 do.¹⁵ The Speedwell, 10 do.¹⁶ The Admiral Keppel, a Prize from Bristol, 16 do. VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

Number 67.

Eagle Off Staten Island [N.Y.]

Sir,

July the 6th: 1778.

From my Letters by the Porcupine, of which Duplicates are forwarded herewith,¹ the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty will be informed of the Motions of the Army, whereby my proceedings with the Fleet have been chiefly influenced, to the 19th: past.

Having been retarded on the Passage down the Delaware after the Town of Philadelphia was evacuated, by almost continued Calms, I was not able to quit that River until the 28th: in the Evening; But anchored off of Sandy Hook (followed by the Transports) the next Day.

The Army arrived on the Jersey-Shore adjacent to the Heights of Neversunk,² the succeeding Morning; No considerable Attempt to interrupt the March having been made until the 28th:. An Attack appearing (as I understand) to have been then meditated in Force on the Rear-Guard, where the Commander in Chief was present, the Rebels were charged with great Vigor and beat off with considerable Loss.³

The Enemy desisting from every purpose of further Obstruction to the Movement of the King's Forces; And the Artillery, Baggage and part of the Troops taken off as the Weather would permit in the mean Time; The rest of the Army passed on the 5th: Instant, over a Bridge formed with the Flat-Boats across the Channel which had been made by the Sea last Winter, and separated the Peninsula of Sandy Hook from the Main. They were afterwards carried up to New-York.

On the 29th: of last Month, I was joined on my passage to this Port by the Grantham Packet; The Commander of which was charged with your Dispatches of the 3^d: of May advising me of the Force and supposed Destination of the Toulon Squadron, as well as Appointment of Vice Admiral Byron,⁴ to proceed with the Ships under his Command to Halifax, and further as recited in the Copy of his Orders of the same Date, transmitted for my Information and Government under the like Circumstances.

My best Endeavors will be exerted to promote the Benefit of the King's Service at this Conjunction: But the Sickness which prevails in the Fleet (having near Nine hundred Men now in the Hospitals at New York) greatly affects every Measure I can yet propose in the View, with the Force to be here assembled. The State of the Ships in this Port will be seen in the Return (N^o. 1) enclosed.⁵

From the Copy of my Letter to Vice Admiral Byron⁶ (N^o: 2) the Lords Commissioners will be apprized of all the Information obtained, and the Instructions sent to the Vice Admiral, respecting the Motions of the Toulon Squadron founded on the Report of the Commander of the Packet.

Deeming it inexpedient to send off the Armament for the Secret Service directed in my Instructions of the 21st: of March,⁷ until the Destination of the Toulon Squadron can be more perfectly ascertained, I have acquainted the General⁸ with my Sentiments thereupon. And am, in the mean Time getting (with the voluntary Assistance of the Transports' Men) the Ships named in the Margin⁹ ready for the Sea, with all Expedition: To act in future both with respect to the Equipment for the Secret Service before-mentioned, and other Matters regarding the Object of Vice Admiral Byron's Appointment, as Circumstances may require.¹⁰

The Necessary Refittings to put the Strombolo in Condition for Service,¹¹ having, by some Misunderstanding of my Intentions, been omitted until my Arrival here from the Delaware, I am doubtful whether I can have the Use of that Ship on the present Occasion.

Rear Admiral Gambier¹² will remain here under Orders to regulate the Duties of the Port, and to co-operate with the General in such Measures as he may see proper to adopt in my Absence, for the Advantage of the King's Service in his Department. I am, with great Consideration, Sir [&c.]

REAR ADMIRAL JAMES GAMBIER TO THE EARL OF SANDWICH

[Extract]

Ardent, off New York, 6 July 1778.

My honoured Lord—This instant only I learn that a packet is to be dispatched and to sail this evening with the Viscount's [Howe] and General's [Clinton] letters, forgive then, my revered patron, a hasty scrawl.

Painfully circumstanced as I have been ever since my arrival here, ignorant totally of all that has passed from scarce ever hearing from the Delaware until now that Lord Howe has just arrived at Sandy Hook and Sir Henry¹ with his army through the Jerseys. Not a single line have I ever had of even the Commissioners' arrival in the Delaware,² the evacuating Philadelphia, or the army's marching, until Lord Howe appeared off the Hook,³ so that what preparations I indefatigably prepared of transports, small ships, flat-bottomed boats, &c. to co-operate with and assist the army, and which were highly necessary, I undertook and perfected from the confidential intercourse and communication I had with the General Jones⁴ commanding here; and nothing transpiring from Philadelphia hither during the whole time, we could only pick up surmises and common reports, very insufficient to form any judgment or ground any opinion. The packets Lord Howe sent me after the arrival of the Trident at the Delaware,⁵ and announcing to me the evacuation and intended march of the army, were it seems put on board the Trident, who was to have proceeded hither long ago but unfortuitously detained up the Delaware a long time, so long indeed that she arrives but now with Lord Howe in the Eagle, and the packet sailing instantly, I have scarce time to acknowledge the having but just received your two kind letters of the 13th April⁶ that came in the Trident and to return you my sincere and affectionate thanks for your continued attention to my fate, which I feel sensible satisfaction in confiding to your friendship, assured and convinced that I shall be happy while my destiny remains in your hands.

Distressed in point of time I have not sufficient at least by this conveyance, either to express my gratitude or, from being hitherto kept in ignorance in this Siberia, to form any judgment of what has been done or is likely to happen, yet wish to obey your commands whenever possibly in my power. In view to see his Lordship and to get some insight I requested to be permitted to come down to him, he having wrote me to continue as usual in the command and duties of the port as if he was not at the Hook. He not forbidding my request, I went down to him for some hours and am just returned, but little wiser than I was either as to what has or may occur—so totally reserved to all. I learned from him that, having heard of a supposed destination of a squadron of French ships of war expected on the coasts of this continent, he judged fit to assemble all the ships of his Majesty's fleet of the greatest force in readiness to put to sea on the shortest notice; and as my stay will in that case be necessary to regulate the duties here and to co-operate with the commander in chief of the land forces in such measures as he may see proper to adopt for the King's service during his (Lord Howe's) eventual absence, he directed me to embark and move my distinguishing flag on board such ship of my division (composed of three or four small frigates and other vessels) as I should think fit, directing the captain of the Ardent to repair with that ship directly to the Hook to join him there.⁷

When his Lordship mentioned a hint of intelligence of a French squadron's being expected here or hereabouts (however different my own idea from the state of the particulars of the information and its grounds for apprehending their destiny being hitherwards, I mean in North America or the continent, and which idea of mine respectfully submitted to his Lordship) I nevertheless as humbly requested that if aught of opportunity of active service or honour was to be sought that he would indulgently and considerately allow me to claim a right to be employed; but he replied that it was absolutely necessary that either he or I should stay here with the army to co-operate with and assist it.

The orders he was under being to govern his conduct, more he would not say, nor did he seem inclinable to communicate aught. Visibly so, in so much that my painful suspense and ignorance of my future fate was not one jot relieved, and all that I had to console or comfort my sensibly uneasy feelings was and is the kind contents of your Lordship's letters. They are my only balm, and on them will I rely until a little time shall develop what his Lordship takes pains to keep so profoundly secret, in the comfortable hope that your continued friendship will not let me be kept abroad a second in command at any rate, nor permit the promises that I was considerately honoured with be annihilated and unperformed to the distress and hurt of a devoted servant, honoured with your friendship, who wishes to deserve it, and who has quitted a certain subsistence for an amiable wife and five helpless children to endeavour under your auspices and protection to better support and educate them at the cheerful risk of his life and health on a remote service of unequalled fatigue, difficulty, and unremitting attention. Most kindly did your Lordship comfort me by empowering me to rest satisfied that, if I should from the vicissitudes remain abroad, that the disappointment of not coming home as was intended would be made up on some degree to me and mine by my remaining commander in chief in an advantageous and honourable situation, with being one of the Commissioners, for which purpose a new commission would be sent out. This being the advice and wish of you, my honoured loved patron, was a balm to every corroding apprehension joined to the hoped idea and prospect that come what might of dangers difficulties, and anxieties in the most unpleasing untoward service, and now I fear reduced to become only a secondary object of the State's attention, I might still have my pains and labours crowned with some profit and support for my wife and children; and in this idea let me again entreat your patronage and protection, or a family that reveres you and depends on your kindness will be reduced to wretchedness.

Evacuating Philadelphia was unpalatable to many: I conclude it was judged at this time necessary. Some wish it had never been occupied, or the needle pointed to the southward. It will require I am told a very great body of troops to keep even this place alone—and a much larger force if Rhode Island also.

The answer from the C[ongress]—however strong—yet appears to some not still impossible, but that some time, and possibly not far off, that they may be more inclinable to treat—when the dispassionate shall have time to reflect, and those that do shall circulate and avail themselves of opportunities of communicating to the herd their opinion of the indulgent terms offered.⁸ At present a few illiberal, greedy, passionate mendicants sway and infatuate the multitude, keeping them in a state of ignorance and irascible ebriety.⁹ If such a fortuitous change of sentiments does not speedily happen, this distant and in itself globe of country is more, some fear, now unconquerable than Peru and Mexico were of old. Our army as they are is healthy, brave, and zealous; but an army must constantly be recruited. Twelve hundred leagues with its natural difficulties demand a solemn thought—the means and expense! Our ships, long out, want repair; and a considerable number must ever be constantly here on this extensive coast, too extensive almost to guard anyhow and at all seasons.

[La Motte-Picquet] his little squadron alarmed.¹⁰ Whenever all our cruisers are called in from the stations 'tis inconceivable what groups of supplies have been daily poured in, La Motte's few ships making such to have been found advisable. D'Estaing's reported visit or suspected mission causes the same to continue: they know all this, and they most sensibly avail themselves of it, astonishingly so! Small ships, small good-sailing vessels and numbers of them, are not only indispensably necessary on this coast, but 'tis also impossible to do without: 20-gun ships coppered, sloops, cutters, and small vessels, are of the greatest utility here; some ships of force are necessary likewise. The rebels can now muster threescore sail from their different ports from 36 to 20 and 18 guns; and yet I will venture to affirm that a third of that number of our frigates would take them all, would each party agree to meet, but we have such a range of coast and such a multiplicity of various services, convoys, army requisitions and attendances, that it is an Augean labour to attend to and find means to encounter such a variegated choice of numberless difficulties.

Pardon my honoured Lord so undigested and hasty a scrawl, let want of time, want of matter from cruel banishment hitherto, and being kept in ignorance unaccountably so, be my apology for not being able to obey your commands. I only pray for ability and opportunity in future, for I want not zeal or inclination.

Reports are various, and only reports can I learn. Lord H[owe] did tell me that Admiral B[yron] was expected. Lord Carlisle confirmed the same. And yet your Lordship's kind letters are my balm and banish every painful apprehension, and I comfort myself that you will not let me stay here, at least without having the command in chief and being in the Commission; and even then I fear there will be little possible field for your devoted servant to acquire either credit or honour to his zealous wishes of distinguishing your election or of getting subsistence and support for his wife and children. Monsieurs Picquet and d'Estaing have hitherto totally prevented the latter. . . .

See Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to Viscount Howe, 21 Mar. 1778, NDAR, 11: 1104. Gambier seems to be saying that because of this report, the British fleet in North America had been recalled, which permitted large amounts of supplies to flow into American ports.

MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAM ALEXANDER (LORD STIRLING), CONTINENTAL ARMY, TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL AARON BURR, CONTINENTAL ARMY

Brunswick [N.J.], July 6, 1778.

Gen. Washington desires me to state that he wishes you would employ three, four, or more persons, to go to Bergen Heights, Weehawk, Hoebuck,¹ or any other heights thereabout, convenient to observe the motions of the enemy's shipping, and to give him the earliest intelligence thereof; whether up the river particularly. In short, every thing possible that can be obtained.² Yours, &c.,

Thomas “Silverfish” Herbert, ran aground near Hampton and had to be rescued by the Virginia Navy galley Hero. Stewart, History of Virginia’s Navy, p. 48. A caboose or camboose, was a small house on the deck of a ship where the cooking was done. The “Fort” was Fort Nelson, which was situated across the Elizabeth River from Norfolk.

THOMAS SMITH TO MORRIS GAMMONT

Sir

Virginia Williamsburg 6th July 1778

In consequence of a Letter received from a M^r James Anderson dated the 26th May last in Charles Town (who disposed of a parcel of Prize Goods belonging to the State, in the State of Georgia)¹ I must request the favor you’ll be so obliging as to make application to Jn^o Wereat Esq^r Continental Agent for the Amo^u as per Enclosed Account Sales, which please to the Credit of this State giving me notice ~~per~~ Letter of the same with the amount in Virginia Continental Currency Dollars.— In Order to give you a more lively Idea of this matter I take the Liberty of subjoining a Paragraph, of M^r Anderson favour to me. “The Currency of the State of Georgia (the place we arrived at) being but in little repute, has obliged me to lodge the n^t proceeds in the hands of Jn^o Wereat Esq^r Cont^l Agent who has since paid it to the Paymaster on Account of the Troops, and is as soon as possible to procure me a Bill on the Continental Treasury which will answer much better than having Georgia Currency”—² I should have wrote M^r Anderson ꝑ this conveyance but have reasons to suppose he has ere this taken his departure for Martinique— I have not further to observe than should you or any of your Friends think proper to speculate to this part of the Continent I beg leave to make a tender of my services, and from my being engaged in a very Public manner, I flatter myself it gives me advantages which few private individuals possess Be assured the strictest attention and punctuallity shall be observed, and I shall be happy to have an Opportunity of serving you in any thing in my way³ I am [&c.]

LB, Vi, Thomas Smith Letter Book, 1777–1778, pp. 86–87. Addressed before opening: “Morris Gammont Esq^r.”

1. There is a copy of Anderson’s letter in Smith’s letter book. Ibid., pp. 166–67. In that letter, Anderson lists the “Prize Goods” as 100 barrels of figs and raisins that had been sent to him by Virginia’s agent at Martinique. In a letter to Smith’s predecessor, William Aylett, of 27 Dec. 1777, Richard Harrison, that agent, wrote: “the Brig^t Idea & Ann, a prize taken by the Liberty, Capⁿ Herbert, has got into a safe port of this Island. This is Loaded with Raisins, Figs, Wines &c^a from Malaga for England.” Ibid., p. 180. Harrison sent part of the cargo to Anderson in hopes that Anderson could sell the perishable figs and raisins and use the proceeds to purchase indigo. However, Anderson found the price of indigo too high to make the transaction profitable. Anderson to Smith, 26 May, ibid., p. 167.

2. The quotation here is identical to that in the copy of Anderson’s letter in Smith’s letter book with a few exceptions: the word “having” is not in the copy; the word “in” is “into” in the copy; Anderson spelled out “Continental” in “Cont^l Agent”; and there are commas after “Agent” and “Treasury” and a period after "Currency."

3. Gammont's reply has not been found.

JOHN WEREAT TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Dear Sir

Savannah 6th: July 1778.

. . . I advised the Marine Committee of Congress of the Capture of three British Vessels and the steps that had been taken in consequence thereof, in two Letters, one on the 18th: May by Richardson¹ who was sent off with dispatches from the House of Assembly, and the other by M^r: Telfair of the first of June requesting instructions how to conduct the business.² Upon a presumption that you are a Member of that Committee I think it unnecessary to recapitulate to you what I wrote them upon this business. I must add however that the Vessels were taken on the 19th: April, that as soon as they were brought to Sunbury every step was taken to prosecute them to effect, in consequence of which they were Condemned and Sold, but to this day I have not received a Shilling of the Money, the Soldiers that were concerned in taking them Murmur at not being paid their share of the prize money, and some of the Officers I understand are not much better satisfied.—³

I understand that General Howe⁴ and Colonel Elbert are like to dispute about the distribution of the prize money, the former claiming his share as commander in chief and the latter disallows the claim, as the General was not present when the Vessels were taken.— As these Vessels were taken by a detachment of the Continental Troops and the Gallies,⁵ I apprehend there is room for endless disputes amongst the Officers unless they will settle the Shares amicably among themselves, which does not seem likely to be the case.—

When I was first appointed Continental Agent here the Marine Committee advised me thereof in a Letter, dated 14th: November 1776 and at the same time told me they should instruct me more fully at some future time;⁶ but I have never been favor'd with their instructions to this day, farther than was conveyed generally in that Letter.— I could wish to be fully instructed with respect to the duties required of me by the public, especially where any of the Officers of the Army or Navy may be concerned; as Colonel Elbert who was concerned in taking these Vessels disputed my having any right to interfere in the Business, notwithstanding what the Marine Committee say in the Letter above mentioned and the concurring testimony of M^r: Walton.⁷ I wish to be fully informed of the method of distribution of the amount Sales of Prizes taken by the Continental Troops, if there is any bounty allowed by the Congress for every Gun of Board Vessels of War taken from the Enemy and what, the distinction made between Vessels of War and Merchantmen, Transports or Store Ships; if 'tis necessary that prizes (after condemnation) shall be sold by the Sheriff; tho' I should think not from the Letter wrote me by the Marine Committee which says, "if any prizes are sent into Georgia by the Continental Cruisers you are to receive them, Libel and prosecute to Condemnation, then make public Sale of Vessels, Cargoes and all effects that are Condemned." I wou'd be glad to be fully informed upon this head as the Sheriff who sold the prizes before mentioned has not accounted for a Shilling of the Money, and I expect to have a good deal of trouble before I shall be able to bring him to a settlement and get the amount Sales out of his hands.—⁸

The Continental Troops some time past were a good deal distressed for want of necessaries, no Money was to be got out of our Treasury and the Commissary and Quarter-Master were at a loss to procure Provision and necessaries for the[m.]⁹ I have advanced a good deal of Money for the use of the above Officers and purchased Medicines and other necessaries at the request of the General since he has marched with the Army on the Southern Expedition to the amount of about Six thousand pounds Sterling the whole amount that I am in advance is about ten thousand pounds which I shall be glad if you'll please to advise me how I shall be reimbursed as I did it to serve the Troops when they were really in distress; of which I presume General Howe will inform you.—

I hope you'll please to excuse the trouble I give you, as it is upon business of some consequence to the public as well as my self and I have experienced your readiness to communicate necessary information formerly. I am with great esteem [&c.]

John Wereat

L, NN, Emmet Collection. Docketed along left margin of the first page of the letter: "John Wereat Esquire/6th. July 1778 Rece^d 30 August." The recipient of the letter is not given. The editors have deduced that it was sent to Henry Laurens from internal evidence in the letter.

1. Messenger George Richardson. The letter has not been found.

2. Edward Telfair was a delegate to Congress from Georgia; on the contents of Wereat's letter, see Journal of the Continental Congress entry of 29 July, below.

3. The issue concerned the condemnation and sale of H.M. armed brig Hinchinbrook, East Florida Provincial armed sloop Rebecca, and another unnamed prize. Col. Samuel Elbert and Col. John White had obstructed the sale of the prizes by requesting that the proceeds be delivered to Elbert, the Continental officer commanding the flotilla that captured the vessels.

4. Maj. Gen. Robert Howe, commander of the Southern Department.

5. Georgia Navy armed galleys Washington, Capt. John Hardy, Lee, Capt. John Braddock, and Bulloch, Capt. Archibald Hatcher, commanders.

6. For Wereat's appointment, see Continental Marine Committee to Wereat, 14 Nov. 1776, NDAR 7: 156–57.

7. George Walton was a delegate to Congress from Georgia at the time of Wereat's appointment and the person who recommended Wereat for the position. Ibid.

8. The Continental Marine Committee had sent Wereat instructions on 24 June, above; on 1 August, below, they sent additional instructions.

9. Col. Francis Huger was deputy quartermaster general of the Southern Department; Col. Peter Taarling was quartermaster general of Georgia. Both were serving in the expedition. Mordecai Sheftall was the assistant deputy commissary general of issues for Georgia.

WILLIAM BINGHAM TO THE CONTINENTAL COMMERCE COMMITTEE

Gent^m

S^t Pierre M/que. July 6th 1778

Herewith I have the honor to inclose you Copies of two Sets of Papers, found on board an American Brig, bound from Portsmouth in New Hampshire to S^t Eustatia, with a Load of Lumber; likewise the Protest of the Captain & Seamen of Said Vessel on their Arrival here; by which you will please to observe that She was taken by an American Privateer (fitted out of this Place) under the Pretence of her being English Property¹

The only Reason on which this opinion could be founded, arose from her having two Sets of Papers; but upon taking a comparative View of them, it appears, that the American Clearances are of So recent a Date that She must evidently have Sailed from the Port where they were procured; whereas the English Papers were dated four Months previous to the Time She was taken—

It may be asked, whether the latter Papers did not entirely cancel & annul the former, according to the Maxim of the civil Law, Quod postrionum jussum est, ad jus ratum esto—²

The Merits of this Affair seem principally to turn upon two Points Whether the Privateer had a Right to take Possession of this Vessel & Send her into Port, as being dubious Property, & if this Right is clearly apparent, at whose Risk She is presumed to be from the Time of being taken possession of; for She happened to be retaken & carried into Antigua, & there condemned as American Property; Perhaps, it may be thought worthy Consideration, whether this Vessel was not equally justifiable in showing English Clearances, as the Privateer in hoisting English Colors & firing under them;— for Supposing an Armed Vessel makes use of false Colors to decoy the Enemy it is a general Practice never to fire under any others than what properly belong to her, & which her Commission entitles her to carry—

As the Owners in America may perhaps apply to Congress for Redress in this Affair,³ I have thought proper to transmit Copies of the respective Papers found on board; but must observe that the Orders given to the Captain dated Halifax Decem^r 24th 1777, & those dated Portsmouth April 1st 1778 are wrote on the Same Kind of Paper, & by the Same Hand; by which it appears, that the Plan of a double Set of Papers was previously concerted by the Owners, which exposes them to all the Penalties that the Law denounces against Such Practices—

I do not imagine that the Owners of the Privateer have given any Bond & Security obliging them, “not to transgress or exceed the Powers & Authorities contained in their Commission”

I have therefore applied to the General⁴ who has promised that he will exact of them a sufficient Security, for the Payment of whatever Damages Congress may think just & equitable—

It was proposed that this Matter should be decided by a Court of Admiralty in this Island, & indeed the Papers had been delivered to the Judge; but I convinced him how inadequate & incompetent his Jurisdiction must be, to the Discussion of a Point of this Nature; which entirely regarded two American Vessels, & which certainly ought to be Settled by those who formed the Law that they are to be governed by & are doubtless the best Interpreters of the Law that they themselves made—altho I have never heard of any Code of maritime Law which have been formed or adopted by Congress to regulate Cases of this Nature—

A French Vessel freighted by, & on Acc^t of Englishmen, with English Merchandize, was taken some time past & brought into this Port; the Captain, who had been permitted to Stay on board the Prize immediately on his arrival claimed the Protection of the French Government, & Sued for Damages that he asserted he had Sustained, by the Pillage of Goods which he Said was French Property; & claimed the Amount of the Freight as specified by his Charter Party—The Matter was entirely foreign to the Jurisdiction of this Island, however the Court of Admiralty took Cognizance of it;— This happened before the Accounts were received of our Independence being acknowledged by France;— In Politics, as well as in Trade, it is expedient sometimes to lose, & I Suffered this Affair to take its Course thro a Law Process, by which the Owners of the Privateer were condemned to pay much heavier Damages than I thought just;— I shall henceforth be extremely jealous of the Rights of our American Jurisdiction, in Matters purely relating to that Country; I should be happy to know whether the Treaty has any Reference to the Line of Conduct to be observed in parallel Cases—

This Island from its Situation must always have a great Comunion with America, & it often which occasions a considerable Resort of People from that Country;— it often happens that the contending Interests of different Parties amongst them, occasion Small Disputes, which require prompt & immediate Decisions;— Now in all Such Affairs will in future be refer'd to the Agent who may reside here, perhaps it may be thought proper that he Should be vested with Such Powers from Congress, as are necessary for the Support & Maintenance of Some Kind of Authority;— he should likewise be instructed in the Privileges, Regulations, & Restrictions of our Trade both foreign & domestic, as far as depends on our municipal Law or the Sanction of Treaties; as well as in every other Matter that has any Regard to the Business of his Department

I did myself the honor of mentioning to you in a former Letter that I had engaged the Conte Dargout, then General of this Island, to interest himself in procuring S^t Pierre to be a free Port; & when the Intendant took his Departure for France I drew up a small Treatise upon the Subject in which I enumerated the many Advantages that might be reciprocally derived from this Circumstance;—Perhaps it may be owing to the Prevalence of the Reasons I then advanced that this desirable Event will take place in a few Days—

Since the Arrival of the Dutch Admiral⁵ at S^t Eustatia with a Small Squadron to protect the Trade of the Dutch Subjects, he has granted Several Indulgences to the American Vessels, which they never before enjoyed;— he permits them publicly to hoist their Colors in the Road of S^t Eustatia, & has given Orders to his Cruizers, not to Suffer any American Vessel to be molested, within the Limits of the Island—

This Conduct has so exasperated the Governor of Antigua,⁶ that he has carried his Resentments to a very great Length;— he has peremptorily refused to one of the Dutch Frigates an Anchor & Cable that she stood in need of, & the liberty of the Port, to any of the Dutch Vessels to procure Water in—The Dutch Admiral being thus repulsed, applied to the General of this Island, who with great Politeness & Policy Supplied his present Wants, & made him a Tender of his future Services—

Admiral Barrington arrived at Barbados a few Days ago, with Several Frigates & a Fleet of Merchantmen—he has come out to relieve Admiral Young, who will leave the Station in a few Days—⁷

All the Preparations for commencing Hostilities that regard the Troops in this Island, are fully compleated—Nothing is wanted but a Stronger Navy & the Word of Command;— It is expected that we shall receive an Accession of Strength from the Operations of Count Destaing's Fleet in America, & that some of Lord Howes Ships may make their appearance here, under the Command of French Officers & manned by French Seamen—I Have the honor to be [&c.]

MAJOR GENERAL EYRE MASSEY, BRITISH ARMY, TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

[Extract]

My Lord

Halifax 7 July 1778—

. . . I have not been idle one hour, since the Report of the French War, and be assur'd my Lord, the French Fleet dare not attempt to enter this harbour, As I have thrown up and still continue to work, without one moments loss of time, at such Batterey's, as I think cannot be carried, but this I have done upon the strength of a letter, I receiv'd from my good Lord Beauchamp who has assur'd me, of a Reinforcement of three Batalions, to be with me speedily—¹

All my out posts, keep their Ground, and I find Fort Howe, at the Entrance of S^t John River to be of the utmost Consequence, with two small Arm'd Sloops,² which I have constantly cruising in the Bay of Fundy, keep all quiet; I have the Satisfaction to tell your Lordship, that Captain Fielding,³ who Commands the Navy Line, and I got Intellegence of nine Pirates being collected in Beaver Harbour, near Halifax[.] we instantly sent out two Arm'd Vessels, well mann'd with a Detachment of the Troops of this Garrison which burnt four of them, and my two little Cruisers in the Bay, took two more,⁴ so that in the course of three Weeks, we have destroyd Six that had been doing all the Wickedness, that is possible[.] Ever Since, I Commanded here, and never could prevail on any other Officer, but Captain Fielding to join me in so laudable an Exertion for the honor of our Country. I shall not trouble your Lordship further, but refer You to Lieu^t Throlop. I have the Honor to be [&c.]

JOURNAL OF THE MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL

[Boston] Tuesday July 7th 1778

The Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Walter Hatch¹ late second Lieutenant of the Brigantine *Hazard*² in the service of this State have attended the service & have examined the several Depositions³ taken pro & con relative to the Mutiny which arose on board said Brigantine during her late Cruize & tho' they do not find that they contain any direct proof that the said Walter Hatch was the stirrer up or promoter of said Mutiny, yet, from said Depositions, there are grounds to suspect that he did not do all that a good officer would or ought to have done to discourage it, the Committee therefore report that he be directed to attend the Board & that he be cautioned to behave with more circumspection for the future & as a good officer ought to do to use his influence & Authority to keep up good order & discipline among the Crew of such Vessel as he may be employed in and that the order of this board for detaining his wages & prize money be reversed & repealed—

COMMODORE WILLIAM HOTHAM, R.N., TO SIR CHARLES HOTHAM THOMPSON

[Extract]

Preston at Sandy Hook [N.J.]

My Dear Sir Cha^s:

July 7th: 1778.

The last Letter which I received from you, and the only One unanswered, is of the 23^d of March, denoting every appearance of War with France, who I devoutly hope will suffer severely for their perfidy during our Contest with America. By the place from whence I date my Letter You will perceive I am somewhat nearer the Main Ocean than what I was. Admiral Gambier has taken my late Station off of the Town,¹ and I have joined My Lord Howe, who met the Army here from Philadelphia which they evacuated, and marched hither through the Jerseys: . . .

From some Intelligence My Lord Howe has had of the probability of Mons^r D'estain being upon the Coast,² He is getting together all his largest Ships with a view of looking for them, and we shall proceed according to the present Plan, immediately upon this Service, which being over, or not taking place, I am then as his Lordship informs me, intended for a different one, which it would at this time be improper not to be very close about³. . . .

I am much obliged to the Ladies⁴ for their Remembrance of One who is as much their humble Servant, as he is My Dear Sir Cha^s: most Affectionately & Sincerely Yours

W Hotham

I am sorry to find that neither you or I have got the Government of Portsmouth, in either of which Cases I should have had a good House; You must therefore now try for Plymouth which will do as well.⁵

L, UKHIHu, William Hotham Collection. Sir Charles Hotham Thompson (1729–94) was William Hotham's elder brother. Shortly after inheriting his maternal uncle's estate in 1771, he added Thompson to his name but reverted to Charles Hotham in 1787. Charles Hotham Thompson had served in the British Army, rising to the rank of major general before retiring in 1775. At 6:15 o'clock I made the same signal to the Chimère.⁵

At 6:30 o'clock I signaled it to prepare to tack about before the Wind, by a white flag at the mizzenmast, by a yellow flag, at the mainmast, and by a red flag at the foremast.

At 7 o'clock the Chimère and the César signaled two unknown ships.

At noon the English frigate having put about toward the land I made the signal to the César to tack before the wind, by a white and blue flag at the foremast with its private pennants.

At one being exceedingly close to the land, I yielded before the wind, and I found only 7 fathoms of water; at the same instant the César ran aground, and I immediately made the signal; it then sent for some anchors and it signaled the Chimère to send it an anchor capable of holding a ship of the line.

At 3:30 o'clock the César got itself off, and it made the signal; I asked it if it was in distress, by a white and red flag at the mainmast, and by a red flag at the foremast: it replied, No.

A moment after I signaled this ship of the line whether it maneuvered well, by a white and blue flag at the mainmast, and a Dutch flag at the foremast.

A little later I made the signal to the *Fantasque*⁶ and the *Sagittaire*⁷ to chase, by a yellow flag at the foremast, with their private pennants.

At 4:30 o'clock I signaled to the *Alcmène*⁸ to join forces, by a white and blue flag at the mainmast with its private pennants.

A moment after I had made the signal to the Engageante to come to speak with me, by a red and blue flag at the mizzenmast, by a white flag at the mainmast, and by a blue flag, with its private pennants.

Bearings

Cape James bore at N.W.¼ N. 3d. N. And the land further South in sight at S.W. 4d W. corrected, distance 4½ leagues.

Bearings

About 6 o'clock in the morning we observed a ship sailing out of the Delaware that we believed to be a frigate; the whole squadron chased it;

At 2 o'clock the César ran aground about 2 leagues from the coast; this caused it to anchor immediately in 9 fathoms, bottom of sand and ooze, so that it sent for assistance; this ship of the line had no need of assistance having remained a short time aground.

Bearings

From this anchorage the land bore further South at S.W.¼ S. 4d. S.

And the lighthouse at Cape James to the N.N.W. 5d. N. corrected, distance 6 leagues.

Cape May at N.¼ N.E. and the lighthouse at Cape James to the N.N.W. 5 d. W. corrected distance 2½ leagues.

At 9 o'clock in the evening we anchored in 11 fathoms, bottom fine sand.

Bearings

The land further South along the coast to S.S.W.

Cape May to the N.¼ W., distance 1¼ leagues.

On weighing anchor the commandant gave orders to the Fantasque, the Sagittaire, the Chimère, the Engageante and the Alcmène to chase the frigate which we had seen come out and which was not wearing a flag.

put about to speak. The César signaled that her barges were not alongside.

At 6 o'clock I asked the César if it could get under way, and in how much time, by a white flag with a red cross⁹ at the mizzenmast, by a white and red flag at the mainmast and by a red flag at the foremast. This ship of the line signaled 8 o'clock in the evening.

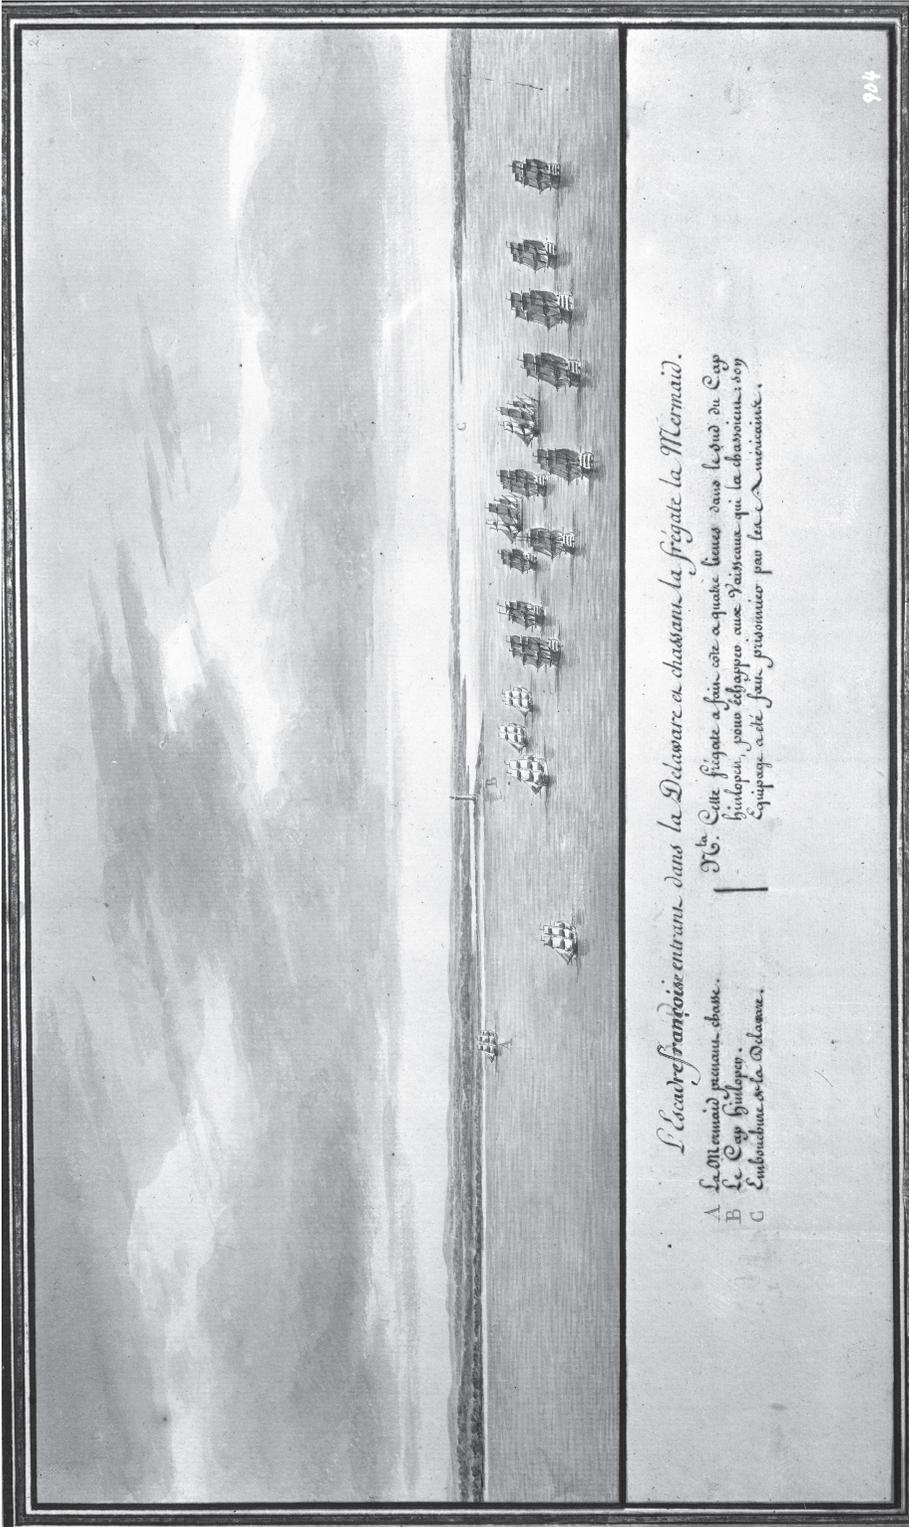

A moment after I had made the signal to the Fantasque and the Chimère to continue the chase during the night: the Alcmène and the Engageante were also in chase. I then made the signal to anchor.

At 7 o'clock, the César having weighed anchor, and it was on course toward the squadron.

At 8 o'clock we anchored and the César cast anchor at 9 o'clock.

regained the channel which was toward the bank of the Delaware River, 5'W ¼ SW, 3 leagues distant.

A short time afterward, I signaled and chased an English frigate¹ that left from the river. I passed a part of the morning tacking in order to reach the ship that I chased, which was tacking frequently; this made me judge that there were sandbanks and shallow depths extending along the coast, which was found to be true, for in a short time the *Cezar*² ran aground, but the wind blew rather fresh and it was easily refloated.

Latitude observed 38.° 31'

Distance from the coast, about 8 leagues

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the General³ signaled me to pass under his stern. I came to astern and to the leeward of him; he sent on board my ship M. De Puysegur,⁴ who placed me on behalf of the General under the orders of M. the Commander De Suffren,⁵ commanding 5 Ships of the line or frigates, as follows, the Fantasque, the Sagittaire,⁶ the Chimère,⁷ the *Engageante*⁸ and the Alcmène,⁹ and to spare nothing to take or destroy in any manner the English frigate that was concealed between two banks and that one could hardly see. He recommended not compromising in anything and to rejoin soon his division with the rest of the squadron, which would remain anchored at the entrance of the Delaware River.

At sunset regained the channel to the NW $\frac{1}{4}$ N. distance [9 leagues?]

I tacked and took soundings throughout the night, finding a few times only 5 fathoms, then I tacked.

LIEUTENANT RICHARD MARVEN AND MIDSHIPMAN SAMUEL SHAW, CONTINENTAL NAVY, TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

To the Honorable the Delegates of the United States of America in Congress assembled most humbly Sheweth

That your Petitioners Subjects of said States and Inhabitants of the States of Massachusetts Bay and Rhode-Island long before and on the 19th day of February AD. 1777 were employed by and in the actual Service of said States as a Lieutenant and Midshipman on board the Warren Frigate which then and for a long time before lay in Providence River in the State of Rhode-Island, which Frigate was commanded by John B. Hopkins Esq^r as Captain under the command of his Father Esek Hopkins Esq^r the Commodore.— Your Petitioners having lain on Board Said Ship in a total State of inactivity for Several Months, and being fully Satisfied that therein they could not Serve their Country in its defence were induced to petition the Hon^{ble}. Marine Committee to Inquire into the conduct of Comodore Hopkins, and did for that purpose on the 19th of February 1777 together with Roger Haddock John Truman James Brewer John Grannis John Reed James Sellers George Stillman & Barnabas Lathrop all Officers on board Said Ship Warren Sign and transmitt to said Marine Committee the Petition aforesaid with Vouchers therefor, that Congress might know and be truly inform'd of the real Character of an Officer so important to the Interest of said States as well as so dignified by Rank.¹ Your Petitioners humbly beg leave to Suggest that they then thought and Still think it was their bounden duty to make the information aforesaid in the manner they then did— and that it is the duty of every Subject to inform proper Authority of all public Injuries the States Suffer and to petition with freedom for an inquiry their into in order to their being removed; and this without personal danger & hazard Your Petitioners beg leave further to inform Congress that the Said Esek hath Since purchased out of the Clerks Office of the Inferior Court of common pleas for Providence County in the State of Rhode-Island a Writ of Attachment against them with the other Persons before Named merely for Signing and transmitting to your Hon^{rs} Said Marine Committee the Said Petition, whereby your Said Petitioners have been arrested and held to most enormous Bail, to answer to the Said Eseks writ aforesaid and therein hath Alledged himself to be endamaged by the Petitioners Petition aforesaid 10'000.£.² Your Petitioners most humbly Suggest, that altho Congress gave to the Said Esek the fairest and fullest notification of their doings upon Said Petition, with their express declaration that he the Said Esek might appear and answer to the complaint of Said Petitioners upon a certain distant Day if he saw cause, yet from a consciousness of these as well as other & perhaps more weighty causes being Justly Assigned for his removal promised most important command: he never appeared as your Petitioners have been informed & verily beleive—

Your Petitioners, not being Persons of Affluent fourtunes but young Men who have Spent most of their time in the Service of their Country in Arms against its cruel Enemies Since the Commencement of the present war, finding themselves Arrested for doing what they then beleived and Still beleive was nothing but their duty, held to Bail in a State where they were Strangers, without connections that can assist them in defending themselves as well as (in this Instance, they humbly think) the Rights of the Subjects at large in these free States, against a powerfull as well as artfull person, who by the advantages of his Offices and of the present war hath amassed great wealth—do most humbly implore the Interposition of Congress in there behalf in Such way and manner as the wisdom of that most august Body Shall direct and order— that Your Petitioners as well as the Subjects of these happy States may at all times be Secured from fear and dangers in their humble and Just Applications to the Supreme and Sovereign Authority of this Country and as in duty bound Your Petitioners Shall ever pray—³

Copy.

Sir,

Eagle New York

July the 8th. 1778.

I have received correct Intelligence of the Arrival of the Toulon Squadron the 5th Instant on the Coasts of Virginia, from whence it has been attended by the Cruizers I had stationed for that Occasion off of the Delaware, Yesterday Morning.

The French Ships were steering to the NNE with the Wind Westerly, until, on discovering one of the Frigates¹ placed off of the Delaware, the French Admiral was induced to haul his Wind to the Southward in Chase. It is thence to be concluded, he means to appear off of this Port. But that he will most probably direct any Attacks he may meditate on these Parts of the American Coast, against Rhode Island.

If he is seen to pass to the Eastward of the Nantucket Shoals, for the more Northern Parts of the Continent, the earliest Intelligence of his Motions will be forwarded to You. But I think it will be advisable to put to Sea with the Squadron under your Command; Keeping down from Cape-Cod, along the New England Coasts, and thence round the Nantucket Shoals, towards Rhode-Island and this Port, for facilitating our Junction with the greater Expedition: Unless You should have Reason to conclude from Information obtained, or Discoveries made on your Passage, You can fall upon any more probable means of crossing upon the French Ships on their Way to Boston. For as they left Toulon the 13th. of April, it is highly probable they must soon make for some Port, to procure Water, before they can engage in any hostile Operation of Length.

Lieutenant Knight,² who is charged with this Dispatch, is a very intelligent and skillfull Officer, having considerable Knowledge of all parts of the Northern Coasts. I have the Honor to be, With great Regard, Sir, [&c.]

JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Philadelphia] Wednesday, July 8, 1778

Resolved, That the governors of Maryland and Virginia¹ be severally requested to take proper measures for giving the earliest intelligence to any French fleet or ships of war that may appear off the Bay of Chesapeake, of a fleet of British ships of war being ready to sail for North America, as by the information transmitted from the American commissioners at Paris;² and that they be respectively desired to accommodate any such French fleet or ships of war with good pilots for bringing them safely into the Bay, should they incline to come there:

That a similar request and proper advice be transmitted to each of the governors of North and South Carolina, and Georgia.³

JCC 11: 675-76.

1. Gov. Thomas Johnson of Maryland and Gov. Patrick Henry of Virginia.

2. On this same date, Congress ordered that the letter from the American Commissioners in France “To the Governor, or any Counsellor, or Senator, or Member of any House of Representatives, in any of the Thirteen United States of America,” dated 18 May, be printed. JCC 11: 675. For that letter, addressed to “to the Governor or Member of any House of Representatives in any of the 13 United States of North America,” see NDAR 12: 706–7.

3. Gov. John Houstoun of Georgia, Gov. Richard Caswell of North Carolina, and Pres. Rawlins Lowndes of South Carolina. As seen in Henry Laurens, President of Congress, to General George Washington, 10 July, below, the French fleet commanded by the comte d’Estaing reached the coast of the United States on 5 July and by 8 July was anchored off Delaware Bay, and was in need of pilots.

VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING TO HENRY LAURENS

Monsieur

J'ai l'honneur d'informer votre excellence Et De Rendre Compte par elle au Congrès de L'arrivée de L'Escadre du Roy sur les Côtes des États-Unis de L'amerique.

honoré des pleins pouvoirs du Roy pour traiter avec le Congrès, J'ai l'honneur, Monsieur, d'adresser a votre Excellence la Copie de ma Lettre de Creance Concernant Cet objet. L'honneur de la presentes moy même, le desir de faire ma Cour aux respectable Representants d'une nation Libre, l'empressements daller Reverer en eux les hautes qualités de sagesse, et de fermeté qui Les caracterisent; vertu que toute L'Europe admire et que La France Cherit; sont un Bonheur qui ne peut être Retardé que par l'Envie de me Rendre digne des Bontés des Etats unis. En Commancant par Remplir les devoirs que Les Circonstances, et que mes fonctions militaires m'imposent; J'Espere qu'elles me serviront d'Excuse, et que Votre Excellence voudra Bien les faire agreer au Congrès.

J'ai l'honneur d'ecrire a son excellence Monsieur le General Washington,¹ et J'aurai Celui d'envoyer successivement à son quartier General deux officiers pour lui offrir De Combiner mes mouvements avec les siens. La Reputation meritée qu'un aussi grand homme de Guerre s'est si Justement acquise, ne me permet pas de douter qu'il est convaincu mieux que personne du prix des premiers instans. J'espere que l'auttorisation du Congrès luy aura Laissé La liberté d'en profiter, et que nous pourrons des actuellement Et sans aucun Retard agir de Concert pour Le Bien de la Cause Commune: elle me parait Exiger que Les ordres du Congrès Le vent Le plus promptement les difficultés Legales qui peut être n'existent pas.

M^e De Choin² major d'infanterie, Et parent de M^e de Sartine,³ est chargé de presenter Cette Lettre a Votre Excellence, il est un des officiers que J'Envoye à Monsieur Le General Washington.

La promptitude avec laquelle son Excellence M^e Gerard⁴ ministre plenipotentiaire du Roy, vat se háter d'aller Resider auprès du Congrès, et d'y deployer le caractere dont Sa Majesté La Revêtu, previndra toutes Les Lenteurs que mon Eloignement pourrait occasionner au sujet des Conventions militaires. J'ai l'honneur dassurer Votre Excellence que je me farai au devoir Et un plaisir d'executter tout Ce que M^e Gerard aura promis. les paroles qu'il Vous donnera, n'auront Besoin d'autres Ratifications de ma parti, que celles qu'exige le phisique ; et que Les possibilites du metier font nécessairement dependre du militaire ou du marin qui agit.

Un ministre assés heureux pour avoir En la Gloire ineffacable de signer le traité qui unit deux puissances, dont les interets sont si intîmement Liés, est fait pour Conserver la plus grande influence; sur mes vues ulterieures. le cortege qui Le conduit; Celui par lequel le Roy fait Ramener auprès des Etats unis, son Excellence Monsieur Silas Dean,⁵ est sans dout La pompe la plus Brillante qui a Jamais acompagné des ambassadeurs. J'ose Espérer qu'elle deviendra utile a Lintérêt Respectif des deux nations.

Le plus Beau moment de ma Vie, serait Celui dans lequel Je pourrais y contribuer En quelque chose. Je Remplirai En même temps mon devoir, Comme Chargé des ordres de Sa Majesté, et je satisferai mes principes, et mon inclination comme particulier. Jay Lhonneur d'être [&c.]

[Contemporary Translation]

Sir,

I have the honor to inform your excellence and through you to Acquaint Congress of the arrival of the king's fleet on the coasts of the united states of America

Being vested with full powers by the King to treat with Congress I have the honor sir of transmitting to your excellence a copy of my letter of credence with regard to that object. The honor of presenting these powers in person, to gratify the desire I have to pay my respects to the honorable representatives of a free nation, the inclination I feel to reverence in them those high qualities of wisdom & fortitude which mark their character, virtues which Europe admires and which France cherishes is a happiness, which nothing could have retarded but the earnest desire of rendering myself worthy of the favour of the united states by entering upon the execution of those duties which circumstances and my military command require of me. I hope this will serve for my excuse & that your excellence will make it agreeable to Congress.

I have written to his excellency gen^l Washington¹ and shall dispatch two officers successively to his headquarters with an offer of combining my movements with his. The deserved reputation which that great warrior has so justly acquired admits not a doubt but he is more deeply sensible than any other of the value of the first moments. I hope the Authority of Congress will leave him at liberty to take advantage of them, and that we shall be able immediately without any delay to act in concert for the good of the common cause, & in my Opinion the orders of Congress should with all expedition remove every legal difficulty or restraint if any such exists.

M^r de Chouin² a major of infantry & a near relation of M^r de Sartine³ has the charge of this letter to your Excellence. He is one of the officers I have dispatched to general Washington.

The readiness with which his excellency M^r Gerard⁴ minister plenipotentiary of the king hastens to reside near Congress & there employ the character with which his majesty has invested him will prevent any delays which my distance from you might occasion on the subject of military conventions. I have the honor to assure you[r] excellence that I shall make it my duty & pleasure in executing whatever M^r Gerard shall promise The assurances which he shall give will require no farther ratification on my part than the nature of the thing requires and the possibility of the measure makes necessarily to depend on the military or marine force concerned therein

A minister so happy as to have had the inexpressible glory of signing a treaty which unites two powers whose interests are so closely connected, is fixed upon to give the greatest influence to my farther views. The retinue, which accompanies him and with which the king has sent back his excellence M^r Deane⁵ to the united states is doubtless the most brilliant that ever attended an Ambassador I hope it will conduce to the mutual interest of the two nations

The happiest moment of my life will be that in which I shall be able to contribute there to in any respect. I shall then at the same execute my duty agreeably to the orders of his Majesty, I shall satisfy my principal and gratify my own particular inclination. I have the honor to be [&c.]

Sir,

I have the honor of imparting to Your Excellency the arrival of the King's fleet; charged by his Majesty with the glorious task of giving his allies the United States of America the most striking proofs of his affection. Nothing will be wanting to my happiness if I can succeed in it, it is augmented by the consideration of concerting my operations with a General such as Your Excellency. The talents and great actions of General Washington have ensured him in the eyes of all Europe, the title, truly sublime of deliverer of America. Accept Sir, the homage that every man—that every military man owes you; and be not displeased, that I solicit, even in the first moment of intercourse, with military and maritime frankness, a friendship so flattering as yours. I will try to render myself worthy of it by my respectful devotion for your country; it is prescribed to me by orders, and my heart inspires it.

I have the honor of rendering account to Congress of the letter I wrote to Your Excellency.¹ M^r. D. [Off the Delaware Capes]

At Sunrise the wind to the SW, fresh, the weather foggy. I continued my tacks in order to join the English frigate¹ which was to the windward of me. At 8 o'clock in the morning the frigate the Chimère,² the ship of the line the *Sagittaire*³ began to engage it, a little later, the frigate ran aground and lost its mizenmast, which one judges was accelerated by the grounding; she then cut the other masts in order to avoid the danger in which she was of breaking up. M. the Commandant de Suffen,⁴ having made sure of the loss of that frigate, signaled to rejoin, which brought them together with him and set course to the NNE by the compass.

At 5 o'clock in the evening we spotted the squadron moored at the entrance of the Delaware river, in order to make ourselves recognized, the Fantasque made the recognition signal, to which the General⁵ responded.

We have learned since that the frigate lost on shore was name the Mermaid, commanded by Capt. John Hooker. This frigate was anchored in the Delaware with another frigate called the Roebuck,⁶ which two or three days earlier had passed to the leeward and in sight of the squadron. The Mermaid had been alerted to our approach by a small sloop that witnessed our combat. It cut its cables and left the day the squadron anchored in the Delaware, but the squadron pressed so near that it forced it to engage between two shoals that had no exit and on which it was lost. The entrance of the Delaware is very dangerous, in fact one finds there an infinity of bars and shoals, in the midst of which one cannot pass without a pilot and even then only with great circumspection.

4. Capitaine de vaisseau Pierre-André bailli de Suffren de Saint-Tropez, commanding French ship of the line Fantasque.
5. Comte d'Estaing's flagship, Languedoc.
6. The British had evacuated from Philadelphia in June. Before Mermaid relieved it, H.M.S. Roebuck, commanded by Capt. Andrew Snape Hamond, had the duty of preventing British ships from sailing into Philadelphia. UKLPR, Adm. 1/5310, fol. 339.

JOURNAL OF AMBROSE SERLE

WEDNESDAY, 8th. [July.]

Early this morning chased & retook¹ a Brig (the John & Rebecca)² bound to Boston, laden with medicines, Cremer Tartar, Currans, &c. She had been taken about the middle of June off the Bay of Biscay by the Boston Rebel Frigate,* commanded by one [Samuel] Tucker, wch Vessel was chased by the Apollo, when she sailed out of Boston, for two Days; but escaped in a Fog.³ The noted John Adams was then on board bound to France. The Boston had also taken the Martha, another Merchant Vessel.⁴ The Brig we retook was from the Streights for London.⁵

In the afternoon spoke a Dutch Vessel, from Eustatia to Amsterdam.

*This Frigate uses poisoned musket Balls, some of which we took with the Prize-master,⁶ put into this Vessel.

1. Serle was a passenger in H.M. sloop Porcupine, Capt. William C. Finch, commanding, bound to Falmouth, England, from Philadelphia.

2. Brig John and Rebecca, George Finley, master. For more on the brig and its capture, see Journal of Continental Frigate Boston, Capt. Samuel Tucker, commanding, 19 June, below.

3. Continental Navy frigate Boston eluded H.M. frigate Apollo, Capt. Philemon Pownoll, commanding, by out-sailing it. See Journal of Continental Navy Frigate Boston, 19 Feb. 1778, NDAR 11: 373–75.

4. On the capture of British letter of marque ship Martha, see Captain Samuel Tucker to the Continental Navy Board of the Eastern Dept., 11 Mar. 1778. NDAR 11: 1079. Martha was recaptured by H.M. frigate Rainbow on 11 May. See James Warren to Samuel Adams, 26 June, above.

5. Serle was undoubtedly saying here that the John and Rebecca, when captured, was en route from the Straits of Gibraltar to London.

MAJOR JOHN FAUCHERAUD GRIMKÉ'S JOURNAL

[Camp, Fort Tonym, East Florida] July 8 [1778]

Col^o. Williamson arrived in the Governors Camp this Morning which was announced to his Camp by the discharge of Seven Pieces of Artillery:¹ it was mistaken in our encampment for an alarm, no information having been sent to Us that such a Salute was intended. We were however agreeably disappointed.—

Col^o: W^mson's men are crossing S^t Illas.²—

A Message having been rec^d by the General inviting him to a Conference with Governor Houston & Col^o: Williamson, the General, having previously consulted his principal Field Officers, Resolved that He would not sacrifice Service to Etiquette, but Condescend to accept their invitation: the General was sensible no good could arise from such a Consultation, as the Governor strenuously asserted his Right to Command, Col^o: W^mson also Claiming an independent & Separate authority, & the General having been in a peculiar Manner instructed by Congress not only to Direct the operations of all troops, but making him accountable for the Consequences, altho' no prospect of success, either that a Coalition of Parties would take place so as to Vest the command Ultimately in One Person, or even should this point be happily got over, that the Sentiments of the Chiefs would Unite in pursuing One Object, Governor Houston pressing to cross S^t Johns River, Col^o: Williamson advising to march as far as S^t Johns & the General & his officers being of Opinion that we should retreat from this post, well convinced that the Enemy intend no opposition to Us on this side of S^t Johns & being equally well assured that it is impossible for us to cross S^t Johns River with safety to the Troops unless the Commodore³ can take possession of that River & maintain it. The Commodore however when called upon declared it as his opinion that the Galleys⁴ should not by any means be trusted out to Sea, the risk they ran in such Operations being much too great for the advantages they will gain thereby, as the Galleys were never intended to go to Sea & consequently they could only engage in smooth Water, but at Sea they would easily fall a Sacrifice to a Ship of much less force & weight of metal than the Galleys; & that this would be the Event at present can never be doubted, as the best information & latest intelligence acquaint us with a 20 Gun Ship fitted & manned, now laying in the Chops of S^t Johns River,⁵ for this especial purpose: that the cutting a passage for the Fleet thro' Amelia Narrows was the only Rational & feasible method that could be pursued, but that the Pioneers we had were so few in number & the task to be performed so long & laborious that the Season would be too far advanced before we could effect any Object in view & that should we retreat after having opened this communication without having succeeded in the proposed object and destroying their fleet that it is only showing them a new & more expeditious way into the State of Georgia attended with less fatigue, danger & Expence & most probably that these Incursions being in the lower settlements of that State they will be enabled to effect more Material & important Mischief, & derive much greater advantages & carry off prizes of more Value than what they gain in the back Country of the different States. but that even supposing the Galleys already passed the Narrows & at liberty to enter into S^t Johns River, the strength of the Enemy we are well assured is greater than Ours; that they have a Brig which carries four 42 Pound: and Six 4 Pound:, besides two flats each mounted with heavy metal & besides this naval power, which alone is superior to our fleet, they have two 42 Pound: & 4 Six Pound: at Hesters bluff, and within point-blank shot of which the fleet must pass & from whence they probably would be much Annoyed; what success therefore can we promise ourselves in engaging an enemy so superior in force, & at such a distance from any place of Security that the defeat of the fleet must Actually include the Conquest of the Troops, who it is certain must surrender Prisoners of War or starve whilst the connection with the fleet is cut off, that should the land forces advance with the fleet to Support them by batteries etc & any accident should befall the Shipping that their Situation would be far more distressing in having a longer Retreat to Make & in being pursued by an Enemy just at their backs & that should the fleet be defeated and no batteries erected by the land forces to cover their retreat they must inevitably be sacrificed; on the Contrary should the Galleys be successful the Enemys fleet would retire under Cover of the battery at Hester's bluff & the advantages they would reap would be very insufficient to compleat any important Enterprize unless the men lost in an Action which it is natural to suppose would be bloody could be so immediately replaced as to pursue the advantage just gained without giving the Enemy either time to reinforce their troops, repair their losses, or carry off their Vessels without farther injury. That in an Enterprize of this nature it was but Reasonable to Suppose that He should be fully manned; He declared that He was not half manned at present, neither did he know where he could Obtain them from: He had hitherto been supplied with Troops from the Continental Battalions, that he was extremely indebted to the Army for this assistance, but could not reasonably hope for a farther Supply as those troops were now diminished to less than half the Number they set out with by continual Sickness & that the Disorders were not only encreasing daily, but were more fatal & Violent in their Nature. These Reasons urged the Commodore to favour the Retreat.

Several Men in the first Batt: of the Sec^d: Brigade⁶ have claimed their Respective Discharges.

Ten or Twelve Men have deserted from Us lately, supposed to have gone over to the enemy as the Chiefly belonged to the fourth Georgia Continental Battalion.⁷

The Private who was wounded by the wad of one of the Carolina Galley Guns died of a Mortification.⁸

My Dear Sir

Inclosed are Copys of a Letter from the President of Congress of the 27th. Ult^o. and of a resolve of Congress of the 25th. of the same month¹ just now received which I forward to you by this Conveyance that no delay may take place. You will please in consequence of them Immediatly to Consult with the Council of War² and General Sullivan³ on the Subject of them and if they Judge the Measure Expedient take measures and give directions for carrying the same into Execution. I presume if they approve the Measure as I suppose they will it will be thought advisable to build the Gallies as I imagine no Suitable Vessells are to be obtained there. however that will be better known after you have advised with them. I dare say your own good Judgment will direct you to Execute this order with Spirit and dispatch and of your own prudence to take the Advice of Council and General Sullivan be it what it may in writing under their hands. We have no news. Cap^t Hopkins⁴ set out for Providence this morning and will give you the State of the Ships here.⁵ I have a hard Task alone here with so much business on hand. I wish to see you here as soon as possible and am Your Friend and hum^{ble} Serv^t

[July 1778, Languedoc, Delaware Bay]

From Wednesday 8 to Thursday 9

After noon there returned to us one of our canoes with several Americans who told us that the English had evacuated Philadelphia two weeks before and it had been twelve days since their warships and transports had sailed for New York. This news decided the General to depart the next day to go attack them at New York. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon our two ships of the line and the frigate returning, they reported to the General that they had caused the frigate to run ashore and cut its masts, that it carried 24 guns in broadside.¹ Having learned that the Congress was established at Philadelphia, the General dispatched by land one named Choin, major of infantry,² to announce his arrival to the Congress, and the General decided to give to Messrs. Gerard and Deane the frigate La Chimère,³ to take them to Philadelphia with their suites and baggage, with the two prizes we had made⁴—in the squall there had been a small frigate or privateer in the height of the river; at 7:30 o'clock in the morning these gentlemen passed into one of the prizes; in leaving the ship they were saluted with three shouts of “long live the king” and fifteen canons; at 9 o'clock made signal to the squadron to weigh anchor; at 10 o'clock a small flaw of wind from the NNE, set sail and steered to the SSE; at noon Cape May to the NE 3° North, the tower of Cape James to the SW½W 4° West, Latitude observed 83-5' 2m.

THE CONNECTICUT GAZETTE; AND THE UNIVERSAL INTELLIGENCER,
FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1778

For the CONNECTICUT GAZETTE¹

ABOUT three Weeks ago, Mr. Robert Sheffield² of Stonington, made his Escape from New-York, after a short Confinement on board a Prison ship. The Account he gives of those Kinds of Vessels is beyond any Description. I remember to have seen, last War, an Account of a Number of English Prisoners being shut up in a close Room at Calcutta,³ in the East Indies, where the greatest Part of them died in a few Hours: But no sooner did the Nabob hear of the Disaster than the remainder were relieved—notwithstanding the English were the Aggressors who were endeavouring to destroy him and his Subjects for the sake of their Woolens. Those suffered being the Offenders; we suffer being innocent. Those were accidentally thrust into this hot Hole without thought; we deliberately and wilfully. Those were but for a short Time—we left without Hope. The suffering of those soon reached the Ears of an Indian Nabob, who instantly relieved them: But our Cries and Groans, though they reach the Ears of those who call themselves Christians, are not relieved. But alas! the Example of Barbarians hath no Effect on our Enemies. Our unhappy Countrymen may be stifled in their own Filth, and die by Hundreds under the Hands of their cruel, merciless Keepers, and under the immediate Eye of British Officers; and, O unheard-of Barbarism! By their express Commands. After this young Gentleman was taken, he, with his Crew, eighteen in Number, were put into Irons and thrust into the Fore peak; on their Arrival at New-York they were carried on Board a Prison ship, and to the Hatch-ways, the opening of which, talk not of Pandora's Box, for that must be, compared to this, an Alabaster Box, in Comparison to the opening of these Hatches. True, there was Gratings but they kept their Boat on them. The Steam of the Hold was enough to scald the Skin and take away the Breath—the stench enough to poison the air all around—On his descending those dreary Mansions of Woe, and beholding numerous Spectacles of Wretchedness and Despair, his Soul fainted within him.—A little Epitome of Hell—About 350 Men confined between Decks, of which about one Half were Frenchmen; and he was informed that there were three more of these Vehicles of Contagion, which contained the like Number of miserable Frenchmen also, who are treated, if possible, worse than Americans. The heat so intense (the hot Sun shining all Day on Deck) that they were all naked, which also served them well to get rid of the Vermin, but the sick were eaten up alive—their sickly Countenances and ghastly Looks were truly horrible; some swearing and blaspheming; some crying, praying and wringing their Hands, and stalking about like Ghosts and Apparitions; others delirious and void of Reason, ranting and storming; some groaning and dying—all panting for Breath; some dead and corrupting. The Air was so foul at Times, that a Lamp could not be kept burning, by Reason of which three Boys were not missed until they had been dead ten Days. One Person only is admitted to Deck at a Time, after Sun-set, which necessarily occasions much Filth to run into the Hold and mingle with the Bilge-Water, which to his certain Knowledge had not been pumped out while he continued on Board, notwithstanding the Decks were leaky and the Prisoners begged for Permission to let in fresh Water and to pump it out again; but all in vain, their Hearts are callous and dead to their Cries, Prayers and Intreaties. Five or Six died every Day Mr. Sheffield was on Board. He was only six Days on Board, and three of his People died in that short time. He was sent for on Shore to attend as Evidence at the Court of Admiralty for Condemnation of his Vessel, and happily made his Escape from the horriblemst of deaths. He was informed in New-York that the fresh meat sent in to the Prisoners by the Commissary, was taken by the Men-of-War for their own Use. This he can say, that he did not see any on Board the ship he was in; but acknowledges that they were well supplied with soft Bread from our Commissary on Shore. But the Provision (be what it will) is not the Complaint—Fresh Air and fresh Water, God’s free Gifts, is all their cry.

2. Sheffield was prize master of a prize to Connecticut privateer sloop American Revenue, Capt. Samuel Champlin Jr.

3. On 20 June 1756, the East India Company Fort William in Calcutta had been captured by the Nawab of Bengal. Subsequently, many of the British prisoners were placed in an extraordinarily small cell. John Holwell, the senior East India Company employee captured, stated that 123 of the 146 prisoners confined smothered during the night. The infamy of the “Black Hole of Calcutta” spread in the press. India Tracts by Mr. Holwell, and Friends, 2nd. Ed. (London: T. Becket and P. A. de Hondt, 1764), pp. 251–76.

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO REAR ADMIRAL JAMES GAMBIER

(Copy)
Sir,

Eagle Off Sandy Hook [N.J.]
July the 10th. 1778.

As it may be necessary that I should put to Sea on the shortest Notice with a Part of the Squadron, And it is intended by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that You should remain with the Chief Command of His Majesty’s Ships employed on the North American Coasts, when I may be [obliged] to leave the Station: I have judged fit to transmit under Cover with this Letter, Counterparts of the Instructions relative to their Lordships Intentions for the Conduct of the Ships of War on this Station; Together with Copies of such as have been given by me, or which otherwise relate to the Plan of the several Arrangements subsisting prior to the Receipt of their Lordship’s Orders of the 21st: and 22^d: of March, by which the Services You will be to carry on in my Absence are to be principally regulated.¹ You are therefore to concert with Sir Henry Clinton, or the Commander in Chief of the Land Forces for the Time being, And to co-operate with and give all the Assistance in your Power to the Troops for facilitating the several Movements directed; By such seasonable Allotments to be hereafter made of the Ships and Armed Vessels left under your Orders, as may best correspond with the Intentions of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty in the said Instructions expressed; Or which may prove in the intermediate Time requested to be commenced.

The Arrangement for the Secret Expedition, the Object of which has only been communicated to the King's Commissioners, and Commodore Hotham, in such Parts as relate to his particular Concern therein;² And the Appointment of the Frigates to be sent to England, in the Number and of the Classes directed, must remain for subsequent Consideration when the Circumstances and purpose of the French Squadron have been better ascertained.

The Amazon, Tartar and Brune,³ are three of the Frigates I propose to be first sent to England, when it is necessary or may be convenient to take any conclusive Steps in that part of the General Arrangement. I have the Honor to be Sir, [&c.]

1. Enclosure not found. However, the orders referenced are almost certainly the Lords Commissioners of Admiralty's secret instructions to Howe and their additions to them. See Lords Commissioners to Howe, 21 Mar. 1778, and 22 Mar. 1778, NDAR 11: 1103–7 and 1111–12.

2. Commo. William Hotham had been appointed to command a squadron, which was ordered to escort a detachment of the British Army to capture French St. Lucia in the summer of 1778. These orders are in Lord Commissioners of the Admiralty to Vice Adm. Viscount Howe, 21 Mar. 1778, NDAR 11: 1103–7.

3. H.M. frigates Amazon, commanded by Capt. Maximilian Jacobs; Tartar, commanded by Capt. Cornthwaite Ommanney; and Brune, commanded by Capt. James Ferguson. By the middle of Oct. 1778, Tartar had returned to England and Brune lay off New York, having been judged "nigh Rotten and unserviceable and unmanned in Order to Man the Vice Admirals squadron." HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS, TO GENERAL
GEORGE WASHINGTON

Philadelphia

Sir,

10th. July 1778.

I had the honor of writing to Your Excellency by Major Putnam¹ the 8th Inst.²

Congress while sitting before Noon received intelligence of the following import.

M^r Blair McLenahan³ said he had seen a Capt. Selby or Selwin off Chincoteague who had fallen in with the French Fleet Eastward of Bermuda⁴—the Admiral had taken him on board & enjoined him to Pilot the fleet to this Coast, the fleet arrived near Chincoteague in the Evening of the 5th. Inst.—there they found the Ship Lydia of 26 Guns from New York on a Cruise—she was sunk by a french Frigate of 36 Guns⁵—On Monday Capt. Selby was sent on Shore in order to procure Pilots he engaged six to go on board the French fleet upon Wednesday—the Fleet consisted of the Admiral Count d’Estaing of 90 Guns—2 Ships of 80—8 of 74—1 of 64.—4 of 36. & said to have 12000 Men—they had taken a Ship of 18 Guns from Providence⁶ before they had made the Land.

War was to be declared against England by France & Spain on the 19th. May—they had originally intended for Delaware but hearing that the Enemy was gone to New York they required Pilots to conduct them to Sandy Hook, they had then six Months provision on board.

Your Excellency will perceive by the inclosed Printed Paper⁷ that a Fleet had been prepared at Portsmouth in order to intercept or annoy this Fleet of which ’tis possible the Count d’Estaing may be ignorant as he sailed from Toulon the 15th. of April ’tis possible also that a Check may have been put upon that by a Fleet from Brest, be that as it may, Count d’Estaing should be apprized of this important circumstance & also of the strength of the British Marine power in New York, which from the best accounts we have been able to collect is made up of the following Ships—

Boyne	70 Guns	Centurion	50.	Roebuck 44
Eagle	64.	Experiment	50.	Phœnix 44.
S^t. Alban	64.	Renoun	50.	& many Frigates
Ardent	64.	Chatham	50.
Sommerset	64.	Isis	50.
Trident	64.	Vigilant formerly	64.

I shall endeavor to reach Count d’Estaing with the necessary advices on the Coast of New Jersey or off the Capes of Delaware—Your Excellency will, if he shall have proceeded nearer Sandy Hook endeavor to meet him with a Letter where it may reach him, & you will also concert measures for improving the force under Your Excellency’s immediate Command & that under the direction of Major General Gates, in the present critical conjuncture.

Your Excellency will also if you have a more exact Account of the British Fleet at New York make proper corrections upon the list above enumerated. I have the honor to be [&c.]

SILAS DEANE TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir

Delaware Bay 10th. July 1778

I have now the pleasure of acquainting your Excellency of my Arrival here yesterday on board the Languedoc commanded by his Excellency Count D'Estaing, with a fleet of twelve Sail of the Line and four Frigates. We sailed from Toulon the 10th of April last, presume therefore that I have no intelligence from Europe so late as what you must be possessed of already. Finding that the Enemy had escaped the Admiral resolved instantly to pursue them to New York and will sail this morning for that Port, but he has no pilot; If therefore pilots can be sent to meet him on his arrival, it will be of the utmost service to the expedition. I shall embark this afternoon in company with his Excellency Mons^r Gerard for Philadelphia,¹ and hope soon to have the honor of paying my respects to your Excellency and the honorable Congress in person, and to congratulate you on the late glorious events. I have sent Comm^r Nicholson² express who can inform you of our situation; permit me to recommend him as an active, spirited Officer, to whom the Admiral has been much obliged by his service during our passage. I have the Honor to be &c.

(signed) Silas Deane

P.S. His Excellency the Admiral desires, that on the arrival of the pilots at the hook where they will find his Fleet, that they would make a Signal with a white Flag, either onboard their Boat, if they have one, or from the Shore, formed in a triangle. Mons^r Chouen³ who will wait on you with a Letter from the Admiral sets out suddenly and may want money to bear his expences on his further Journey, mons^r Gerard desires he may be supplied on his Account, with any sum to the Amount of twenty thousand Livres.

3. Mate Francis Rogers. Rogers was "about five feet five inches high, well set" with "black hair," "a dark complexion," and was "about twenty-nine years of age." He spoke "English and French very well" and had "formerly sailed out of Boston in an armed Brig, and being taken, was a prisoner at New York for some time, from whence he made his escape." When Rogers was tying Ross up, Ross "called aloud 'Are ye all against me?—Have I no Friend amongst?' To which one of the Frenchmen, with great Vivacity, replied, 'No, Monsieur Capitaine, all Tory, all Tory by G-d!'" 4. The other crew members were Joshua (or James) Berry, an Irishman; Andrew Averty and Andrew Gladermerid, both Frenchmen, one born in Nantes, the other in Provence; Robert Freeman, an Englishman; and Joshua Hozier (or Hoser), born on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, who stood five feet three inches and had curled hair. "Five Hundred Pounds Reward" and The Maryland Journal, and Baltimore Advertiser, 14 July 1778.

5. That is, clothes.

6. An article in The Maryland Journal, and Baltimore Advertiser of 14 July reported that Ross and the boy set adrift with him were "destitute of both Clothes and Provisions."

ADVERTISEMENT OF A DESERTER FROM VIRGINIA NAVY GALLEY SAFEGUARD

DESERTED from the Safeguard galley,¹ Tichelnick Vestial, a native of Minorca, talks English pretty well, and is about five feet one or two inches high. It is supposed he is gone to South Quay, therefore all masters of vessels are forewarned from carrying him away, or employing him. Whoever secures him, so that I get him again, shall have thirty dollars reward.

PURDIE'S VIRGINIA GAZETTE (WILLIAMSBURG), 10 JULY 1778

WILLIAMSBURG, JULY 10.

WE hear from the Eastern Shore, that on the 29 ult. two privateers, of ten and twelve guns, took a brig at the mouth of Sinepuxent loaded with tobacco, belonging to Blair M'Clanaghan, merchant in Philadelphia. That on the day following one of the privateers came to Matompkin inlet, and took from a small island eight or ten white men and four negroes, who were endeavouring to get off a brig. They carried off a white man and all the negroes, permitting the rest to go ashore, on their promise to send them a small present of fresh provisions. That they then sent them their barge into Metompkin river, and took possession of two vessels loaded with tobacco, one of which they carried off. The other was pursued by Capt. Watson¹ and about 25 of the Accomack militia, with a few sailors, in row-boats, who about 12 o'clock at night came up with her; upon which a smart engagement ensued, for near half an hour, when the enemy, finding themselves overmatched, made their escape in their barge, leaving one swivel behind. Capt. Watson then brought the vessel save back into harbour. The men who were released say, that the privateers belong to the infamous Goodriches.²

1. Probably Johannes Watson, Captain, Virginia Navy, commanding the Diligence galley, who would be appointed captain of the Accomack militia in 1780; or possibly Zerrobabel Watson, appointed lieutenant of militia for Accomack County in 1777.

JOURNAL OF CAPTAIN HENRY DUNCAN, R.N.

[New York, N.Y.]

11th July.—At 2 o’clock p.m., the French fleet, consisting of twelve two-decked ships and three frigates, anchored at the back of the Hook.¹ At this time we had only the Preston, Somerset, Nonsuch, St. Albans, Phaenix, Roebuck. The Eagle, Trident, Ardent, Isis, and Richmond were anchored a little below the Narrows. At five, the Eagle and the ships with her joined those at Sandy Hook; the whole force then collected consisted of six 64-gun ships, two fifties, and the Experiment,² two forty-fours, and two or three frigates. These were drawn up in order at the Hook to receive the French fleet. Our ships in general were but very indifferently manned, owing to sickness and their being short of complement.

"Journals of Henry Duncan," 159–60.

1. By "back of the Hook," Duncan means the southern end of Sandy Hook, New Jersey.

2. H.M.S. Experiment was a 50-gun ship; it is not known why Duncan differentiated it from H.M. frigate Isis and H.M.S. Preston, the other 50-guns ships.

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

Number 68.
Sir,

Eagle At Sandy Hook [N.J.]
July the 11th. 1778.

The Day after the Date of my Letter N^o. 67¹ sent by this Conveyance, I received Advice, forwarded from the Cruizers stationed to the Southward, that the Toulon Squadron arrived on the Coast of Virginia the 5th. Instant: Appearing by it's Motions then and upon the 6th;² to be designed for Chesapeake Bay. The French Ships were however attended by the maidstone,² on their Course to the Northward; And in the Morning of the 8th; they anchored at the Entrance of the Delaware.

The³ further Instructions herewith enclosed were dispatched for Vice Admiral Byron to Halifax,⁴ upon the first Knowledge that the French Squadron was advanced to the Delaware. And I shall soon have the Ships here in Readiness to take Advantage of any Opportunity favorable for the purpose of the Vice Admiral's Appointment; But I have not yet heard of his Arrival on the American Coast.

Receiving Notice this Morning that the French Squadron was advancing towards this Port, I deferred closing my Letter, to advise the Lords Commissioners that the Squadron, consisting of fifteen Sail, anchored this Evening without the Hook; Seeming to meditate an Attack on this Port. I have the Satisfaction to think, if prosecuted, that it will not prove to the Discredit of His Majesty's Arms.

The Grantham Packet attempts putting to Sea with this Dispatch through the Sound, by Rhode-Island, whilst the Attention of the Enemy may be engaged off of this Port. I am, with great Consideration, Sir, [&c.]

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO GENERAL SIR HENRY CLINTON

Eagle [at Sandy Hook, N.J.] Sat^r Night
July the 11th. [1778]

D^r. Sir.

Your goodness I am assured will pardon my neglect to write by Cap^t Sutherland.¹ The Com^r of the Packet² waits upon you with this, to receive your Dispatches, with Coll. Patterson.³ But the Fore-Door being for the present shut, the only way the Packet can get off will be through the Sound,⁴ as I have recommended.

If your information is good that Washington is crossing the North-River,⁵ attention I conceive will be necessary to send such ~~provisions~~ as as may be wanting for Rhode Island, before the Enemy get possession of the Chester Shores,⁶ and with Artillery bar the passage for Ships in the Daytime. These people⁷ seem to affect an attempt to enter the Port. The time they may be engaged in that consideration will I hope, secure the Arrival of the Reinforcement at Rhode Island; And if they really shall prosecute such an attack here, I think it a most fortunate circumstance, in our State. We should succeed at no time, if we can fail on such an occasion. I am ever D^r Sir [&c.]

JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Philadelphia] Saturday, July 11, 1778

A letter, of 7, from Robert Martin, lieutenant in the continental navy, at Snow Hill, was read, informing "that being there on furlough till called to duty, and hearing of a French fleet on the coast, he has presumed to go on board the said fleet without orders, apprehending he may be serviceable there."¹

A letter, of 10 July, from S. Deane, Esqr. Delaware Bay, was read, informing Congress of his arrival on board the Languedoc, commanded by his excellency the Count d'Estaing, with a fleet of 12 sail of the line, and four frigates, that sailed from Toulon 10 April:²

Ordered, That it be referred to a committee of three, and that they be directed to take the speediest measures for furnishing the Count d'Estaing with a sufficient number of skilful pilots:

The members chosen, Mr.[William] Duer, Mr. J[onathan] B[ayard] Smith, and Mr. [Elias] Boudinot.³

A letter, of the 8, from Count d'Estaing, commander of the French fleet, was read;⁴ Whereupon,

Resolved, That General Washington be informed by Mr. President, that it is the desire of Congress that he co-operate with his excellency Count d'Estaing, commander of a French squadron now on the coast of North America, and proceeding to New York, in the execution of such offensive operations against the enemy as they shall mutually approve.

His most Christian Majesty the King of France, having thought proper to send on the coasts a powerful fleet, in order to co-operate with the forces of these states, in the reduction of the British army and navy:

Resolved, That General Washington be empowered to call on the states of New Hampshire, Massachusetts bay, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, or such of them as he shall judge proper, for such aids of their militia as he shall think requisite for carrying on his operations in concert with Count d'Estaing, commander of the French fleet; and that it be earnestly recommended to the states above mentioned, to exert themselves in forwarding the force which may be required from them with the utmost despatch.⁵

Resolved, That the Marine Committee be directed to order the commissioners of the navy to the eastward, to fit out as many continental frigates and armed vessels as possible, with the utmost despatch, to join the French squadron in their operations against the enemy.⁶

HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS, TO GENERAL
GEORGE WASHINGTON

Sir,

Philadelphia 11th. July 1778.

I beg leave to refer Your Excellency to the contents of a letter which I had the honor of writing to you last Evening by Barry.¹

The present Cover will convey to Your Excellency two Acts of Congress of this date.

1. Empowering Your Excellency to call in the Aid of such Militia as shall appear to be necessary from the four Eastern States, from New York & New Jersey for carrying on operations in concert with Count d'Estaing.

2. Intimating the desire of Congress that Your Excellency Co-operate with Vice Admiral Count d'Estaing in the Execution of such offensive operations as against the Enemy as shall appear to be necessary.²

Congress have directed me to propose for Your Excellencys consideration an attack by Vice Admiral Count d'Estaing upon the British Ships of War & Transports in the harbor of Rhode Island, by which possession of a safe Port may be gained & the retreat of British forces on that Island be cut off, as an alternative to a hazardous or ineligible attempt upon the British Squadron within Sandy Hook. I have the honor to be [&c.]

Henry Laurens,

President of Congress

Sometime ago I informed Your Excellency that Congress had adopted the Stile of "North America" to these States—this day that Resolution was reconsidered & reduced to the former mode of "America."³

Congress Resolved on the 9th. Inst that the Committee appointed to arrange the Army do repair without delay to Head Quarters for that purpose as Your Excellency will perceive by the Inclosed Certified Order.⁴

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO THE CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT

Navy Board of the Eastern Department Philad^a July 11th 1778
Gentlemen

Your Several Letters lately received have not been considered because of the obstructions created by a removal of Congress from York Town to this place where as yet the committee have not been able to get themselves properly fixed for business.— The sense entertained of the increasing importance of your Department will secure a close attention to it from this Committee and every care shall be taken to furnish you with the money requisite for the proper Accomplishment of the ends proposed by your appointment. The immediate design of this Letter is to inform you of the arrival on the Coast near the Capes of Delaware of a french squadron consisting of 12 ships of the Line and four frigates under the command of the Count D Estaing Vice Admiral of France who is proceeding immediately to New York there to act in conjunction with the Army of the United States for destroying the fleet & army of the common enemy in that Harbour. Congress being determine to give every possible aid to the execution of so Salutary a purpose has directed us to order all the Continental frigates and armed Vessels within your Department to be immediately made ready for Sea and dispatched one after An Other as soon as each can be prepared, to join the Squadron of france and to act in such manner as the Count DEstaing shall judge most proper for distressing and destroying the enemys force upon the Coast of North America. Congress trust to the bravery and good disposition of the American Seamen that they will on the great occasion step forth with alacrity and exert themselves in Supporting our freinds who have come so far to assist us to vanquish an enemy too long triumphant upon the Sea. The expence attending this business no doubt will be considerable, altho we are well assured your CEconomical wisdom will lead you to abridge it as far as may be possible. We shall without delay forward you as large A Sum of Money as can now be spared, and in the mean time desire you will on the credit of the States push the business forward with all possible vigor.

We are to observe to you that the french fleet is more than fully manned, so that some small aid in way of seamen may be expected, and we mention this that you may not wait for the most compleat manning of every Vessel altho we wish you to procure as many Seamen as you can consistant with the great object we have in view viz a speedy junction of our force with that of france. We are Gentlemen [&c.]

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOR PATRICK HENRY OF VIRGINIA

His Excellency Governor Henry of Virginia

Sir

Philad^a July 11th 1778

A french Fleet of 12 Sail of the Line and 4 frigates being on the Coast near the Capes of Delaware under command of Count D'Estaing vice Admiral of France which is proceeding to Newyork in order to co-operate with the American Army in destroying the Sea and Land force of our enemy in that Harbor and it being understood here that some of the French Ships now in Virginia were desirous of joining the Admiral when he came here;¹ the Marine Committee request of you Sir, that you will be pleased to give immediate Notice to Such french Vessels that they may if they choose proceed to assist in the accomplishment of the great work meditated against the common enemy. As this is an affair that requires dispatch so the Committee hope your Excellency will loose no time in giving the necessary information I have the Honor to be [&c.]

From Friday 10 to Saturday 11

Light wind from the SW, steered to the NNE. At 5 o'clock in the evening saw a vessel ahead and a boat to the east. Made signal to the squadron to chase. With all sail set, at sunset seeing ourselves unable to catch the ship, although we had gotten close, we carried to the East to cut off the boat, which headed to the NE. At 9 o'clock in the evening, being very near, we fired a loaded canon at it, he lowered his sails, we sent over a prize crew, it was named the York, armed with twelve guns and 60 men, commanded by a lieutenant.¹ He had orders to observe our squadron. During the time we had used in catching this boat, the squadron had kept sailing and, no longer seeing the squadron, which had continued sailing, and being out of sight we fired canons from time to time throughout the night. At daybreak the squadron lay to the ENE of us, at from 3 to 4 leagues distance. We rejoined and resumed our passage. At noon, the route was to the NNE, 24.

PROCEEDINGS OF A COUNCIL OF WAR OF FIELD GRADE CONTINENTAL OFFICERS SERVING IN THE EXPEDITION INTO EAST FLORIDA

At a Council of War held in Camp at Fort Tonym¹ this 11th. May 1778.

His Excellency Major General Howe open'd the Business upon which the Council was summon'd, by laying before them the following informations: that the motions of the Enemy from East Florida, the posts they occupied & were endeavour^s to Occupy—the stations their Men of War & Armd Vessels took possession of—the number of Insurgents in S^o. Carolina & Georgia rising in Arms & forming a Junction with the Enemy—the information given by Deserters & creditable Prisoners escap'd from Augustine, & also of Spies sent there to make Discoveries upon Oath, all uniting to prove that an immediate Invasion was intended against Georgia; in all appearance too formidable to be repel'd by their Force alone,—induced the calling to the Assistance of Georgia, a part of the Continental Troops of S^o. Carolina; & that State with a Conduct conformable to it's usual Generosity of Spirit, had sent with the utmost Readiness, even more than of Right could be demanded of them—these, in Concert with the Continentals of Georgia having Chas'd the Enemy out of the Country, & having oblig'd them to Evacuate Fort Tonym, from whence they had continually made inroads into Georgia; dangerous to the persons & property of it's Inhabitants—have, in the Generals Opinion answer'd every purpose for which they were call'd, but willing to have with him, the Opinion of his Field Officers upon every Occasion where they ought to be Consulted, & ready to Relinquish his own should they offer any Reasons which can Authorize his doing so: he Wishes to propose to them Several Questions, but previously to this, he thinks it necessary to give them the following additional informations.—that tho' driving the Enemy out of Georgia, & dislodging them from Fort Tonym, were the principle things he aim'd at—Yet had the Enemy, in defence of that Post or any other thought proper to oppose him with Regulars & he had been happy enough to have Defeated them in Detail—he should have been ready to have avail'd himself of every Advantage which might have Resulted from it.—

That, by information rec^d from Cap^{ts}. More, Hyrne, and Taylor,³ the Roads naturally bad have been render'd much Worse by the Enemy's having broken them up, destroy'd the Bridges, & by other methods, so that neither Artillery nor Ammunition Waggons can pass without great Loss of time & Labour; & that from appearances they conceive, & from other Informations the General learns that the Enemy have abandon'd all thoughts of Opposition on this Side of S^t. Johns River. That the D'Q'M'G⁴ has reported that the long march and hard service had destroy'd many Horses, & renders so many others unfit for Use, that there is a deficiency of at least 40, even for the absolute necessities of Service.—

That the Physician Gen^l.⁵ & all the Surgeons of the Army Report that at least one half the Number of Men we set out with are already sick[,] many of them Dangerously so, & that by the increasing Inclemency of the Climate[,] the greatest part of the Army now will, either by Continuing here or Advancing most probably be Destroy'd—that by information from the Commodore,⁶ the Gallies can't get into S^t. Johns River, without great time & Labour spent to cut a passage thro' Amelia Narrows: & if even that pasage was Effectuated, the Accounts he had receiv'd, all concurr'd to make it probable that the Enemy were ready to oppose his Operations when in that River; with a Force Superior to his.—The Gen^l therefore thinks proper to propose the following Questions.—

Qⁿ. 1st. That as driving the Enemy out of Georgia, & demolishing Fort Tonyn, were the Objects principally aim'd at: have not these purposes been effected.—

Resolv'd unanimously in the affirm^{ve}.

Qⁿ. 2^d. As it appears from information above recited that the Enemy do not mean to oppose us in Force on this Side of S^t Johns, is there any other object important enough, in our present Situation, to Warrant our proceeding?

Resolv'd unanimously in the Negative.

Qⁿ. 3rd. Is the Army in a Situation to cross S^t Johns, attack the Enemy, & Secure a Retreat in Case of Accident, though they should be Aided by the militia now embodied, under Gov^r. Houston & Col. Williamson?⁷—

“Resolv'd unanimously in the negative.”

Qⁿ. 4th.— Does not the Sickness which so fatally prevails in the Army render a Retreat immediately necessary.—

Resolv'd unanimously in the affirm^{ve}.

The Gen^l then proceeded to inform the Council that the Governor had denied the Gen^l right to Command the Militia, even if a Junction had been form'd between them & the Continental Troops—Notwithstanding the Resolution of Congress declaring that “as to the Propriety of undertaking distant Expeditions & enterprises, or other Military Operations, & the Mode of Conducting them—the Gen^l or Commanding Officer must finally judge & Determine at his Peril.”⁸ The Gen^l therefore thinks proper to Propose the following Questions.—

1st. Can he, with Propriety, Honor & Safety to himself, or, Consistently with service—relinquish the Command to the Governor—

“Resolv'd unanimously in the Negative.”

2nd. Can the Army, while the Command is divided, Act with Security, Vigour,—Decision or Benefit to the Common Cause.—

“Resolv'd unanimously in the Negative.—

D, DLC, Robert Howe Orderly Book (microfilm). The date is given in the orderly book as “11 May 1778,” but interlined in another hand after “Fort Tonyn” is “On The ST. Mary's July 11.” This later date is correct, as the Continental forces did not take control of Fort Tonyn until after May.

1. Fort Tonyn was located twenty-five miles upstream from the mouth of the St. Marys River near the King's Road Ferry.

2. Maj. Gen. Robert Howe; Col. Samuel Elbert; Col. John White; Col. Charles Cotesworth Pinckney; Col. Nicholas Eveleigh; Col. Peter Taarling; Col. John Stirk; Col. Robert Rae; Lt. Col. Claude Noël François Romand de L'Isle; Maj. Thomas Pinckney; Maj. Joseph Lane; and Maj. Philip Lowe.

3. Capt. Francis Moore of the Second Georgia Continental Regiment; Capt. Edmund Hyrne of the Second South Carolina Continental Regiment; and possibly Capt. James Taylor of the First Georgia Continental Regiment.

4. Col. Francis Huger was deputy quartermaster general of the Southern Department; Col. Peter Taarling was quartermaster general of Georgia. Both were serving in this expedition.

5. Probably, Dr. Peter Fayssoux.

6. Commodo. Oliver Bowen of the Georgia Navy.

7. Georgia Gov. John Houstoun and Col. Andrew Williamson of the South Carolina militia. Their combined militia force numbered some 1,400 men.

8. The full text of the congressional resolution, of 29 May 1778, adopted in response to letters from Gov. Houstoun and Maj. Gen. Howe, reads: "Resolved, That all military officers and soldiers in the service of the United States are, and of right ought to be, amenable to the laws of the State in which they reside in common with other citizens; but as to the propriety of undertaking distant expeditions or enterprizes, or other military operations, and the mode of conducting them, the general or commanding officer must finally judge and determine at his peril." JCC 11: 553–54.

CAPTAIN PETER RAINIER, R.N., TO REAR ADMIRAL SIR PETER PARKER

Sir

I beg leave to inform you that on Wednesday the 8th Ins^t His Majesty's Arm'd brigg *Lowestoffe's prize*¹ being in sight, tho' far astern, streching in with the Land off Savannah point² I saw an arm'd brig who proved to be a french Privateer³ of 16 Carriage Guns 6 & 9 pounders 23 Swivels & 8 Cohorns in the Tops, as we have not been able to find her Rôle d'Equipege's, the accounts of her Complement are as irregular as from 110 to 170 Men, her killed & wounded are consequently as uncertain⁴ but the Midshipman that went from this to take charge of her threw 23 overboard & several were seen to be thrown overboard in the course of the Action which began about 3 & ended at 6, M^r OBryen⁵ and myself were wounded nearly the same time, & the Master killed, my loss of blood & excessive pain disabled me from any further Services but I did not suffer myself to be carried any lower than the Cabin, the Action continued with great Spirit, on an explosion of some Cartridges upon Deck I heard the Cry of haul down the Colours, I beckoned to the people that were at their Quarters near me to run upon Deck & let them know 'twas my orders if the Colours had been struck purposely to hoist them again, or if that was impracticable to spread them on the Quarter which was immediately complied with⁶ about ½ an hour before she struck the Lowestoffe's prize come up & began to engage which no doubt hasten^d. the Stripes down, as it infused fresh Spirits into our people & depress'd those of the Enemy; as it was but a light breeze it prevented the brig from coming up before.— We had 4 killed on the Spot 28 Wounded 2 of which are since dead & we have now 65 Men & boys out of the List.— I am going a Shore as also M^r. OBryen for the more speedy recovery of our health by the Surgeon's advice, my wound is a Musket ball thro'⁷ & thro' the left Breast fortunately has not touch'd any bone, but it continues still to deprave me of use; M^r. OBryan's is in the throat I had given him orders to board but on account of the narrowness of the fore-castle fore & Aft wise we could not mount Men sufficient to support them, here we suffer'd most & what was still more unfortunate the prime of our Men—Her Name is the [Polly] under an American Commission, but I find the property has been changed to french so that I suppose them to be no better than Pyrates, the Commander of her was killed & I have but a very confused account of the Number & Nation of her Officers. She is from Port a Prince for Boston with a Quantity of Molasses on board, the Supercargo Paul de Verge is now before me & gives a strange account of his total ignorance of the Captain's Commission.⁸— I am afraid it will be a fortnight or three weeks before either M^r. OBryen or myself shall be fit to get on board again⁹ and our Masts & [sails?] are too much damaged to go a Cruize with.— I intend to send the Prize round to Port Royal under the Care of the Lowestoffe's prize as soon as she can be got ready which I hope will meet with your approbation,¹⁰ & have landed the People that are badly wounded. I am Sir [&c.]

Ostrich Montego bay

1. H.M. armed brig Lowestoffe's Prize, Lt. Robert Hibbs, commanding. According to testimony in a later court-martial, Lowestoffe's Prize was “four Leagues” from H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Ostrich when the engagement began. UKLPR, Adm. 1/1530, fol. 100.

2. Parker's prize list gives the location of this engagement as “Off Port Antonio,” Jamaica. UKLPR, 1/241, fol. 230.

3. As seen below, there was confusion as to the nationality of the privateer Polly. In court-martial proceedings held in September 1778, it was consistently called a “Rebel,” meaning American, privateer. UKLPR, Adm. 1/1530, fols. 98, 101, 104, 107, and 111.

4. The surgeon of Polly was asked in court-martial proceedings how many of the crew of the privateer were killed and wounded during the action. He replied that he could not give the exact number “but when we struck the Colours we had no more than thirty Men able with good will to do the Duty of the Ship.” He also testified that the privateer's captain was the “last Man killed” in the engagement. Ibid., fol. 126.

5. Lt. Edward O'Bryen. According to his later testimony, he was wounded while trying to board the privateer when “a Pike passed thro' my Throat.” Ibid., fol. 100. For an account of this engagement by O'Bryen, see “Extract of a Letter from Montego Bay Jamaica,” at 29 July, below.

6. This incident became the focal point of a controversy that resulted in a later court-martial. Lt. Robert Hibbs, commander of Lowestoffe's Prize, contended that Ostrich had “struck her Colours” and ceased fighting and that it was only the arrival of Lowestoffe's Prize that caused the crew of Ostrich to re-engage the enemy. He further contended that Lowestoffe's Prize caused the privateer to give up the fight and as a result “that the Rebel Privateer the Polly is not only a Prize to the Lowestoffes Prize but that the Ostrich herself is a retaken Ship.” Hibbs to Parker, 23 Aug. 1778, UKLPR, 1/1530, fols. 131–33. A court-martial convened to hear the matter decided that Hibbs' claim was specious and relieved him from command.

7. Rainier was wounded in the leg as well as the breast. He must have unintentionally omitted the words “the leg” from this sentence. Ibid., fol. 100.

8. In an account of this action dated 11 July and published in Rivington's Royal Gazette (New York), of 23 Sept. 1778, Rainier writes, “The expedition this privateer was intended for, was to cut out of the different harbours as many vessels as they could man, and to take all the Negroes they could lay hold of, for which purpose they were furnished with a number of small boats.”

9. Neither Rainier nor O'Bryen was able to return to duty and both were sent home to England to recover their health. Appointments made by Rear Adm. Sir Peter Parker, 24 Oct. 1778, UKLPR, Adm. 1/241, fol. 187.

10. Parker later purchased Polly and commissioned it as a sloop in the Royal Navy. Parker to Philip Stephens, 23 Sep. 1778, UKLPR, Adm. 1/241.

Docketed: “12 July 1778/from L^t Lloyd/E/In Adm^l Montagu's/Letter 27 July 1779 [1778].” Notation: “E^d,” meaning “Enclosed.” The letter was enclosed in Vice Admiral John Montagu to Philip Stephens, Secretary of the Admiralty, 27 July 1778. The addressee is determined by Lloyd's previous letter of 21 June to Warren, the senior naval officer present at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

1. Saint-Pierre I., St-Pierre and Miquelon Is., French North America.

2. See Lords Commissioners, Admiralty, to Vice Admiral John Montagu, 23 March 1776, in NDAR 4: 991–92, containing instructions for Montagu's Newfoundland Squadron. Number 11 of the instructions enjoins Montagu to prevent trade between St-Pierre and Miquelon Is. and the British dominions in North America, as well as to prevent the American rebels from obtaining supplies via French fishing vessels, concluding with the injunction, “avoiding at the same time the taking any step that may be injurious to the Subjects of the French King or have a tendency to disturb that Harmony which now so happily subsists between the two nations.”

3. By the sixth article of the Treaty of Paris ending the French and Indian War, Great Britain ceded the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon to France, “to serve as a shelter to the French fishermen; and his said Most Christian Majesty engages not to fortify the said islands; to erect no buildings upon them but merely for the conveniency of the fishery; and to keep upon them a guard of fifty men only for the police.” “The definitive Treaty of Peace and Friendship between his Britannick Majesty, the Most Christian King, and the King of Spain. Concluded at Paris the 10th day of February, 1763. WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

My Dear Sir/

Potsmouth [N.H.] 12th July 1778

Your much Esteemd favor of the 20th Ulti^o.¹ is now before me, . . .

As I am happy in agreeing with you in opinion in general I should be exceeding Glad if there was a coincidence in our sentiments respecting Privateering. I agree with you that the privateers have much distressed the trade of our Enemies, but had there been no privateers, is it not probable there wo^d have been a much larger number of Public ships, then has been fitted out?² which might have distressed the Enemy nearly as much & furnished these states with necessaries on much better terms then they have been supplied by Privateers,— however I will not contend with you about the advantages or disadvantages that have been the consequence of that business, all I wish to convince you of is, that it is now attended with the most pernicious Consequences, which there wo^d be no need of my undertaking, if you were only to pass three months in this, or any other town where the spirit for Privateering rages with such violence as it does here,— no kind of Business can so effectually introduce Luxury, Extravagance, & every kind of Dissipation, that tend to the destruction of the Morals of people, those who are actually engaged in it soon loose every Idea of right, & wrong, & for want of an opportunity of gratifying their insatiable avarice with the property of the Enemies of their Country will without the least compunction seize that of her Friends, thus far I am sure you wo^d agree with me had you the opportunity before mentio^d of making your observations but perhaps you may say, these are evils attendant on this business, to society in General. I will allow that to be the case, but then it must be allowed they will operate with more violence in this Country in its present unsettled state then in a Country where all the Powers of Government can be vigorously exercised.— but besides these there are many other mischiefs that attend this business peculiar to these states in our present circumstances.— Some of the towns in this state have been obliged to give 400 Doll^s: Bounty (⌘ Man) to men to serve 3 or 4 months at Road Island² exclusive of whats allowed by the state[.] this is wholly owing to privateering.— The Farmers cannot hire a laborer for less than 30 or 40 Dol^s: P^r month and in the Neighbourhood of this town 3 or 4 Dol^s: ⌘ day & very difficult to be had at that, this naturally rises the price of Provision Indian Corn is not to be purcused under 6 Doll^s: p^r Bushel.— there is at this time 5 Privateers fitting out here which I suppose will take 400 men these must be by far the Greater part Country men, for the seamen are chiefly gone & most of them in Hallifax Goal.—³ besides all this You may depend, no public ship will ever be maned while there is a privateer fitting out,— the reason is plain,— those people who have the most influence with seamen think it their interest to discourage the Public service because by that, they promote their own interst, viz. Privateering, in order to do this effectually, every Officer in the public service (I mean in the navy) is treated with general contempt a man of any feeling cannot bear this, he therefore to avoid those indigneties quits the service & is immediately Courted to go a Privateering & highly caressed, by this means all the Officers that are worth imploying will quit the service, and You'll have the navy (if you think it worth while to keep up that show) Officered by Tinkers, Shoemakers & Horse-Jockeys,— and no Gent^m: worth employing will except a Commission—this you may depend will soon be the case unless Privateering is discouraged and the Business of the Marine in this department more attended too & conducted with more regularity, in short it would be much better to set fire to the ships now in port then pretend to fit them for sea, for as matters now are (if I am rightly informed & my author[i]ty is very good;) the public are at an amaizing Expence to procure men for privateers, for if they (the public Ships) get two men, one day, they are sure to loose four, the next, who take care to carry off with them the advanced pay &c—I think I have given you a long Chapter on Privateering, much longer then I intended when I began; I have said the more on the subject as it is the last time I shall trouble you with my sentiments of that business.— and as I have got to the end of the sheet shall conclude this long scrawl with my best wishes for Your Health & Happiness & with the fullest assurance that I am Your very affec^{te}: Friend &c

JOURNAL OF MAJOR JOHN ANDRÉ, BRITISH ARMY

[New York City]

12th [July] The 44th and 15th Regiments were added to these, and Colonel O'Hara¹ took the command and marched from Bedford to be embarked for Sandy Hook. They were here employed in throwing up a battery of two 8-inch howitzers and three 32-pounders. Eight Companies from the Light Infantry and Grenadiers were distributed on board the ships of war. The Companies were chosen by lot and the whole drew at their own request. The ardor to serve and the confidence in Lord Howe were as conspicuous in the seamen of the transports, who almost to a man were Volunteers to go on board the King's Ships. Those at the Hook at this time were:

The Eagle 64	Preston 50	Amazon 32
Somerset 64	Experiment 50	Pearl 32
St. Albans 64	Isis 50	Richmond 32
Nonsuch 64	Roebuck 44	Brune 32
Trident 64	Phoenix 44	Venus 36
	Apollo 32	Delaware 26 with three sloops, three fire-ships, two bombs and three galleys. The flank Companies came ashore again and the 23rd Regiment (Welsh Fusilers) took that duty.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO HENRY LAURENS,
PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Sir Camp at Pyramus [Paramus, N.J.] July 12th 1778

. . . We have had it reported for two or three days, through several channels from New-York, that there is a french fleet on the Coast; and it is added, that the Enemy have been manning with the utmost dispatch several of their Ships of war which were there, and have pushed them out to sea. How far these facts are true, I cannot determine but I should think it of infinite importance to ascertain the first if possible, by sending out swift sailing Cruizers. The most interesting advantages might follow the information. I will try by every practicable means, that I can devise, to obtain an accurate account of the Enemy's fleet at New York. At 6 o'clock in the morning we had the winds at the land to the N, rather weak, the sky very serene. The boats of the General that had just sounded, took the road making for a snow that came from London, laden on the account of the king with munitions of war of all kinds, confided to a company of bombadiers who were on board this ship.¹ The boat of the *Protecteur*² also stopped a boat.

At eight o'clock in the evening I got under sail by order of the general to come anchor in queue with the Alcmène,³ which dropped anchor where it could raise it again, the squadron to the S. At 9:30 o'clock we anchored in 18 fathoms, bottom of sand mixed with shells, 3 cable-lengths abaft the Alcmène; the *Aimable*⁴ observed the same distance in my regard in range of the enemy canon, which made no movement.

[July 1778, Languedoc, at sea]

From Saturday 11 to Sunday 12

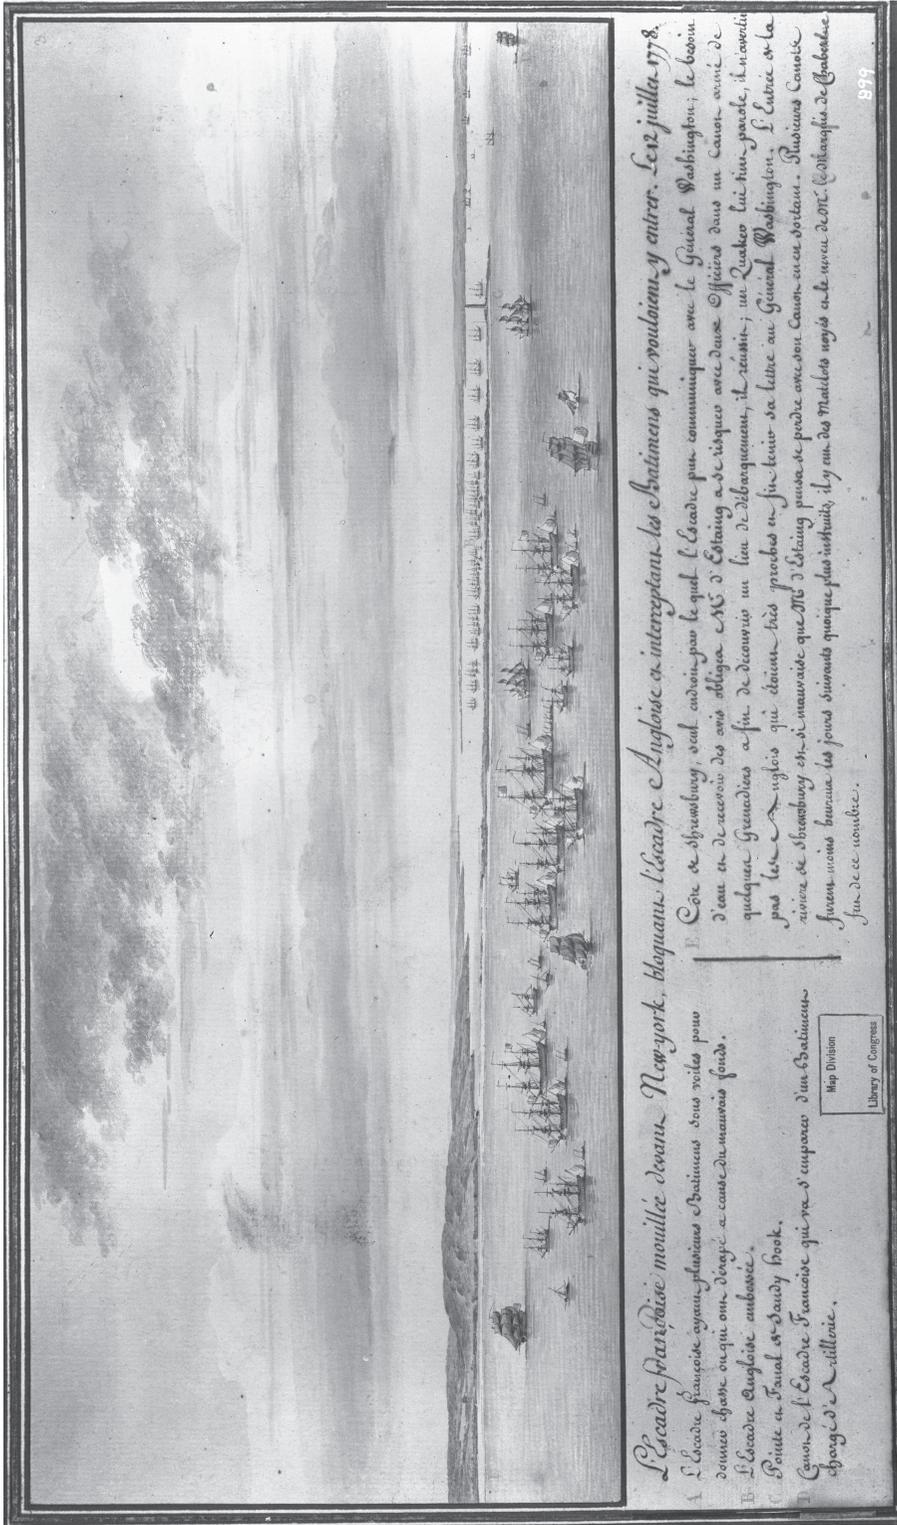

The wind in the SW, a little brisk, steered to the NNE in order to reach the land, making for New York. At 1 o'clock saw the tower of the entrance, located south of the pass; saw also several small ships under sail that headed for the entrance at Sandy Hook. At 3:30 o'clock we anchored at the entrance of the pass in 9 fathoms, bottom of small gravel, at the distance of a league and a half from the lighthouse, the land the farthest south at SSW 5° south, the land the farthest east at NE 5° N, the lighthouse to the NW. Saw many warships and transports within the point of the lighthouse. There is a kind of bar or strong projection along this coast and seeing a river that lay to SW½S of us, the General himself went down in the morning into this river with two boats fit out to reconnoiter the country, which appeared to us well peopled, as we lacked fresh victuals of every kind, and even water, having passed three months at sea. He returned on board the Provence,¹ he had failed to mount very high up the river to water there and even our ship's boat was too large. But each habitation there had a well joined to a small flowing brook. The next morning the General sent me with a detachment to employ the means of watering there by wells, to accomplish this daily we had a detachment of 250 men, 4 cannons, and some swivel guns mounted on carriages, the inhabitants being American but in the number several to be found who are Royalists, we feared that some English detachments might come to attack us. I returned on board the next day in the night. There had been winds from the NW, rather strong, that drove from its post a snow laden with powder and bombs, at daybreak being outside the pass and seeing no guns aboard her, the General manned two boats which seized it and brought it to the squadron. In the morning we also stopped six fishing boats that were bringing fish to the English squadron. Every day we had frigates under sail, the General expected pilots that the Congress had announced in order to enter and fight the English squadron that was within,² they having assured him in Europe that there was enough water there for his squadron to enter there. The pilot having arrived, that there was not enough water for the large ships of the line and even for those of 74 guns, that in consequence, he would not take charge of the squadron. Each day gave us a few prizes of merchantmen that came to go in. The impossibility of obtaining the daily supply of water and of having sufficient refreshment.

The entrance to the Shrewsbury River was so bad that M. d'Estaing thought he would lose his own boat in going out from it. Several boats were less happy on the days following although better informed; some seamen drowned and the nephew of M. the Marquis de Chabert was of this number.*

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

Sir

Philadelphia July 16th [12] 1778¹

The marine Committee of Congress have received information that the Squadron under your Excellencies command has occasion for a supply of water and fresh provisions, and they have taken proper measures to furnish both with all possible expedition. The frigate Chimere,² and the two Vessels with her, will be dispatched immediately with as much water as we can find Casks for; the enemy lately here having destroyed every thing of this kind that they could discover. The same vessels will bring your Excellency some hundred barrels of bread and flour, with a small supply of fresh provisions. A Commissary has orders quickly to collect near Shrewsbury and the Hook 50 Bullocks, 700 Sheep, with a quantity of vegetables and a number of poultry; and he will wait on your Excellency to know your pleasure concerning the particular place on the water where he must bring them to be shipped.³

The same Commissary has general orders to furnish your Excellency which such further supplies as you may please to direct.

The accidents of wind and weather may possibly prevent the Chimere from arriving with water so soon as it shall be wanted, and therefore I am to inform your Excellency that in little Egg harbor or Thoms river, neither of them far from the Hook, fresh water be conveniently obtained. The Pilots on board the Fleet will conduct Vessels sent for the purpose to either of these places.

Your Excellency may be assured that Congress is disposed to supply your Excellency, and the Squadron under your command with every thing in their power that may conduce to the accomplishment of the valuable ends you have in view against the common enemy. I have the honor to be [&c.]

DIARY OF CORPORAL JOHANN CHRISTOPH DOEHLEMANN, ANSPACH REGIMENT

[10 July to 13 July 1778]

... On the 10th we were embarked¹ early on the same transport ships that brought us from Schody Island² and in the afternoon we sailed toward the good Rhode Island.

Already in the previous year Rhode Island was considered one of the austere places in America and now we were in position to probe the island's characteristics of austerity. After a short time we arrived in the Sound.³ On the 13th in the afternoon two ships loaded with our troops ran on a sandbank. The Rebels saw this and immediately came out with a row-galley on which they had some swivel guns (cats heads) and fired on the ship that held half Ansbachers and half Bayreuthers, mostly privates. This ship had no cannons which the Rebels probably saw. The other grounded ship on which I was, lay not far off with six cannons. One was brought up on the quarterdeck and fired two shots toward them and they withdrew and departed. New London lay just before us where at the harbor we could see a strong Rebel fort and several schooners. To get off the sandbank we raised a distress flag and fired a shot so that the rest of the convoy anchored and sent boats and sailors to help us. The other ship that was attacked came loose immediately, ours was fast and required more effort.

At 10 PM all soldiers were loaded in the boats. 50 men and I in a boat were tied up at the front of the ship. The tide came in with such fury that water was entering the boat, we yelled for help but nobody heard us. All the soldiers from the other boats had returned to the ship. At last the soldiers threw us lines so we could pull ourselves forward and we cut the rear line. Now everyone wanted to be the first off the boat. Through this the boat was brought in danger of capsizing. Once the ship came loose we dropped anchor here.

"Diary of Johann Christoph Doehlemann, Grenadier Company, Ansbach Regiment March 1777 to September 1778," transcribed by Karl Walther, translated by Henry J. Retzer, in The Hessians: Journal of the Johannes Schwalm Historical Association, vol. 11 (2008), p. 16. Ansbach-Bayreuth was a German principality ruled by Margrave Karl Alexander. Most of its troops serving in America were divided into two regiments, the First and Second Ansbach-Bayreuth Regiments, though Doehlemann consistently refers to them as the Ansbach Regiment and the Bayreuth Regiment. This reflects the fact that the First Regiment was made up primarily of men from Ansbach and the Second Regiment with men from Bayreuth. Col. F. A. V. Voit von Salzburg commanded the 1st Ansbach-Bayreuth Regiment, while Col. F. J. H. W. Christian von Seybothern commanded the 2nd Ansbach-Bayreuth Regiment.

1. Both Ansbach regiments had been bivouacked at Hallet's Cove, on Long Island.

2. Reedy Island in the Delaware river, where the Ansbach regiments were transferred from smaller vessels to the five transports Fidelity, Houston, John and Bella, Nancy, and Spring.

3. That is, Long Island Sound.

D^r Sir

I shall be obliged to you to furnish me with a couple of 8 Inc^h Howitz, with Artillery Men Ammunition &ca., to place on the point of the Hook.¹ Your Engineer is not yet (that I have heard of) arrived.² The Wind being Easterly, furnishes our Adversaries with a favorable opportunity to make their attempt; But they have not yet taken the steps preparatory to that operation. They may do the needful in the Night. and the present Wind compelling us to change the Disposition of my Ships (which I must do as often as the Wind changes from the NE to the SSW) the Howitz will be, I think, particularly useful in our present Circumstances. Some tools will be necessary amongst the other requisites for making a bed & Breast Work for the Howitz. But a skillfull Engineer to direct our undertakings will be a Treasure to your most faithful Ser^t

Monday 13. [July 1778.] At 5 o'clock in the morning the General signaled to the *Alcmène*¹ to sail. This frigate was anchored to the south of the squadron to protect the re-embarkation of the General, who had been ashore at the head of 100 men with the project of searching for a source of water for the squadron, but this voyage was fruitless. At 9 o'clock we were signaled to sail in order to chase a frigate that appeared to want to go out from New York. No sooner than we saw it under sail than it returned into the river, after which we ran several tacks, we approached to ½ a league of the entrance of the bay, we recognized rather well that it was possible at that distance to fulfill the order to observe the English squadron, which was anchored in the form of a horse-shoe, the commandant in the center. After we had counted the ships, we crowded on sail to run after an English vessel that we caught up with. At 5 o'clock in the evening we confirmed our flag with a canon loaded with powder, we reconfirmed it with a second loaded with ball, then it hauled down its topgallant sails, but at a third it hauled down its flag and braced up to bring to. The captain sent me to man the prize in order to arrive as soon as possible among the squadron; at the same time, the English detached all their ships' boats, manned, along with two half-galleys and a schooner, which crowded on sail and with oars, to force us to release our prize, but when they saw that instead of crowding on sail to flee from them we diminished them to wait for them, they chose to return into the river. Our prize was a merchant snow called the Lord Howe,² carrying 8 guns, 3 pounders; it had just arrived, it was laden with sugar, syrup, rum, cacao, indigo, and cotton. It had fought for 2 hours against an American sloop from which it had escaped. We strove through the night to regain our post, but the little wind that blew rendered the thing impossible.

I shall with the highest good will and confidence cooperate with you in every possible measure for forwarding the Service—and most happy shall I reckon myself if by our mutual endeavours in conjunction with his Excellency the Governor,³ we can render any essential service to our Sovereign.—I wish much to deliberate with you on such measures as the present situation of affairs may point out to us, that we may forthwith endeavour to carry into execution such as may be deem'd practible or possible with the present force in this Province. I have [&c.]

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir

Camp Paramus [N.J.] 14 July 1778.

I had the honor yesterday evening of receiving your very important favor of the 10th instant.¹

Colonel Laurens, one of my aids, will set out this morning with a letter to the French Admiral the Count d'Estaing inclosing a copy of yours, and such other information as I have able to collect.—² Its further purpose is for the establishing a convention of signals in case of co-operation; or to convey him such a knowledge of the enemy's naval force and position, as may from time to time come under our cognizance.

It appears by intelligence of to-day that the Count d'Estaing is off or near Sandy Hook, having already seized several fishing boats on the banks, in order to procure information and pilots.

The army is in motion and will cross the North River with all convenient dispatch, where I shall pursue such measures as may appear best calculated for improving the present conjuncture. I have the honor [&c.]

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

Sir

Camp at Paramus 14 July 1778

I take the earliest opportunity to advise you, that I have been informed of your arrival on this Coast, with a Fleet of Ships under your command, belonging to his most Christian Majesty, our great Ally.

I congratulate you, Sir, most sincerely upon this event, and beg leave to assure you of my warmest wishes for your success. The intelligence of your arrival was communicated to me last night, by a letter from the Hon^{ble} M^r. Laurens, president of Congress, as you will perceive by the inclosed copy.¹

With respect to the number or force of the British Ships of War, in the port of New York, I am so unhappy, as not to be able to inform you of either, with the precision I could wish as they are constantly shifting their Stations. It is possible, and I hope it is the case, that your advices on this subject, from some captures you may have made, are more certain than those of Congress, or any I can offer. The number of their transports is reported to be extremely great, and I am persuaded that it is. If possible, I will obtain an accurate state of their Ships of War, which I shall do myself the honor of transmitting to you.

Before I conclude, I think it proper to acquaint you, that I am now arrived with the main body of the Army, immediately under my command, within twenty miles [of] the North or Hudsons River, which I mean to pass as soon as possible, about fifty Miles above New York. I shall then move down before the Enemy's lines, with a view of giving them every jealousy in my power. And I further think it proper to assure you, that I shall, upon every occasion, feel the strongest inclination to facilitate such enterprizes, as you may form, and are pleased to communicate to me.

I would submit it to your consideration whether it will not be expedient to establish some conventional signals, for the purpose of promoting an easier correspondence between us and mutual intelligence. If you deem it expedient, you will be so obliging as to fix upon them with Lieu^t. Col^o. Laurens,² one of my Aids, who will have the honor of delivering you this, and of giving you satisfaction in any particulars respecting our Affairs, and to whom you may safely confide any measures or information, you may wish me to be acquainted with.

I have just received advice, that the Enemy are in daily expectation of a provision Fleet from Cork, and that they are under great apprehensions lest it should fall into your hands. You will also permit me to no[tice] that there is a navigation to New York, from the Sea, besides the one between Sandy Hook and Long Island. This lies between the latter and the state of Connecticut—is commonly known by the name of the Sound—and is capable of receiving Ships of forty Guns, tho' the passage, within seven Miles of the City, at a particular place is extremely narrow and difficult. I have the Honor [&c.]

On this same date, the Marquis de Lafayette wrote d'Estaing discussing, among other topics, American arrangements to obtain intelligence of the British fleet and its activities for d'Estaing, adding: "I have sent to New York some clever persons who are trusted enough by the British, and I promised them great rewards if they give me an exact list of the ships which have left or are to leave and of everything of interest." GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL OF CONNECTICUT

Sir

Head Quarters Paramus [N.J.] July 14th 1778

I last night received a Letter from Congress informing me of the arrival of a French Fleet, on our Coast, extracts of which I have the Honor to enclose.¹ In addition to that information, I have received intelligence, of tolerable authenticity today, of its arrival off the Hook. Everything we can do to aid and cooperate with this Fleet is of the greatest importance. Accounts from New York speak of a Cork Fleet which is momentarily expected there, for the safety of which the Enemy are extremely alarmed. It is probable that this Fleet to avoid the French Fleet, will be directed to take its course thro' the Sound—If this should be the case, it might answer the most valuable consequences, were the eastern States to collect before hand all the Frigates and armed Vessels they can get together for the purpose, at some convenient place, for interrupting their passage that way. If the whole, or any considerable part of the Cork-Fleet could be taken or destroyed, it would be a fatal blow to the British Army, which, it is supposed, at this time, has but a very small stock of Provisions on hand—Should the project I have now suggested appear to you eligible, I beg the favor of you to transmit Copies of my Letter, and the enclosed extracts to the neighbouring states, and endeavour to engage their concurrence.² I have the Honor [&c.]

G Washington

P.S. From the nature of the River even small armed Boats may be useful as the Frigates cannot protect the Transports.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON'S LOOSE THOUGHTS ON AN ATTACK ON NEW YORK

[Northern New Jersey, 9-14 July 1778]¹

An attack upon the enemy at New York & its dependencies, must be regulated by the posts they occupy, and the nature of their defence.

At present they are much dispersed—Some being in the City, & some at Kings bridge—while long Island—Staten Island—Powles hook—&, (as some say) Sandy hook also have a part.— a thousand remain at the points at Kings-ferry.—

If they remain thus seperated and divided when the French-fleet arrives, it ought to be the first object of Count D'Estaing to keep them so.— & this is no other wise to be done than by pushing a sufficient number of Vessells by the hook—destroying all the Boats on Staten Island & by laying his ships in the Bay between New York & Staten Island prevent others getting there.— Unless the Boats on Stat[en] Island are immediately destroyed, & suc[h] a disposition of the Ships made as will pr[e]vent others from getting there, a retreat to long Island will, & can easily be affected by the enemy.— A few Ships Should also be run immediately up the N^o River into Haverstraw-bay, to prevent the Retreat of the Garrison of Stony-point by Water & to secure y^e communication of the Riv^r.— These operations would render the reduction of those bodies of men which occupy Staten Island & stony point certain; but the Troops on long Island—at Kings bridge—& at Powles hook may, in spite of any endeavours of the fleet, form a junction; & in defiance of a land force also; if it is undertaken in time.—

But to pursue the idea, & supposition, that they will continue forces on long Island and at Powles-hook (which is very probable & not less desirable) a position should be taken & in force on the heights above Morrissena—pointing equally to Haerlam River & a passage over the East River to long Island—while it is contiguous to the North River.— Every demonstration for crossing the East River should be thrown out at the sametime the real preparations are making for throwing Troops over Harlem River & possessing the heights above Harlem Plains for the purpose of cutting of [f] the communication & retreat of the Troops from Kings bridge to the City.— The demonstration is to draw the attention of the enemy to long Island & leave that of York more unguarded.— feints must be practiced to give countenance to a belief that the Army is going over to long Island: but for the execution of the real design—a number of Boats must be held in readin[ess] on the North-river (at ~~Peeks-kill~~ Stony point if we are in possession of it, if not, at some other place least liable to betray the design) ready to move [d]own at a certain time, & to a certain place for the purpose of receiving Troops to be landed at the heights below Harlem plains.— To facilitate this operation & prevent the Troops in the City from moving out, Count D’Estaing (who previous to the hour of co-operation sh^d. also hold out every appearance of landing on long Island to form a junction with our Troops at some given point) should have his Troops Imbarked on board boats ready to land in reality, or to make a shew of it, as circumstances may point out and will justify—These Troops to be covered by their own Shipping in New York bay—while those up the N^o. River receive protection from the French Ships above Spiken devil. which are to move down to prevent the retreat of the garris[on] at and about Kings bridge & cover the flan[ks] of our Incampment at Harlem.— The Armed Vessels in the Sound should move as near Morrissena as possible to cut of [f] all communication between Rhode Isl^d. & New York & prevent the Troops at Kings bridge getting on to long Island by moving on the East side of the Harlem river towards it.—

If this plan should Succeed—& it appears at least probable under the effect of a consternation at possessing Harlem heigh[ts] & seperating the Troops on the Island a spirited exertion with the proper means which must be previously prepared may set fire to and destroy all the shipping in the North River provided they should be at or above Turtle-bay—

If it shall be thought advisable after obtaining some certain knowledge of the enemy’s strength on Staten Island to make an attempt upon them there, & a force in addition to that on board the fleet wanting [to] effect the purpose—Lord Stirlings division or the light Infan^y [&] the Pennsylvania Militia may be employ[ed] on that Service with the Jersey Militia if necess[ary].]

The forgoing operation is on the presumption that the enemy, upon the appearance of the French fleet will continue to occupy their present Posts in the manner they now hold them; but in case they should concenter themselves in, or near the City, & at Brooklyn—the plan will vary.

It may be necessary in that cas[e] for Count D’Estaing to Possess Staten Island with his Troops, while his Ships lay in New York bay—Lord Stirlings division or light Infan^y and Pens^a. Militia may also join them.— these to be held in readiness to make a descent at long Island at such a time & at such place as may be agreed on, in order with other Troops which may be thrown across the East River to form an Army for long Isl^d.—The residue of the Troops to advance to Harlem & proceed on to York Island by w[ay] of Kings bridge if the Garrisons are with draw—or Harlem River if a few Troops are left in them merely to hold the Works. and take possession of the heights where the enemy had their first lines.— & then Murrys Hill.— The French shipping guarding the rig[ht] Flank.— good & strong pickets to secure our left & Front.— a breast Work of Waggon—Abbatis—Pits or something else to guard against the effect of a sudden attack, or Night surprize.

The rest being the work of regular approaches it must speak as circumstances direct.—

D, DLC, George Washington Papers, Series 4. Docketed: "loose thoughts upon/an attack of N. York."

1. This memorandum is undated and no place is given. At the top of the first page of the memorandum someone has written "[1778 Je?]." However, Washington reported to the President of Congress on 12 July 1778 that he had received the first reports of the arrival of a French fleet on the American coast "two or three days" earlier. GW Papers, Rev. War Series 16: 59. Moreover, on 14 July Washington sent his aide, John Laurens, to consult with comte d'Estaing and at the same time put the Continental army in motion toward New York. See General George Washington to comte d'Estaing, 14 July, below. It is logical to believe, therefore, that Washington composed this memorandum between the date he first learned of the French fleet (9 July) and when he dispatched Laurens to meet with d'Estaing (14 July) and it is that span of dates that the editors have assigned to it. During this time Washington moved his headquarters from Newark, New Jersey, to Paramus, New Jersey.

MEMORANDUM FROM MAJOR GENERAL NATHANAEL GREENE TO GENERAL
GEORGE WASHINGTON

[Paramus, N.J., 12-14 July 1778]¹

I would propose writing to the french Admiral² that there are two objects. One of the two may be improvd as a blockade or an investiture as circumstances and the practibility of entering the Harbour of Newyork should be found.

The french fleet to take their station at Sandy Hook and block up the Harbour. This Army to take a position near the White Plains to cut off the Land communication and to all appearance seem to design some serious opperations against Newyork & the troops there.

General Sullivan³ to be wrote to, desiring to know what force he has, that may be considerd in the charactor of regular troops what force is from the neighbouring States and expected in a few days, & what Militia can be brought together in Eight days time & how the Magazines are prepard for such a consumption & whether there is Boats to make a landing upon Rhode Island[,] to learn the Strength of the Enemy there and the number of their Ships & of what force

In the mean time the Admiral to make himself acquainted with the depth of water into Newyork and the Ships & force there. On the return of the Express from General Sullivan the admiral to determin from the enquiry he shall make and the information General Sullivan shall give which will be the most elligible object. But if it should be found the fleet can come into the Harbour of Newyork this Army will be ready to cooperate with him as far as the Nature of the Country & the situation of the Enemy will admit.

The fleet from Sandy Hook can run into Newport in three days time; that, that station will be favorable for either the one or the other of the measures as should be found hereafter to be the most certain of success.

I would inform the admiral of the difficulty of approaching Newyork by Land, of the Enemies strength there, and send a verbal account of our own strength and intended position. I would also send him a Copy of the Letter to G Sullivan if it is not thought dangerous as it is possible it may fall into the Enemies hands—

GOVERNOR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON OF NEW JERSEY TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

Sir

Baskenridge 14 July 1778

After doing myself the honour of presenting you with my hearty Gratulations on your safe arrival with his most Christian Majestys Fleet on the Coast of the united States, (which I wish all imaginable Success) I take the Liberty of recommending to your Notice M^r Vanzandt & Cap^t Dennis—¹ The former is agent for the Congress in the State of New York, & has been a member of their provincial Congress, & now accompanies Cap^t Dennis to facilitate the procuring of the Pilots recommended to me by Congress to procure to conduct your Fleet to New York—The Latter is one of the Commissioners in the Marine Department in New York, & both Inhabitants of this State since that City by the fortune of War fell into the Possession of the Enemy—Nothing Sir but the extreme urgency of the Business of my department should prevent me from paying you my Compliments in person—I hope the above Gentlemen shall be able to procure the necessary Pilots without Loss of time, & that the Fleet under your Command will not be delayed in triumphing over our mutual Enemies, on that Account—I have the honour to be with all possible respect [&c.]

JAMES LOVELL TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE

Dear Sir,

[Philadelphia] July 14th 1778.

Your Satyrocomic favor of the 30 of June¹ came yesterday to hand. I enviously thank you for it: for you write like a man happy by the side of a charming woman, and whom nothing can vex. I will now only say you ought to be here at this period as a balance to the days of vexation you have formerly known in the service of your country in this rotten hearted State. Though our own Navy has dwindled Sadly, we now hold up our heads upon the strength of our allies by sea. The Count d'Estang is plenipotentiary for co-operation with General Washington and has proceeded immediately to Sandy Hook. The Languedoc is a very Swift Sailor, and though called a 90, has upwards of 100 carriage guns and 1200 men.² The enemy have many ships, but their fifties half-manned will not be able to stand an engagement with double manned 74's & 64s of the French. Mr Hancock sets out for Town to morrow and will probably gain Some intelligence on his rout which being published in the Gazettes at his arrival will reach you and discover interesting events of the joint operations of France and America.³

Nine States have Signed the Confederation and there is no doubt but, Georgia, Delaware and Jersey will Soon Sign. Maryland will take airs and plague us, but upon our determination to confederate anew, 12 will do as She has always done before-come in without grace.⁴

J. P. Jones has behaved to your liking-his conduct alone will make England keep her Ships at home.⁵ My love to your friends

My dearest Love

Philadelphia July 14th 1778

I am distressed to account for your total Silence, not having received a Line from Home since my departure: my fears are raised in proportion to my Anxiety for your welfare and Comforts—I have wrote you several Letters lately, by different Opportunities—Yesterday I had the Honor to dine with Monseur La Sieur Gerard Minister plenipotentiary to his most Christian majesty. He is about 50 Years of Age, appears to be a Modest[,] Grave, decent, chearfull Man—highly pleased with our Country, and the Struggles we have made for Liberty—A Comittee of Congress were appointed to wait on him at Chester—On their Arrival, a Barge with 12 Oarsmen dressed in Scarlet trimmed with Silver were ready to recieve them—When they came to the Ship¹ her Sides were Manned & our Committee were recieved of the Gang way on the Deck by the Marines with posted Arms—At the Gang way they met the Ambassador Plenipotentiary &c &c and were conducted into the great Cabbin, when the Compliments of Congratulation being given they returned to the Shore in the same Manner and with the same Ceremony, accompanied by the Ambassador Sieur Gerard, Mr Deane² &c &c here were four Coaches & with four Horses our Committee had prepared, in which they returned to the City, when they were saluted with 15 Guns.—We have had an Acct. yesterday, that one of our Armed Ships called the Ranger of 18 Guns & 123 Men being on the Coast of Ireland, the Drake a frigate of 20 Guns and 150 Men was sent out to take her, but after an Engagement of 65 Minutes, she struck to the Ranger Capt. Jones—having lost the Capt. Lieut. & 42 Men—Capt. Jones lost the Cap of his Marines and about 8 Men—After this the Rangers sailed into Whitehaven, burned all the Ships in the Harbour, and spiked up about 30 Cannon in the Fort & came off. on his Passage he took 5 Prizes besides the Drake—White haven is on the Coast of England in the Irish Channel. . . .³

RECOGNITION SIGNALS BETWEEN AMERICAN VESSELS AND THE SHIPS OF THE LINE AND FRIGATES OF VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING'S SQUADRON

Signaux de jour des bâtimens de l'Escadre

Lorsqu'un bâtiment de l'Escadre voudra Se faire connoître par un bâtiment américain, il mettra trois pavillons; Savoir:

Au mât de mizaine, ou à une vergue de ce mât	}	Un Pavillon rouge avec une flamme rouge au dessus, si le jour du mois est impair
	}	Un Pavillon bleu avec une flamme rouge au dessus si le jour du mois est pair
Au grand mât, ou à une vergue de ce mât	}	Un Pavillon rouge si le jour de la semaine est le Dimanche, lundy, mardy ou mercredi
	}	Un Pavillon blanc si le jour de la Semaine est le jeudy, vendredy ou Samedy à la Corne d'Artimon	{	Un Pavillon yack pour les quinze premiers jours du mois. Un Pavillon hollandais pour les autres jours du mois

----------------------	---	---

Lorsque le bâtiment de l'Escadre Se Sera approché du bâtiment Américain, il amenera et hissera trois fois de suite son pavillon de la Corne d'artimon; et ensuite, s'il le juge à propos, il tirera un coup de canon de chaque bord.

Si le bâtiment américain a fait de son côté ses signaux et que le bâtiment français veuille l'avertu qu'il les a bien vûs, il amenera au tiers de sa hauteur, le Pavillon du mât de mizaine, et ensuite il le hissera de nouveau.

Les Signaux ayant été bien apperçus de part et d'autre si le bâtiment Français a besoin de parler au bâtiment américain, il amenera Ses Pavillons de l'avant et de l'arriere et conservera seulement celui du grand mât: s'il ne désire pas lui parler il amenera tous Ses pavillons.

Signaux de jour des bâtiments américains

Lorsqu'un bâtiment américain voudra se faire connaître d'un vaisseau ou frégate de l'Escadre, il mettra à son baton de pavillon, ou à son grand mât, un pavillon quelconque plié en triangle, et lorsqu'il l'aura tenu quelque tems en place, il l'amenera ou hissera plusieurs fois de suite; Savoir:

3 fois, si le jour du mois est pair, et que le jour de la Semaine soit le Dimanche, lundy, mardy ou mercredi

5. fois, si le jour du mois est impair et que le jour de la semaine Soit pareillement le Dimanche, lundy, mardy ou mercredi.

7 fois, si le jour du mois est pair et que le jour de la Semaine Soit le jeudy, vendredy ou Samedi

Et 9 fois Si le jour du mois est impair et que le jour de la Semaine Soit le jeudy, vendredy ou Samedi.

Il repetera par intervalles, S'il le juge nécessaire, deux ou trois fois le même Signal, jusqu'à ce que le bâtiment français indique qu'il l'a apperçu en amenant le pavillon de son mât de mizaine au tiers de sa hauteur et le réhissant de nouveau.

Si le bâtiment américain a des canons ou pierriers, il tirera s'il le juge à propos, un coup de canon de chaque bord.

Les Signaux ayant été bien apperçus de part et d'autre, Se le bâtiment américain a besoin de parle au bâtiment français, il conservera Son pavillon, et il l'amenera s'il ne désire pas lui parler.

Signaux de nuit

Lorsque pendant la nuit un bâtiment américain voudra Se faire connaître par un bâtiment de l'Escadre, et réciproquement, ils mettront un fanal dans l'endroit du v^{au} le plus apparent, et ils le couvriront ou le découvriront plusieurs fois de suite, par intervalles bien distincts, et aussi égaux qu'il Le pourra; Savoir:

4 fois Si le jour du mois est impair, et que le jour de la Semaine Soit le Dimanche, lundy, mardy our mercredi.

6 fois Si le jour du mois est pair et que le jour de la Semaine Soit le Dimanche, lundy, mardy ou mercredy.

8 fois Si le jour du mois est impair, et que le jour de la semaine Soit le jeudy, vendredy ou Samedy.

Et 10 fois Si le jour du mois est pair, et que le jour de la Semaine Soit le jeudi, vendredi ou Samedi.

Ils repeteront ensuite deux ou trois fois le même Signal en laissant un intervalle de trois ou quatre minutes entre les repetitions.

Ensuite, au cas qu'ils veuillent Se parler, ils conserveront leur fanal découvert, Sinon ils l'eteindront.

Signaux de Brume

Lorsqu'un bâtiment américain Se trouvant dans une brume et bord de la portée de la voix d'un bâtiment qu'il jugera être de l'Escadre Française, et qu'il voudra Se faire connaître de ce bâtiment, il tirera deux coups de pierriers ou fera deux décharges de plusieurs coups de fusils Si le jour du mois est pair, et trois coups de pierriers ou trois décharges de plusieurs coups de fusils Si le jour du mois est impair.

Le bâtiment d l'Escadre qui en pareil cas voudra Se faire connaître par le bâtiment américain tirera trois coups de pierriers ou fera trois décharges de plusieurs coups de fusils Si le jour du mois est pair; et deux coups de pierriers, ou deux décharges de plusieurs coups de fusils Si le jour du mois est impair.

Lorsque les deux bâtiments Seront à portée de la voix ils heleront, ensuite celui qui aura helé le premier dira son mot de reconnoissance auquel l'autre bâtiment répondra par le Sienne. Le mot de reconnoissance du bâtiment américain Sera Trenton and independency, celui du bâtiment Français Sera Saratoga and liberty.

[Translation]

Signals by day of ships of the Squadron

When a ship of the squadron wants to make itself known by an American ship, it will place three flags, thus:

On the foremast, or on a foreyard	{	A red flag with a red pennant above, if the day of the month is odd
	{	A blue flag with a red pennant above if the day of the month is even
On the mainmast, or on a mainyard	{	A red flag if the day of the week is Sunday, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday
	{	A white Flag if the day of the week is Thursday, Friday or Saturday at the peak of the mizzenmast	{	A jack for the first fifteen days of the month.
	{	A Dutch flag for the other days of the month

When a ship of the squadron will have approached the American ship, it will lower and raise three times successively its flag at the peak of the mizzenmast, and then, if it judges appropriate, it will discharge a cannon from each side.

If the American ship on its part has made its signals and the French ship wants to indicate that it has seen them well, it will lower to a third of its height the flag on the foremast and then hoist it again. The signals having been perceived well by both parties, if the French ship has need of speaking with the American ship, it will lower its flags fore and aft and keep only the one on the mainmast: if it does not want to speak with it, it will lower all its flags.

Signals by day of the American ships

When an American ship wants to make itself known by a ship of the line or frigate of the squadron, it will put on its flagstaff or on its mainmast any flag folded into a triangle, and when it has kept it in place for some time, it will lower or raise it several times in succession; thus:

3 times, if the day of the month is even, and the day of the week is Sunday, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday

5 times, if the day of the month is odd, and the day of the week is similarly Sunday, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday

7 times, if the day of the month is even and the day of the week is Thursday, Friday or Saturday

9 times, if the day of the month is odd and the day of the week is Thursday, Friday or Saturday.

He will repeat by intervals, if he judges it necessary, two or three times the same signal, until the French ship indicates that it has seen it by lowering its flag on its foremast to a third of its height and hoisting it again.

If the American ship has cannon or swivel guns, it will fire, if it judges appropriate, a shot from each side.

The signals having been well seen by both parties, if the American ship has need of speaking with the French ship it will keep its flag flying, and it will lower it if it does not want to speak with it.

Signals by night

When during the night an American ship wants to make itself known to a ship of the squadron, and reciprocally, they will place a lantern in the area of the vessel the most obvious and cover and uncover it several times in succession, at very distinct intervals, and as equal as they are able to do it; thus:

4 times if the day of the month is odd, and the day of the week is Sunday, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday.

6 times if the day of the month is even and the day of the week is Sunday, Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday.

8 times if the day of the month is odd, and the day of the week is Thursday, Friday, or Saturday.

And 10 times if the day of the month is even, and the day of the week is Thursday, Friday, or Saturday.

They will repeat thereupon two or three times the same signal while leaving an interval of three or four minutes between the repetitions.

Then, in the case that they want to converse, they will keep their lantern uncovered, if not, they will extinguish it.

Fog Signals

When an American ship finds itself in a fog and within speaking distance of a ship it judges to be of the French squadron, and to which it wants to make itself known, it will fire two shots from swivel guns or two volleys of several muskets if the day of the month is even, and three shots from swivel guns or three volleys of several muskets if the day of the month is odd.

The ship of the squadron in a similar case wanting to make itself known by an American ship will fire three shots from swivel guns or three volleys from several muskets if the day of the month is even, and two shots from swivel guns or two volleys from several muskets if the day of the month is odd.

When the two ships are within speaking distance, they will hail, then the one that will have hailed first will say its word of recognition to which the other ship will respond with its own. The word of recognition of the American ship will be Trenton and independency, that of the French ship will be Saratoga and liberty.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL CHARLES O'HARA TO GENERAL SIR HENRY CLINTON

Sir

Sandy Hook [N.J.] the 15th of July 1778

I flatter myself that when you are acquainted that I did not arrive upon this Island till Two O Clock this Morning,— that You will be persuaded that it has not been owing to any neglect, that I have not had the Honor of making my Report to You Sooner—

After having visited every part of this Island that I might be informed Exactly, what were the nature of the Attacks that might be made by the French fleet upon this Place[,] I waited upon Lord Howe, & desired him that he would give me his Ideas upon that Head. His Lordship immediately landed with me upon the Hook & after Examining the whole Sea Shore of this Island—was of Opinion that the French Fleet could cover the Descent of Troops almost in every Part of the Coast of the Hook,¹ which is at least four miles in Length—You are Sir very well informed of the facility of entering this Place from the Continent at the end of the Island where the Bridge was thrown across the Creek—

As so many formidable Attempts may be made upon this Island, I conceive that it would be absolutely necessary, that a very considerable Reinforcement, not less than fifteen Hundred Men with Six Pieces of Field artillery would be requisite for its defence—& that Number I should Suppose would be very Sufficient against any Attacks that could possibly be made upon this Island—

The Possession of this Post I conceive to be of the greatest Importance as it Enables Lord Howe Under its Cover to take a position that puts him upon a Level with the French fleet—who by being Obliged to pass the Bar by single Ships would be beat by our Fleet in detail—but were the French Masters of this Island they would by erecting Batterys oblige our Ships to quit this present Advantageous Situation & move higher up the Bay—the Enemy would then pass the Bar unmolested & Attack Lord Howe in Line of Battle—I must therefore take the Liberty of repeating that I conceive this Post to be of the very first Importance & that an Immediate Considerable Reinforcement is necessary[.] I have the Honor to be, [&c.]

Cha^s O'Hara

I send you Colonel Hope² who is perfectly acquainted with every part of this Island & will give you every Information Relative to it.

JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Philadelphia] Wednesday, July 15, 1778

The Committee on the Treasury brought in a report; Whereupon,

That a warrant issue on John Gibson, Esq.^r auditor general for 80,000 dollars, in favour of the Marine Committee, to enable them to pay a bill drawn on them by the navy board of the eastern department, dated 11 May, in favour of Nathaniel Shaw, Esq.^e the said committee to be accountable¹:

Congress took into consideration a memorandum from the Sieur Gérard, respecting prisoners taken by the squadron of his most Christian Majesty, commanded by the Count d'Estaing, being one of the papers received and read this morning:² Whereupon,

Resolved, That all prisoners taken, or which may be taken by the squadron of his most Christian Majesty, under the command of Count d'Estaing, vice admiral of France, be received by the commissary general of prisoners,³ and that he provide for their safe custody and subsistence in like manner as hath been usual for the prisoners of these states:

That he may make monthly returns of all prisoners, which shall be by him so received, to the Board of War:

That he may make monthly return to the treasury of the accounts of all monies expended for the purposes aforesaid; and that the said prisoners be held at the disposition of his most Christian Majesty, and subject to the orders of his excellency Mons. the Count d'Estaing.

Resolved, That all officers in the service of these states be directed to pay proper attention to the above resolution.

Ordered, That the paper relative to signals, received from his excellency the Sieur Gérard, and read this morning, be referred to the Marine Committee.⁴

Ordered, That an extract of another paper from the Sieur Gérard, relative to the encouragement given by Count d'Estaing to American armed vessels, whether public or private, be published.⁵

CONRAD-ALEXANDRE GÉRARD, FRENCH MINISTER TO THE UNITED STATES TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

N^o. 3.

A Philadelphie le 15. Juillet 1778.

Monsieur

J'ai l'honneur de vous envoyer ci joint le duplicata d'une lettre que j'ai pris la liberté de vous envoyer avant hier par un exprès.¹ Nous venions d'apprendre qu'on avoit vu l'Escadre sur Sandy hook et on en augure que les Secours de tous genres qu'on vous a destinés, doivent vous être parvenus. On est dans un grande attente des evenemens.

Quant aux approvisionnement de l'Escadre dont M le Ch^{er} de Borda² m'a remis la notte, je me Suis convaincu qu'il n'y avoit pas d'autre moyen praticable de Se les procurer que de S'adresser au Congrès. Ce n'est que de cette manière qu'on peut S'assurer de l'exactitude des fournitures, et de n'être pas lésé par l'extravagance des prix aux quels toutes choses Sont portées ici, d'autant que le Congrès verroit avec peine qu'on payât en argent monnoyé.

Je joins ici, Monsieur, la notte que j'ai remise au Congrès Sur cet objet, dans les Sens que M le Ch^{er} de Borda me l'a prescrit.³ S'il y avoit quelques changemens à faire Soit pour les quantités ou les qualités, vous auriés la bonté de me donner vos ordres, ainsi que Sur les epoques précise et, autant qu'il Se pourra, Sur les lieux où vous desirerés que les approvisionnement Soient rendus. J'ai retranché le boeuf Salé parcequ'il n'est pas bondans cette Saison, et parceque les ordres donnés partout Sur la côte de vous fournir tout ce que vous demanderés, mettront probablement en état de donner des repas de viande fraîche aux équipages, à meilleur marché que ne Seroit la viande Salée. On espere pouvoir fournir presque tous les articles; cependant il faudra quelques jours pour le constater positivement.

Je me Suis informé, Monsieur, S'il y avoit de negres à vendre dans ce pays ci; ils Sont très rares dans tout le Continent et un negre de travail ordinaire vaut jusqu'à 300.[#] Sterling en or. Ayez la bonté de me mander Si je ne dois pas m'arreter à ce prix. En attendant je lacherai de decouvrir la marchandise, afin de la prendre Si vos instructions ne Sont pas negatives.

Je ne vous rendrai pas compte, Monsieur, de tous les obstacles que la navigation de la petite flotte Sous les ordres de M de S^t Cesaire a eprouvés.⁴ Il n'a rien negligé por l'accelerer, et on S'y est preté d'ici de bonne grace; mais tous les moyens manquent. J'espere cependant que la Chimere pourra vous rejoindre dans le tems prescrit et que la cargaison que les autres vaisseaux peuvent prendre après les arrangemens qui ont été pris pour des rafraichissemens ne les arreteront pas. Je ne les laisserois pas même charger de bœuf. Si j'en croyois les assurances qu'on m'a donné que vous en avés trouvés; mais Sur cet article delicat une précaution même un peu excessive ne me Semble pas deplacée.

Le Capitaine Selby⁵ est arrivé ici aujourd'hui avec un pilote; il vous en avoit mené 7. Au lieu indiqué. Il a tenté de vous suivre, mais il n'a pu y parvenir. Je crois de voir, Monsieur, vous transmettre cet avis afin que vous jugiés ce qu'il conviendra de faire pour Son dedomagement.

Je m'aperçois qu'on est fâché d'avoir à garder ici M Tatteral et Sa famille et si vous vouliés bien prendre moyen pour en debarrasser Congrès, on vous en Seroit fort obligé.⁶

Le vaisseau que a été chassé à terre est le Mermaid de 20.⁷ Canons. c'est lui qui avoit observé l'Escadre et le combat contre la *Rose*⁷ lui avoit aprit qu'elle estoit française. Il est venu en avertir le Roebuck qui croisoit Sur les Caps de la Delaware ils ont pris chacun une route differente pour lui de S'échaper.

J'ai Sondé le terrain; ainsi que vous l'avés désiré relativement à la Suite de vos operations. Je n'ai pu trouvé les esprits disposés à prendre aucun partie avant que l'entreprise sur New York ou sur Newport Soit decidée. En attendant je chercherai à preparer l'execution de vos intentions. On paroît persuadé que l'Angleterre enverra des forces Superieures. Je Suis [&c.]

Gerard

P.S. Je me suis informé, Monsieur si le Congrès pouroit vous faire fournir de plomb; on l'espere et je suis chargé de vous prier de me mander la quantité que vous désirés.

N^o. 3.

At Philadelphia 15 July 1778

Sir

I have the honor of sending you attached the duplicate of a letter that I took the liberty of sending you the day before yesterday by an express.¹ We just learned that the squadron had been seen at Sandy Hook and had concluded that the aids of every kind that were intended for you should reach you.

As to the provisioning of the squadron of which M. the Chevalier de Borda² has sent me the note, I am convinced that there is no other practicable means of his procuring them than that of his addressing himself to the Congress. It is only in this manner that we can be assured of the exactness of the furnishing and of not being injured by the extravagance of the prices to which all things are carried here, more especially as Congress will require that we pay in silver coin.

I attach here, Sir, the note that I sent to the Congress on this matter, in the sense that M. the Chevalier de Borda has prescribed to me.³ If there are any changes, either in quantities or qualities, have the goodness of giving me your orders, as well as on the precise periods and, as far as possible, on the places where you desire that these provisions may be sent. I have curtailed the salted beef because it is not in abundance this season, and because the orders given everywhere on the coast to furnish you all that you request probably put you in the situation of giving meals of fresh meat to your crews at a better price than that of salted meat. We expect to be able to furnish almost all the articles; however it will take several days to state this positively.

I have investigated, Sir, if there are some negroes for sale in this country; they are very rare in the whole continent and a negro of ordinary work costs up to 300.[#] sterling in gold. Have the goodness to send me if I should not stop at this price. While waiting, I tried to discover the merchandise, in order to take it if your instructions are not negative.

I did not report to you, Sir, all the obstacles that the sailing of the small fleet under the orders of M. de St. Cesaire found.⁴ He has neglected nothing to speed it along, and they are ready here by good fortune; but all the means are lacking. I hope however that the Chimère will be able to rejoin you in the time prescribed and that the cargo that the other ships can take according to the arrangements that have been taken for some refreshments will not stop them. I would not even allow them to load beef if I believed the assurances that I have been given that you have found some of it; but on this delicate article, a precaution even a bit excessive does not seem to me out of place.

Captain Selby⁵ arrived here today with a pilot; he has sent you 7 of them to the place indicated. He tried to follow you, but he was unable to get there. I believe I should, Sir, transmit to you this information so that you may judge what is proper for his recompense.

I perceive that it is vexing to have M. Tatteral and his family kept here, and if you would please take some means to relieve the Congress of them, one would be much obliged.⁶

The ship that was chased ashore is the Mermaid of 20 guns.⁷ It is this ship that had watched the squadron and the combat against the Rose.⁸ Having learned that it was French, he came to alert the Roebuck, which was cruising along the Capes of the Delaware. Each of them took a different route to escape.

I have tested the terrain, as you wished, relative to the course of your operations. I have not been able to find minds disposed to take any part before the enterprise at New York or at Newport may be decided. While waiting, I have worked to prepare the execution of your intentions. One appears to be persuaded that the English will send superior forces. I am [&c.]

Gerard

P.S. I have investigated, Sir, if the Congress could furnish you with lead; it is hoped so, and I am charged with asking you to tell me the quantity you want.

1. In the first of two letters Gérard addressed to d'Estaing on 13 July, he discussed the provisioning of the French squadron, the activities of Jean-Charles, Chevalier da Borda, and the activities of Major André-Michel-Victor, marquis de Choin, d'Estaing's aide-de-camp. Gérard's second letter is largely in cipher. See FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 143, fols. 89–90 and 96–99.

4. Capitaine de vaisseau Antoine de Cresp de Saint-Cézaire who commanded the French frigate Chimère.

5. Perhaps William Selby, of Pitts Landing, Virginia. Selby had fallen in with the French fleet on 23 June. See Notes Made on Board the French Navy Ship of the Line Languedoc, with the undated entries at the beginning of June in the European Theater section, below.

6. Josiah Tattmull, a Georgia loyalist who had been captured, along with his wife and children, by d'Estaing's squadron. On 4 Sept. 1778, President of the Continental Congress Henry Laurens wrote to Col. John Beatty regarding a parole and exchange. Laurens Papers 14: 263–64.

7. H.M. frigate Mermaid, Capt. James Hawker, had been sent to warn approaching British ships from sailing to Philadelphia, as the British had lately evacuated that city. Hawker and Mermaid had relieved H.M.S. Roebuck, under Capt. Andrew Snape Hamond, from the same task. When the French fleet under Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing approached the Delaware, Mermaid tried unsuccessfully to flee, and Hawker ran the ship aground on 8 July to prevent its capture. 8. British letter of marque ship Rose, Capt. James Duncan. For an account of its capture, see the Journal of the French Navy Ship of the Line Languedoc, 5 July, above.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA NAVY BOARD TO CAPT. STEPHEN DUVAL, SOUTH CAROLINA NAVY

Navy Board [Charleston] July 15th 1778—

Sir/

Eleven Prisoners of war having made their Escapes last night, have Taken a Sailing boat Belonging to M^r Redhall and are very probably gone to the S^ward; the Commiss^{rs}. of the Navy direct that you do Immediately proceed with the Eagle Pilot Boat to the Southward and Endeavour by Every means in your power to Overtake and bring back to Charles Town the said Prisoners¹

By Order of the Board
Edw^d Blake first Commiss^r

To M^r Stephen Duvall—

South Carolina Commissioners, p. 167. Duvall was captain of the South Carolina Navy pilot boat Eagle.

1. At their meeting of 16 July, the Board recommended: "Should the Eagle be gone out the Board Recommend that Mr. Duvall do go out in the Tryal and take charge of the Eagle at Sea, as she is the fittest Vessel for that purpose." Ibid.

THE GAZETTE, OF THE STATE OF SOUTH-CAROLINA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1778

CHARLES-TOWN, July 15.

Chesapeak Bay, has been entirely clear of British men of war since the 20th of May. The trade of that State, and of the neighbouring one of North-Carolina, now receives no interruption but from a few privateers of no considerable force, amongst them the Brig of Capt. Squires,¹ and the sloops of Captains Powel² and Guttridge,³ who frequently appear off Okerecock,⁴ and might soon be removed. Guttridge mounts only ten-guns, and chases every thing.

The latest advices that have been received from Europe, are to the 7th of April, by the French ship Proud Roderick (formerly the Hippopotame man of war) mounting 36 guns, 18 and 12 pounders, arrived in Chesapeak Bay from Rochefort, with the most valuable cargo that has yet been shipped in France for America⁵. . . .

Three weeks ago there was not a vessel of war nor a British soldier in Bermuda; yet, we are told, that one Sheddlin or Shedwin⁶ (one of Lord Dunmore's hopeful train from Virginia)⁷ who has amassed a considerable fortune in that island, by employing neutral Bermuda vessels to trade with the Americans, is at the same time adding to his riches by a concern in two privateers, one immediately from Bermuda (Guttridge's sloop)⁸ the other from St. Augustine; having the peculiar advantage by the trade he carries on, of gaining the best intelligence for his privateers. . . .

We have advice, that another fleet was to sail from Jamaica about the same time—That the privateers fitted out from that island, are innumerable, and so spread among the Keys, that it is almost impossible for any vessel to escape them—. . . .

Nothing, that had the appearance of an enemy, has been seen upon this coast, since Sunday the 5th Instant, when a small schooner passed by this Bar, at a great distance from the land, from the Northward to the Southward, the wind then at E. under about a third of her mainsail, her foresail and jib, and in the evening bore away about S.S.W.— So that we may conjecture our enemy's naval force has been collected together, either for new mischief, or to be withdrawn.

We are advised from Georgia, that the beginning of last week, a small Virginia-built schooner (supposed to be the same that passed by this bar on the 5th instant) tender to the Perseus man of war,⁹ with dispatches for St. Augustine, was taken by Capt. Gilbert Harrison, in a small armed sloop from Sunbury, and carried in there. It seems they fell in with each other in the night, and the sloop being hailed, answered from New-Providence, bound to St. Augustine; the tender being hailed in turn, answered from New-York for St. Augustine, and asked, if they had fruit on board the sloop; Capt. Harrison answered, they had plenty, and might have what they pleased, whereupon they came on board and were secured as was the vessel at the same time.

WILLIAM AND GODFREY HUTCHINSON TO PRESIDENT OF MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR

(Dupl^a)
Sir!

S^c: pierre M/Que¹ July 15th: 1778.—
Original ꝑ Cap^t Samuel Chace
Jun^r

We are favoured with yours of the 25th: May.—

You will perceive by the enclosed Acco^c current, that the Ball^a in our favour is considerably encreased.— As it was intirely unexpected to us to be so largely in advance for our friends in America, we had constantly shipt on our Acco^c as much as our Capital would possibly admit of, & have never received any part of it back again.—

Besides this Ball^a there is not a private arm’d vessel (except the Cumberland)² belonging to the State which has been in this Island, but what we are in advance for & for some of them to a very Considerable Am^t— From a consideration of those Circumstances, together with our very small Capital, you will readily conceive in what an unhappy Situation we are now in.—

It has ever given us infinite pleasure that, altho’ absent from our Country, Circumstances have afforded us an Opportunity of contributing our mite, towards the Support of the real friends of it.— At the same time we flatter ourselves that you & our other good friends will be sufficiently convinced, by the proofs we have given of it by sacrificing our Capital, at a moment when it might have Employed to so much advantage & will prevent us from feeling the Disagreeable Consequences, which must very shortly attend the Delay of payment of some of the considerable Debts we have contracted on their acco^c in this Island.— However as WH:³ is arrived with you, we are Satisfied that from his Representations of facts, you have long since found means of remitting us.— As finding that it was impossible to comply with our Engagements we were favoured so far as to have three months granted us for W:H: to go to America, to represent our Situation and to procure us relief.— The third month since his Departure is now nearly Elapsed & we have not been so fortunate as to receive any thing.— It is useless to Enlarge on the Subject, but refer you to our W:H:—

By an Act lately passed, this Island is Declared to Enjoy a free trade with all nations, with Liberty to Export all kinds of produce.— This Act will be in force the 25th Instant.—

The Enormous duties on fish & molasses which so greatly affected the Commerce between this Island, & the Northern States are now taken off.—

Fish is in great Demand at 55 L^s ꝯ Quintal.—

Molasses plenty at 20 sols ꝯ Gallⁿ. & probably under.—

We are with respect Sir! [&c.]

JEREMIAH POWELL, PRESIDENT OF THE MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE

My Lord
State of Massachusetts Bay
Council Chamber Boston 16th. July 1778

The following Extract of a Letter from Gen^l Pigot¹ to Gen^l Sullivan at Providence was transmitted to this State Viz^t "I am directed to acquaint you, that the prisoners you request, in lieu of those you have at Providence, being men belonging to the New England Province, I am not at Liberty to make any Exchange for them, having received orders from the Right Hon^{ble}. Viscount Howe not to release any prisoners that come within that description till proper restitution is made for the number of men that were released in the Royall Bounty Cartel Ship that was ~~liberated~~ forceably carried into Marblehead, as well as for the Ships Furniture & Stores"— These orders, we beg leave to acquaint your Lordship, we conclude were given from a misappreh[n]sion of the Facts & your not being acquainted with the Circumstances of that Vessel; would therefore acquaint you, that sometime in the Month of January last, the Ship Royall Bounty Cap^t Compton² was brought into this State by a Number of American prisoners, bound from Hallifax to Newport who on their passage Liberated themselves, by being Seperated from a Convoy & carried her into Marblehead.³ Upon her arrival there the said Vessel was Libelled & Legally Condemned at a Maritim[e] Court which your Commissary M^r Waller at Newport, in answer to his Letter upon the Subject, was in the time of it fully acquainted with, and such Reasons given him why this Vessel could not be considered by this State as a Cartel, as we thought were sufficient & quite to his Satisfaction, we having since, sent to Newport a Cartel, & Exchanged by our Commissary M^r Henderson there, nigh one hundred prisoners

The Royall Bounty being thus Circumstanced I flatter my Selfe your Lordship will not cannot consider her as a Cartel or proper Flag of Truce, the Guard & Convoy she was under & the port she was bound to destroying the very Idea, and giving the Prisoners on Board a Right to Liberate themselves; whereas had she been a proper Flag bound for this State, nothing of this Nature could have taken place nor any Loss have accrued.

We therefore Expect your Lordship will revoke the former orders & give orders, that a Cartel which we have ready to send for Newport with about one hundred & Fifty german prisoners, may not be hindered, but proceed regularly & a proper Exchange Immediately take place we therefore Expect you will revoke the order aforesaid that so an Exchange of Prisoners may Immediately take place

We cannot avoid mentioning our very great Surprise that your Lordship should look on this Vessell bound from one port to another in your own possession & under Convoy, as a Cartel: we conclude therefore you could not be fully apprised of the Circumstances this Vessell was in, when you gave the foregoing orders, and that you will revoke the said orders so that an Exchange on both sides of those unhappy prisoners ~~on both side~~ may Immediately take place, if not, and any Lives should be lost by a Cruel Confinement, the Blood cannot lay at our Door, and your Lordship must answer for the Consequence⁴ I am in the Name & by order of the Council with due Respect your Lordship's Most Obed^t Serv^t

Jer: Powell President

LIEUTENANT COLONEL ALEXANDER HAMILTON TO CAPTAIN PATRICK DENNIS

D Sir

A considerable fleet of french men of War, chiefly Ships of the line, has just arrived at Sandy Hook, under the command of Admiral Count D'Estaing. As the Admiral is a stranger, and is come for the purpose of co-operating with us against the Enemy, it is absolutely necessary that he should be attended by some Gentlemen of intelligence and who possess an accurate knowledge of the Coast and harbours. His Excellency General Washington ~~from the information he has received~~ is persuaded you answer this description in every part; and I am directed by him to request you in his name, if circumstances will permit, to go on board the Admiral as early as possible. Your services may be the most important and interesting and such as will ~~may not only~~ ~~be give~~ you a just claim to the thanks and notice of your country ~~but to a liberal notice~~ * His Excellency would have written to you himself upon the subject, but he was under the necessity of leaving Head Q^s early this morning, to visit the posts above on the River. This Letter, shewn to the ~~Admiral~~ Count D'Estaing will be, I trust, a sufficient introduction of you. I am D^r Sir [&c.]

Alex Hamilton
Aid de Camp

Head Q^s: Haverstraw Bay }
July 16: 1778-

*If you can remain with the fleet during their operations in this Quarter it will be infinitely desirable; but if you can not, it will still be of importance for you to see the Count D'Estaing as you may inform him several points of which he may wish to know.

For more on Patrick Dennis, see Gov. William Livingston to comte d'Estaing, 14 July, above. On 15 July, Gen. George Washington wrote William Dobbs from Fishkill, N.Y., asking him to come to headquarters to meet with Washington and to serve as a pilot for d'Estaing's fleet. Like Hamilton, Washington in payment promised Dobbs "a sum that will not only be just but generous and if we should not, that your services will be liberally considered & rewarded by the states." Thursday 16. [July 1778.] At 6 o'clock in the evening the General sent me an order to sail in order to go reconnoiter a snow at sea, we immediately set sail, the head to the east by the compass. At 7:30 o'clock we were tack by tack with this vessel. We confirmed our flag, and we called for it to strike; it struck indeed; the captain sent M. De Camus¹ to man it; he found that this vessel was a privateer of 14 guns, 4s and 6s, manned by 50 men.² It came from Rhode Island, where, they told us, it had left several frigates and some forty transports. We found on board about 50,000[#], fruit of a cargo that it had sold in Rhode Island; this silver was sent to the major³ of the squadron. After we had manned the prize, we headed for the squadron and anchored in 13 fathoms, bottom of sand, the wind at the S.E., rather weak.

GOVERNOR WILLIAM LIVINGSTON OF NEW JERSEY TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Dear Sir

Morris Town [N.J.] 16 July 1778

I did myself the honour this morning to acquaint your Excellency that I had been yesterday to the Southward to forward pilots to the hook¹ to conduct the fleet under the Command of his Excellency Count d'Estaing to New York—As each ship ought at least to have one, I am persuaded that it will conduce to the Service to secure some to the Northward least we should be disappointed in the requisite Complement in these parts. I therefore take the Liberty to mention to your Excellency the names of some that have been recommended to me at Peeks kill & Kings ferry, to wit

Capt William Dobbs ²	}	Peeks Kill
Dennis McQuire
Isaac Symondson
William [Sloan?]		Kings ferry

JOURNAL OF THE VIRGINIA NAVY BOARD

At a Meeting of the Navy Board at the Chickahominy shipyard on thursday the 16th day of July 1778.—

Present

Mr Whiting Mr Travis Mr Archer and Mr Innis.—

A Complaint was lodged with the Board by Captain Jn^o Barret against Captain Wright Westcott late of the *Norfolk Revenge*¹ for overcharging his men belonging to the said Galley with goods by him purchased out of the Country store for them on their acco^t and the same being proved by the oath of Mr Wood.— Ordered that he immediately refund to the said men the Money he received from them over and above what the said Goods costs in the said store; and as his Conduct is highly blameable respecting the same that he be called in, and receive a Reprimand from the first Commissioner² which was done accordingly.—

A Complaint was lodged with the Board by George Pipenhoulst, Walter Boyle, Edward Price, Charles Elder, Carter Frost, Jn^o Carrol, Thomas Hunt, Jn^o Whitehead, Jn^o Askins, W^m. Stanley James Crane & Edward Martin setting forth that they were induced to enlist in the Navy service from principles of love to their Country, and in the stations in which they have acted they have done their truest and best endeavours to promote the service thereof: that they are extremely sorry that any thing should have happened to cause a difference between the Captain under whose command we are, but we are at the same time happy in being conscious that the fault is not on our side, and now beg leave to represent to this Board the Cause of this difference &c see the petition. The Board on hearing the Allegations are of Opinion that the Complaint is frivolous and without any foundation.—³

Malcolm Grant, Edmund Sweny Maximilian Etheridge, and Markham Wood personally appeared before the Board, and agreed to continue to work at the Chickahominy shipyard till the 25th day of december next at the daily wages of twelve shillings each, and a suit of winter and summer cloathes from the public store on the same terms as the soldiers and sailors have them.—⁴

Ordered that William Osborne have leave of absence from the Navy ten days.—⁵

COMMISSIONERS OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA NAVY BOARD TO PAUL PRITCHARD

Navy Board [Charleston] 16th July 1778—

Sir/

The Commissioners of the Navy have received and considered your proposal respecting the Sale of the Ship Yard at Hobcaw, which they find to be different from what they expected from the Conversation they before had with you,¹ both respecting the Commission charged on the purchase and the Terms of your attendance; the Commissioners understood you were willing to carry on the Yard holding a Share yourself and to receive a proportion of the profits upon which principle they desired your proposals—M^r Livingston's² condition also of sending any Vessels that he [break] e to the Yard, in preference to all Others is not agreeable to them tho the Commissioners would by all Means give the preference to Continental Vessels Another principal obstacle with them is that you have not proposed any term of time to remain at the Yard, they could not think of making any Agreement without your engaging to carry on the Business of the Yard for a term of Years—

Should you be inclinable to alter your proposals either to carry on the Yard jointly or to receive a certain Share of the Profits for your Management, they will recommend the matter to the President & Council for their approbation.³

CAPTAIN GEORGE KEITH ELPHINSTONE, R.N., TO CAPTAIN JOHN MOWBRAY

Perseus off St. John River 16th July, 1778.

Sir,—Whereas His Excellency Governor Tonyn has been pleased to order the Vessels mentioned in the margin employed for the defence of this Province¹ to be put under my command, you will consequently observe all orders and obey all signals issuing from me.

You will be pleased to continue the Germaine and Thunderer off the Sisters Creek, and the Dreadnought towards the Bar, which latter² may be moved occasionally.

A scout boat must be sent once every two days to examine the passage towards Nassau, and sometimes Hannah Mills Narrows,³ but on this service caution is necessary in the officer to avoid being surprised. A frequent communication with the post at the Bluff⁴ is to be strictly attended to, and any intelligence of moment to be transmitted to me.

Notwithstanding my having named stations as above for the different vessels, you are to be guided by General Prevost, with respect to changing the same as circumstances may alter, and at all times concur with the General in using every endeavour to defeat the intentions of the Rebels.

You will assist the watering of the King's Ships, and prevent the vessels from making any delay in the river. It is expected the Officers will give punctual attendance to their duty, and you will cause them to make you a daily report, which you will transmit to me. I am [&c.]

Keith Papers 1: 104–5.

1. The vessels, which were listed in brackets in the margin, are: East Florida Provincial armed ship Germaine, East Florida Provincial galley Dreadnought, and East Florida Provincial galley Thunderer. Mowbray commanded Germaine.

2. By "latter," Elphinstone refers to Dreadnought, which lay near the bar at the entrance to St. Johns River. Sisters' Creek flowed into St. Johns River farther upstream.

3. It was possible via "inland navigation" to pass from St. Johns River to Nassau Inlet and then via the Amelia Narrows to St. Mary River. Hannah Mills Narrows was probably the middle part of the narrow and tortuous creek leading to Nassau Inlet from St. Johns River. The lower part of this passage was Sisters' Creek. Keith Papers 1: 105n.

4. Hester's Bluff was one of the crossing points of St. Johns River. Brig. Gen. Augustine Prevost had erected a small battery at it and at Cowford, another crossing point. Searcy, Georgia-Florida Contest, p. 138.

CAPTAIN GEORGE KEITH ELPHINSTONE, R.N., TO LIEUTENANT JOHN WRIGHT, R.N.

[off St. John River, East Florida the 16th July, 1778]

By the Honble. Geo. Keith Elphinstone, Captain of His Majesty's Ship the Perseus.

You are required to continue in His Majesty's Ship under your command¹ off this Bar until the return of the Perseus, using your endeavours to prevent any Rebel vessels from entering the river, as also to be attentive to Nassau Inlet; but in such event detach three careful officers and forty men for the defence of the Dreadnought and Thunderer galleys and repair on board the Germaine yourself for the direction of the whole.²

Send a boat once in 24 hours to the Bluff to communicate with the officer posted there,³ and the officer so sent is to bring the report of the vessels from the commander of the Germaine,⁴ as the Carpenter of the Perseus is ordered to inspect the above-mentioned galleys, you will furnish him with such assistance as may be required.⁵ You are to employ the Fortune schooner in watering the Otter with all speed.

BRIGADIER GENERAL AUGUSTINE PREVOST TO CAPTAIN GEORGE KEITH ELPHINSTONE, R.N.

Sir

Cowford [East Florida] 16th. July 1778

I have just now received a letter from my Brother, a copy of which I have the honor to inclose you—¹ I scarce doubted but the Rebels would go back whenever they should be info[r]med of the arrival of any of the Kings ships, as they would then despair of being able to force a passage for their naval force into this River,² and the pains that had been taken to spoil the Road by land added to its natural badness, had render'd it very near impassable—unluckily we have it now in our front. I really do not think we can effect any thing of consequence on their Rear either by sea or land as no doubt they will have taken care to send off all their incumbrances before them—but if you think you can do any thing in your element or on the Islands there is a hundred men now ready for you at the Bluff,³ and Capt. Wulff has orders to join you—or do any thing that the service may require—Another Company has orders to occupy the Bluff in case Wulff leaves it.

you will please observe what my Brother says with regard to provisions &c, as I must request your assistance in these articles for here we have no provisions to spare—⁴ I shall write you again tomorrow if any thing new occurs&&I have the honor to be {&c.}

1. The letter from Lt. Col. James Marcus Prevost, dated 16 July, conveyed reports from American deserters that the Continental troops had begun a retreat out of East Florida. Prevost, who commanded the British advance force, informed his brother that he planned to follow the retreating Americans with all his troops "fit for hard service, and endeavour to do them all the damage possible." He suggested that Captain William Wulff's command might be sent "to the entrance of the Narrows, and perhaps be able to surprise some of their Rear." Ibid. By the "Narrows," James Mark Prevost was referring to the "Amelia Narrows" between Amelia Island and the mainland. GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN

Head Quarters Haverstraw 17th July 1778

Dear Sir

I have the pleasure to inform you, of what you have probably heard before this time, that the Admiral Count D'Estaing has arrived upon the Coast, and now lays off Sandy Hook, with a fleet of twelve Ships of the Line and four Frigates belonging to the his most Christian Majesty. The design of this fleet is to co-operate with the American Armies, in the execution of any plans, which shall be deemed most advancive of our mutual interests, against the common enemy. No particular plan is yet adopted, but two seem to present themselves; either an attack upon New York, or Rhode Island. Should the first be found practicable, our forces are very well disposed for the purpose; but should the latter be deemed most eligible, some previous preparations must be made. That we may therefore be ready at all points, and for all events, I desire that you may immediately apply in the most urgent manner, in my name, to the State of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut to make up a Body of 5000 Men inclusive of what you already have—establish suitable Magazines of provision—and make a collection of Boats proper for a descent. I am empowered to call for the Militia for the purpose above mentioned, by a Resolve of Congress of the 11th instant.¹

You will not fail to make yourself fully master of the numbers and position of the Enemy by land, and of their Strength by Sea. Should nothing come of this Matter, it will answer this valuable [pur]pose, that the enemy will be distracted and deceived, and will probably be off their guard, in respect to the defence of New York, should that ultimately be our real design.

You should engage a number of Pilots well acquainted with the navigation of the Harbour of Newport and of the adjacent Coast, and have them ready to go on board upon signals which will be thrown out by the French Admiral, and of which you will be advised. That you may have the earliest intelligence of his arrival, you should establish a Chain of Expresses from some commanding View upon the Coast to your Quarters. I need not recommend perfect secrecy to you, so far as respects any assistance from the French Fleet. Let your preparations carry all the appearance of dependance upon your own strength only. Lest you may think the Number of 5000 Men too few for the enterprise, I will just hint to you, that there are french Troops on board the Fleet, and some will be detached from this Army, should there be occasion.

I have it not in my power to be more explicit with you at present. But should the expedition against Rhode Island be finally determined upon, you may depend upon having every previous and necessary information for your Government. I am [&c]

G^o. Washington

P.S. As I have heard from you but once or twice since your arrival at Rhode Island, I am much at a loss for the situation of matters in that quarter.² Be pleased therefore to inform me in your answer to this.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

Sir

[Camp at Haverstraw Bay, 17 July 1778]

I had the honor of receiving, the night of the 14th. instant, your very obliging and interesting letter of the 13th: dated off Sandy Hook, with a duplicate of another dated the 8th: at Sea.¹

The arrival of a Fleet, belonging to his Most Christian Majesty, on our coast, is an event that makes me truly happy, and permit me to observe, that the pleasure I feel upon the occasion is greatly increased, by the command being placed in a Gentleman of such distinguished talents, experience and reputation, as the Count D'Estaing. I am fully persuaded, that every possible exer<tion> will be made by you, to accomplish the important purposes of your destination, and you may have the firm reliance, that my most strenuous efforts shall accompa<ny> you in any measure, which may be found eligible.

I esteem myself highly honored by the desi<re> you express, with a frankness which must always be pleasing, of possessing a place in my Friendship; at the same time allow me to assure you, that I shall consider myself peculiarly happy if I can but improve the prepossessions, you are pleased to entertain in my favor, into a cordial and lasting Amity.

On the first notice of your arrival, and pre<vious> to the receipt of your letter, I wrote to you by Lieu<tenant> Colonel Laurens, one of my Aids de Camp, whom I charged to explain to you,² such further particulars, as were not contained in my letter, which might be necessary for your information; and to whom it was my wish you should confide your situation and views, so far as may be proper for my direction, in any measure of concert or co-operations, which may be thought advancive of the common cause.³

M. De Chouin,⁴ who arrived this day at my quarters, has given me a very full and Satisfactory explanation on this head, and in return, I have freely communicated to him my Ideas of every matter interesting to our mutual operations. These, I doubt not, he will convey to you with that perspicuity and intelligence, which he possesses in a manner that amply justifies the confidence you have reposed in him. You would have heard from me sooner in answer to your letter, but I have been waiting for M. Chouins arrival, to acquaint me with your circumstance and intentions, and, at the same time, have been employed in collecting information with respect to several particulars, the knowledge of which was essential to the formation of our plans.

The difficulty of doing justice by letter, to matters of such variety and importance as those, which now engage our deliberation, has induced me to send Lieut. Col^o Hamilton⁵ another of my Aids to you, in whom I place intire confidence. He will be able to make you perfectly acquainted with my sentiments, and to satisfy any inquiries you may think proper to propose; and I would wish you to consider the information he delivers as coming from myself.

Col^o Hamilton is accompanied by Lieu^t. Col^o Fleury, a Gentleman of your nation, who has distinguished himself by his zeal and gallantry in the present War with England.⁶ He has also with him four Captains of Vessels, whom, I hope you will find very useful, from their knowledge of the Coast and Harbours, and two persons who have acted a considerable time in the capacity of pilots, and in whose skill, expertness and fidelity, from the recommendations I have had, I believe you may place great dependence. I am still endeavouring to provide others of this description, who shall be dispatched to you, as fast as they can be found. With the most ardent desire for your Success, and with the greatest Respect and Esteem, I have the [&c.]

MAJOR ET MARÉCHAL DES LOGIS ANDRÉ-MICHEL-VICTOR, MARQUIS DE CHOIN TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D’ESTAING

Monsieur, [Camp at Haverstraw, N.Y., 17 July, 1778, or after] d’après la Conversation que j’ai eu avec le general, il m’a paru qu’il se tenait a trois projets differents¹

1^o. Si vous pourres entrer dans la Riviere affin d’Empecher que les Anglais n’Echapent en evacuant Newyorck en opposant les forces aux leurs.

les 2 autres qui traineroient, infiniment en longueur sont de Bloquer avec vous Newyorck, encore faut il pour y réussir que vous envoyassiez des batiment dans long island Sond et ils n'en Resteroit pas moins long Island et d'autres parties dont les Anglois pourroient tirer des secours.

3. C'est de vous porter sur le Rhode island—vous y trouveriez 5 ou 6 frégattes angloises et a peu pres 3 a 4000 hommes de troupes Angloises pour Seconder cette operation vous aurés les milices provinciales du Nord Commandées par le General Sullivain qui est a la providence² Ces Milices provinciales pourron Le porter a 4 milles hommes, pendant Ce temp le Général Washington occupera la position de Witte plains pour tenir en Échec les troupes qui sont a Newyork.

mais je crois qu'elles sont Mal vétuées, mal armées, et que l'armée est de 13 a 14 milles hommes au plus. et que les Anglois au Rapport du General Washington sont au Nombre de 13 mille hommes a Newyork Son projet avant votre Arrivée se Reduisoit à la deffensive, et vous seul deciderez les mouvemens de Cette armée qui démembrée de ses partisans les plus Zèle n'est pas d'une Bravoure assés decidée pour un siège, mais ils ont l'avantage de souffrir la tire et la soif pendant deux et trois Jours.—

[Translation]

Sir,

[Camp at Haverstraw, N.Y., 17 July, 1778, or after]

After the conversation I had with the general, it appears that he is considering three different projects.¹

1st. If you could enter the river in order to prevent the escape of the British from New York while opposing the forces to theirs.

The other two, which would entail a much longer time, are to blockade New York with your squadron, still, to succeed, this would require your sending ships into Long Island Sound, and they would not remain in it excepting Long Island and other parts from which the English could draw forces.

3d. It is for you to go to Rhode Island. You would find there 5 or 6 English frigates and nearly 3 to 4,000 men of English troops. To second this operation you would have the provincial militias of the North, commanded by General Sullivan, who is at Providence.² These provincial militias could mount to 4 thousand men, during this time General Washington would occupy the position of White Plains in order to hold in check the troops who are at New York.

But I believe that they are poorly clothed, poorly armed, and that the army is from 13 to 14 thousand men or more, and that the English, in the account of General Washington, are to the number of 13 thousand men at New York. His plan before your arrival was to move to the defensive, and you alone will decide the movement of this army which, stripped of its most zealous partisans, is not of a bravery decisive enough for a siege, but they have the advantage of suffering the fire and the thirst for two and three days.

L, FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 144, fol. 277. Undated and unsigned. Based on Washington's letter to Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing on 17 July, where Washington mentions discussing strategy with Choin, the editors have given this letter the date of 17 July, as well.

2. The Continental Congress had authorized Washington to raise militia "for carrying on his operations in concert with Count d'Estaing"; see Journal of the Continental Congress, 11 July, above. They would fall under the command of Maj. Gen. John Sullivan of the Continental Army during operations in Rhode Island.

VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

En Rade, En dehors de Sandy Hook le 17. Juillet 1778

Monsieur

La Barre de la Riviere de Shewrsbury, l'officier, les matelots, et les Batimens a Rames que j'y ai perdu dans les vagues¹ n'ont point Empêché Monsieur le Lieutenant Colonel Laurence de les Braver par deux fois, et de venir me Remettre luy même la lettre que vous m'aveés fait Lhonneur de m'ecrire le 14 de Ce mois²: le desir de Communiquer avec Vous, avait pu seul me faire hasarder de descendre moy même le premier, et avec quatre Grenadiers pour tout soutien, dans un Lieu dont le débarquement est aussi difficile qu'il m'était inconnu; il n'y existait pas une seule Embarcation. Le Sacrifice de plusieurs des miennes me paraît moins facheux, puisqu'il Est le Seul moyen que je puisse avoir de Communiquer avec Vous.

Je me suis moins occuppé de Scavoir le nombre des Vaisseaux de Guerre Anglais qui sont dans la Rade de sandy hook que des moyens d'y penetrer: J'y suppose leur quatorse Vaisseaux, une foule de frégates, et une multitude de transports. Cette superiorité de nombres et la Bonté de la Marine Anglaise, ne m'empêcheront pas d'attquer le lord Howe dans ce Retranchement, et sous ses Batteries, si La profondeur du fond ne s'y oppose point. Je n'ay que d'hier trois pilottes. ils ont Besoin de se Repeller leurs ideas: ils sondent actuellement. L'Esperance de Vous dire quelque Chose de positif sur cet article, ma engagé de prier vôtre Estimable, fort instruit, et très aimable Aide de Camp de passer une mauvaie nuit à Bord Du Languedoc.

[Contemporary Translation]

In the Rhode without Sandy Hook the 17th. July 1778

Sir,

The bar of the river Shrewsbury, the officer sailors and boats that I have lost in the waves,¹ have not hindered Colonel Laurens from braving them twice to come and deliver me himself the letter that you did me the honor to write me the 14th of this month.² The desire of communicating with you alone could have induced me to hazard a descent myself the first; and four grenadiers as my only support in a place, the debarkation of which is as difficult as it was unknown; and where there existed not a single spot proper for embarkation. The sacrifice of several of my men appeared to me less affecting, as it was the sole mean of communication I could have.

I have occupied myself less with delivering the number of English vessels of war in the Rhode of Sandy Hook than the means of entering it. I suppose there fourteen vessels of war, a throng of frigates and a multitude of transports—This superiority of number and the goodness of the English navy will not hinder me from attacking Lord Howe in his retrenchment and under his batteries, if the depth of the water do not forbid me. I only received three pilots yesterday; they have need of recollecting their ideas, and are at this time sounding the river. The hope of giving you something positive on this head engaged me to pray your estimable, well-informed and most amiable Aide De Camp, to pass a bad night on board the Languedoc.

He will give you an account, Sir, of the regret that I shall feel, if that powerful mark of friendship, which the King has given his allies, who are so dear to him, should not prove so great utility as he might promise himself.—I will not enter into any further detail in this letter. M^r. Laurens will tell you more than I can write. But it will be very important that the arrival of so great a naval succor should produce at the same time a general effort by land. If unfortunately that should be impossible you are too good a patriot and too great a soldier, not to feel the necessity, I shall be under of going to seek elsewhere an opportunity of injuring our common enemy. The places, that you shall point out to me, will appear to me preferable—whenever naval circumstances, and the state of my supplies will permit. Tis with the greatest pleasure, that I learn from M^r. Gerard the King's minister, that you are cloathed with the most ample powers, to treat with me on military operations. I cannot act, either far or near under the auspices of a greater master—You are a master; and you know that the instant one thing becomes necessary,³ we ought to attempt another.

I have received a printed list of the eleven English vessels of the line, which are announced to us, on very good part. This news published by order of the Congress acquires an authenticity which merits the highest attention.⁴

Accept my compliment upon your last victory.⁵ Even were not the success of America become our own, by the intimate bands which bind us together, it would be impossible as a soldier and as a man not to participate in it. It is natural to love to see one laurel more adorning the brow of a great man—I have the honor to be &c.

Friday 17. [July 1778.] This morning the wind reigned from the E to the ESE, rather weak. We were occupied with bringing on board water from our prize to replace in part what we lacked, when there appeared 6 vessels in the offing. The General immediately made a signal to the division of M. de Broves¹ and to us to get under sail to chase them. At 1 o’clock in the afternoon the *Fantasque*² fired 8 or 10 canon at them, which caused them to strike. Four of these vessels came from the Antilles and were laden with sugar, syrup, and rum.³ They were escorted by a privateer of 14 guns,⁴ which a few days earlier had taken a French snow laden for the Americans.⁵ At 3 o’clock we headed for the squadron. At 4 o’clock we anchored in 11 fathoms, bottom of sand, the wind at the E, a little brisk, but much sea.

1. Chef d'escadre Jean-Joseph Rafelis, comte de Broves, aboard French ship of the line César.
 2. French ship of the line Fantasque, Capitaine de vaisseau Pierre-André bailli de Suffren de Saint-Tropez.

3. Three of the four vessels from the Antilles were British, while the fourth was a captured French ship. The three British ships were: the Isabelle, built in America in 1772, owned by Houston & Co., Alexander Thomson (or Thompson), master, from Grenada bound to Cork, of 120 tons burthen, carrying coffee, rum, and other similar goods; the Phenix, master Robert Cunningham, carrying rum and sugar; and the Polly, master Ebenezer Peine, carrying rum, syrup, and other similar goods. The fourth vessel was the brigantine or sloop L'Heuouse Famille, carrying rum. Lloyd's Register of Ships, 1777-1778; "Liste des Prises faites sur les anglais Par l'Escadre du Roy..." Based on the arrangement of the French prize lists, it is likely that the fifth vessel was L'Etoile du Matin "Liste des Prises faites sur les anglais Par l'Escadre du Roy..." FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 151, fol. 132; and "Etat des prises faites par L'Escadre du Roy Commandée par M^r Le Comte D'Estaing," FrPNA, Marine B⁴, vol. 152, fol. 196.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Sir

Morris Town 17 July 1778

Heartily congratulating you upon the arrival of the French Fleet, & Monsieur Gerard; I have the pleasure to acquaint you that on my receipt of the Committees Letter of the 14th instant,¹ I immediately set off, tho' greatly indisposed, to engage Capt Dennis² a hearty & trusty Whig, & acquainted with all the best Pilots in these parts, to secure a competent Number for the purpose—He set off upon the Business before I left his house, so that I doubt not in less than 24 hours after, the fleet was supplied with the Complement. Least however more may be wanted than may be procured by him, I have sent a List to General Washington of all those at Peeks Kill, and about King's Ferry³. . . .

Resolved, That Mr. [John] Penn be appointed a member of the Marine Committee, for the State of North Carolina.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

His Excellency The Count D'Estaing

Sir

[Philadelphia] July 17th 1778

I had the honor of writing to your Excellency on the 12th instant about the means of procuring fresh water and the measures taken by the Marine Committee of Congress to furnish fresh provisions for the Squadron under your Excellencies Command. The Casks that could be obtained here since the late ravages of the enemy are delivered to the Chimere,¹ and the three Vessels with her—they will bring the Squadron a present supply of water and I am informed that in future this article can be obtained easily and near to Sandy Hook as I formerly wrote your Excellency. The Chimere brings likewise Bread flour, fresh meat, and vegetables for the fleet, which we hope may answer present purposes, until the larger quantity shall be carried thro the Jersey and taken on board the Squadron at such places as your Excellency shall appoint for the Commissary to deliver them at. I am desired by the Marine Committee to request your Excell^y will be pleased to accept from them a small present of live Stock and vegetables in testimony of the high respect the Committee entertain for your Excellencies character.

I must beg leave Once more to repeat the assurances already made, that the Marine Committee will at all times have pleasure in directing such further Provisions for the Squadron as you shall think proper to desire. I have the honor to be [&c.]

WILLIAM SMITH TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Dear Sir

Baltimore July 17th 1778

I am now to acknowledge receipt of the papers, you were kind enough to inclose, of the 9th Instant. for which I thank you.— This Acknowledgment should have been made sooner, but as I had nothing to communicate in return did not choose to interrupt you at this important period.—

My reason Sir, for troubling you at this time, is to thank the Hon^{ble} Congress, for my appointment to a seat at the Navy Board for this department.— I am highly sensible of the honor done me but my own private business, puts it out of my power to give any further attendance at that Board. now removed to Philadelphia.— I must therefore beg Congress will Accept my resignation of that office and appoint some other person to fill my place.—

Your favoring me with a line intimating my discharge from any further Attendance as a Commissioner of the Navy will greatly oblige.— As I have taken the Oath of office, I cant think myself at liberty to retire, without permission so to do.— I therefore flatter my self, this will be transmited as soon as convenient.¹— At the same time I shall gladly embrace every opportunity of rendering Congress, and the public any services in my power at this place. I am with the greatest respect [&c.]

GOVERNOR PATRICK TONYN OF EAST FLORIDA TO BRIGADIER GENERAL AUGUSTINE PREVOST

Sir

[St. Augustine, 17th. July 1778]

By a Vessel with Refugees arrived last night from Charlestown, I am informed of a Contagious Fever raging in the Rebel Army, that some Vessels of Force in that harbour intended to Blockade Augustine Bar, while the Gallies came into the harbour to Bombard and Cannonade the Town.

By confirmed accounts we learn that the Towns of Savannah and Sunbury are in a weak and defenceless state being almost evacuated by the Enemies Troops, and drained by their Expedition against this Province.— I have had the honour of conferring with Captain Elphinston¹ concerning the measures the Rebels seem inclined to pursue, and the best method to frustrate them.— He seems to agree with me in opinion, that if you thought proper to send an experienced Officer with Two hundred and fifty Men, he could with the Perseus, Otter,² and our Provincial Naval Armament render their designs against the Province abortive by cutting off the Rebel Gallies in S^t Mary's or by penetrating to Savannah or Sunbury.³

I leave this matter to your opinion and judgment not doubting that you will readily cooperate by every means in your power to their destruction and I am confident Captain Elphinston will use the utmost exertion in whatever is practicable.

The inclosed Talk from the Cowkeeper⁴ will inform you that the Seminoly Indians may be daily expected to join his Majesty's Forces on the West side of S^t Johns; they have been all provided with arms and very amply with Ammunition and may be employed to advantage.— The Commissaries in the Creek Nation are making great Efforts to send the Creeks to us in force & some of their Towns have set out sometime ago to make incursions into the Rebel Provinces.⁵ I have the honor to be &c

I did myself the honor of writing to you under Date of April 24;¹ Since which have not been honoured with any of your Dispatches The Appearance of War & other unfavorable Circumstances for the Sale of American Produce destined for the European Market has for a long time past caused a great Stagnation in Such Articles; Finding no Offer of an adequate Price for the Indigo that arrived by the *Mesopotamia*² I have Shipped it for Havre deGrace by the Brig L'Aimable Victor, which Sailed from hence in the Beginning of May, having previously gave Orders for a full Insurance on it—I shall be deprived of all Advantages of this Remittance, untill I hear of its Arrival & can draw for the Amount—

I refer you to the Letter I did myself the honor to write you under the Date of the 14 October 1777 for an Account of those Articles which will answer at this Market in Time of War or the Appearance of it—As this Island will be very Scantly Supplied from Europe with Flour, there is the greatest Reason to believe that it will be very Scarce & command a great Price—

I shall Ship the Musquets mentioned in my former Letters by the first fast Sailing Vessels that will receive them on Freight—

A few Armed Vessels on this station would be of considerable service to the Trade & would in all probability make Some valuable Captures & lodge considerable Funds here—I have the honor to be [&c.]

NOTICE OF THE CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT

Navy-Board, Eastern Department.

Boston, July 18, 1778.

ALL Officers and Seamen, belonging to any Continental Ship or Vessel of War, within the Eastern Department, now absent on the recruiting Service, or otherwise, are hereby required immediately to repair on board their several Ships; and all Seamen now in America, who regard the Liberty of Mankind, or the Honor of the United States of America, as well as their own Advantage, are now earnestly intreated to enter immediately on board some of the Continental Vessels, in order to afford all possible Aid and Assistance to His Most Christian Majesty's Fleet, under the Command of the Count de Estaing, Vice-Admiral of France, now in the American Seas, for the Purpose of assisting these American States in vanquishing a haughty and cruel Enemy, too long triumphant on these Seas.—Now is the Time to secure to yourselves Safety in your future Voyages, and to avoid the Cruelties which all those experience who have the Misfortune to be captured by the Britons; and now is the Time to make your Fortunes.

J. WARREN, in Behalf of the Board.

N.B. Those Officers on the recruiting Service are permitted to continue on their several Posts three Days after receiving this, if necessary to promote the Service, and compleat their Business.

JAMES WARREN TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL

To the Hon^{ble}. Council of the State of Massachusetts bay—

The Memorial of James Warren in behalf of the Navy Board Eastern department—

Sheweth

That the public Service of America at this time requires the Aid & Assistance of their Naval Force—That the Continental Vessells of war under the direction of the Navy Board for the Eastern department, are in want of men, to render them Capable of Acting Agreeable to the desire and orders of the Hon^{ble} Congress, that there are a Number of good Seamen on board the Guard Ship of this State, who this board are informed are ready and willing to Enter into the American Navy if permitted by your Honours,—

Your Memorialist therefore prays your Honours to pass an order to the Commissary of Prisoners,¹ to permit such of the Prisoners on board said Ship as Incline, to Inlist in any of the Continental Vessells of war to Sign their Articles, and go on board the Ship or Vessell they shall Choose without any delay²

I am so fully convinced of the advantages that will result from having all our Frigates, Privateers, and armed Vessels of every kind cruising off the East end of Long Island, that I have taken the liberty of mentioning it again to you, and have wrote to the same effect to the States of Rhode Island and Massachusetts.³ The British Fleet awed by the French, will be obliged to keep together, which will afford the noblest opportunity to our Cruisers to pick up whatever is inward bound__ I have the Honor to be [Œc.]

Number 69.

Eagle at Sandy Hook [N.J.]

Sir,

July the 18th: 1778.

Deeming the safe Passage of the Grantham Packet¹ with the Originals of the Dispatches herewith enclosed, to be very doubtful in the present Circumstances of the War, I have judged it expedient to prepare a small fast-sailing Vessel² for the more secure Conveyance of these last to Halifax. The Senior Commander of the Ships at that Port³ is directed to send them off immediately in One of the Frigates under his Orders, for England.

I have only to add, that the Enemy continue in the same Situation. The Position they have taken has enabled them to intercept about Nine or Ten, mostly small Trading Vessels bound to this Port; Together with the York Armed Sloop,⁴ and one of the Bomb-Tenders of the Squadron⁵ which by some unaccountable Mismanagement was run without the Hook in the Night of the 11th, and being too far distant to receive any timely Assistance, fell into the Enemy's Hands the next Morning.

Supposing that Vice Admiral Byron must have been some Time since arrived at Halifax, He is meant to be apprized by this Opportunity, of my Intentions that he should repair directly with the Squadron under his Command, for this port. I am, with great consideration, Sir, [&c.]

I understand that the Packet which sailed from England in May,⁶ has been taken by an Armed Brig mounting fourteen Guns, and carried into New London.

John Smith Ship wright born in providence was taken on board of a Sloop where he was Second in command december last was a twelve month—was carried into new york by the galatea of 23 Guns captain Jordan² command^t—made his escape on friday last nine o clock at night—and says that the enemy have 7 Ships of the line 6 frigates 2 bombs catches & one fire Ship—2 of the seven are 74·1·or 2 Sixty and the others he thinks fifty³—that the english fleet lays below the narrows—that besides that number there are three frigates unfit for present duty—that he heard the lieutenents of the galatea tell his Cap^t that he had taken nine pilots, and a lieutenant of one of the french Ships going to the french fleet—that a packet boat and two Ships had attempted a passage by the east river but were obliged to retire he does not Know whether they were prevented by a french or american Ship—that both the fleet and army are in the greatest confusion—that there is a hott press every night—that they are in a great want of sailors—that they Serve rice instead of Bread on board of their Ships and that at 2 ³/_{ds} allowance—that he heard officer saying that they had no provisions for more than a month that there is a good deal of grumbling on Board of the fleet—that the half part of the Sailors are bad and that they have Stripped the merchant men having but two men to each Ship—that one of the 74 is in a very bad order and that she had not above 100 hands on Board—that no Ships has been sent out of new york Since the arrival of the french fleet but one Schooner bound for hallifax for more Ships, this report hover is conf^{td} by a Sentry who Says that three Schooners are gone out—that they expect every day provisions on the fleet, and are very uneasy about it—that they have lost, one frigate taken—the Ship [illeg.] sunk—and the roebuck tho' run a Shore has Since got off—that the harbour is full of marchants Ships—that they are erecting batteries on Staten island opposite the narrows and on Sandy hook he does not Know how many troops at these points—they are taking the guns from their works in new york Long island to carry them to the works [at] the hook fort washington and Kings bridge—that they have just begun their new works which he thinks are not far advanced—that there are no Batterys yet erected on that part of long island opposite the narrows, his private opinion is that the Ship's will [blank] in again as soon as they are attaked—the common talk among the Sailors is that the[y] expect to be attacked by the french fleet, that as he was employed in working during the day time at new York—he had the opportunity of hearing the officers of the land forces Saying that they expected to be attacked every day by general washington while the french fleet would attack them at the Same time—being asked if he had heard any body Speaking of the impossibility of any of ours Ships getting up he answered that he had not heard a Single word about it—tho he remembers to have heard the pilot who brog^t the galatea up about 15. months ago Saying that he [would not] answer of bringing any Ship of the line into the harbour—he Says that they curse the french adm^l very much—on many accounts and principally his hoisting continent colours—he has not heard any thing to countance what he is going to Say but he belives that if they were attacked as they apprehend they would not make a long defence—that the[y] did expect two Ships of the line from rhode island and who had been ordered before the french fleet was arrived—he does not belives they have Sent contrary orders to them, or does he belives they can come through hells gate. being asked if he had heard of admiral Keppel or admiral byron, he answers not, but that he heard that on the Supposition of the counte destaing fleet being destined for west Jamaica⁴—a fleet had been Sent from england to that island which is expected to fall upon the rear of the french fleet in Coming from the west indias

1. The report is undated and its author not given. Using internal evidence such as the day of Smith's escape and the dates of the arrival and departure of Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing's fleet from the waters off New York, the editors have deduced that the report must have been written between 18 and 21 July 1778.

3. For the composition of the British fleet under Vice Adm. Viscount Howe, see List of Vice Adm. Viscount Howe's Fleet and Order of Sailing and Battle Formation of Viscount Howe's Fleet, both 6 Aug., below.

4. Adm. the Honorable Augustus Keppel commanded the British fleet in the English Channel; there were no plans for him to sail to the Americas. Vice Adm. John Byron indeed led a force of British ships to North America to pursue the French Toulon squadron under the command of Vice-amiral Charles-Henri-Théodat, comte d'Estaing. Both d'Estaing and Byron anticipated operations along the North American coast before heading to the West Indies.

Black point [N.J.] 18th July 1778.

Admiral Count d'Estaing to whom I had the honor of bearing dispatches from His Excellency Gen^l Washington—finding that he cannot detain his prisoners on board the fleet without considerable expence of provision and much inconvenience in other respects—has taken the resolution to land them, in confidence that Congress will order them to be provided for, at the expence of His most Christian Majesty—

In pursuance therefore of general directions given me by the Commander in chief to give every possible assistance to the Admiral, I have ordered Lieuten^t de Clos^l with a party of Continental Troops to escort such prisoners as the Admiral may choose to have landed—from hence to Philadelphia_ and deliver them there into the custody of the Town Major, until farther arrangements shall be made respecting them by Congress or Minister of France—²

The Count d'Estaing desires me to mention to you farther, as he has not prepared his dispatches for Congress—that there is the most urgent necessity for his being instantly joined by the Frigate la Chimere—³I have the honor [&c.]

LIEUTENANT COLONEL JOHN LAURENS TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

I have barely had time paper and ink to write my dear father a hurried official letter—upon my arrival here with dispatches from the General^l to Admiral d'Estaing—I found that the Fleet laboured under the greatest difficulty in procuring water—its distance from the shore was too great to roll the Casks down to the place of embarkation—the disaffected inhabitants either refused their waggons or granted them only at an exhorbitant price—I have done every thing in my power to remedy this evil—but as we cannot have too many resources—I would propose that any fast sailing small craft in the delaware may be immediately employed in bringing water round—the southerly winds which prevail on the coast at this season will give them a quick voyage—and they will be in time if they arrive with la Chimere—²

It would give me pleasure to speak to you particularly of the great qualities of the Admiral—he has inspired me in the short acquaintance I have had with him, with uncommon respect—he laments the insipid part he is playing—keeping the English fleet blocked up within sandy hook and taking prizes within their view every day, does not satisfy a man of his great ideas—When six prizes were brought into him yesterday—he desired the Major of the Fleet to give some directions about those Drugs—and sighed at not being engaged in a way in which more honor was to be acquired—two of the prizes that have been taken since my being here are armed one with 14 and the Other with 10 Guns—³ One had a quantity of specie on board, the profits of prizes taken from us—The fleet, men and officers appear to be in fine health—and eager to distinguish themselves in a naval Combat—As much as it is against my desire I must break off—an express rider must be diligent—My dearest friend and father I pray God to protect you

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN THIS CITY, FROM HIS FRIEND IN ELIZABETH-TOWN, DATED JULY 18, 1778.

"If the French fleet should preserve its present station, a famine must, I think (and very soon) ensue in the enemy's army, as all their supplies must be cut off. Nothing but rice, instead of bread or flour, has been dealt out to the soldiery since their arrival in New-York. A loaf of bread that used to cost 4d. now sells in the city for a dollar. In short, it appears to me, not at all impossible, that if they should be thus kept hem'd in on the sea and land side, they will be reduced to the necessity of surrendering the city in less than a month, without any enterprize of General Washington against them."

1. On 18 July the Pennsylvania Packet and the General Advertiser reported: "Last Thursday [16 July] was brought into this port, the prize schooner Lord Drummond, from Antigua, laden with rum, sugar, and limes . . . [it] mounts a number of wooden and some iron guns, and was taken near the Capes of Delaware, by Captain Rice, in an armed vessel belonging to this port." Noting that "The arrival of the above cargo has considerably lowered the price of West India produce," the report goes on to speculate that with the "late generous offers made by our magnanimous ally the King of France . . . to American vessels of war, there is good reason to believe that European and West-India goods of all kinds will soon be reduced to their old prices. (A hint to monopolizers.)" Captain Rice was undoubtedly John Rice, a former Pennsylvania Navy officer then commanding the Pennsylvania privateer schooner St. John. . . . I have the satisfaction to assure Your Excellency that from the first moment we were apprized of the arrival of Count d'Estaings squadron on this coast, Congress have vigorously pursued every measure for facilitating and effectuating the Vice Admirals operations against the Enemy. We were not unmindful of the great utility of Advice Boats—but alas! such are not be built in so short a time as we can write the name, and you will know Sir the Enemy while they had possession of this river stretched an unsparing firebrand over all our navigation which they could reach and could not carry off, consequently they have left us very little and none of the sorts which you allude to.¹ I have great hopes that Count d'Estaing will find means for supplying himself with necessary Vessels for contingent services upon the Coast and within the Harbour of New York, in the mean time, Congress will in every respect contribute to his success and the mutual honor and benefit of the Alliance. . . .

PRESIDENT RAWLINS LOWNDES OF SOUTH CAROLINA TO AMERICAN COMMISSIONERS IN FRANCE

Sirs-

[Cha^s. Town S^o. Carolina- July 18th. 1778—]

The State of South Carolina having Resolved to procure three Ships of War in foreign parts for the Protection of their Coast and Trade, Have intrusted that Service to their Commodore, Alex^r. Gillon Esq^r a Zealous and approved Friend to the American States, who embarks for France with some other Officers to manage that Business.¹

The Legislature have appropriated to this Use the Sum of £500,000. Currency; And Goods and Effects purchased here to that Amount have been partly exported, and the remainder will soon be exported to France: But it is feared that the danger of Capture, the heavy Charge on Shipping, and the loss on the Sale of our produce, will reduce the Net proceeds in France considerably below the sum wanted: To Guard against the disappointment that would be Occasioned by these Contingencies, M^r Gillon is furnished with the proper Credentials to enable him on the Faith and Credit of the Country to Negotiate a Loan in Europe sufficient to make up any deficiency that may happen in the Sum granted that he may as soon as possible carry into Effect the intention of the State in procuring the said Armament.

I am therefore in behalf of the State of South Carolina, to request the favour of your Assistance and Countenance to M^r. Gillon, to give weight and Success to his Application in a measure so interesting, and of such publick Utility to the United States in general, and to this in particular,— for which purpose I take the Liberty of Introducing him to your Patronage and protection; And am with the greatest Respect and Regard [&c.]

Gentlemen

By order of the Honourable Joseph Trumbull Esq^r Agent for the State of Connecticut, we take the liberty of addressing this letter to you, by the ship of war oliver Cromwell,¹ Commanded by Timothy Parker Esquire; and of inclosing you bill of Lading for 33 Casks of Indigo marked SC N^o 1a33 for account & risque of that State and one for 3 Casks marked IT N^o 1a3 for account & risque of Said M^r Trumbull—Both which parcels you will receive and dispose of to the best advantage, And follow such directions respecting the returns, as will be given you by M^r Trumbull whose letters will be delivered you along with this by Captain Parker. We also inclose you the weights of both parcels at the time they were bought and hope as they were very dry that there will be little if any deficiency on arrival.

Indigo is at present very high in this place but expected to fall in a few months—We subjoin the prices current of that & of Carolina produce in general. An embargo which has been lately laid on provisions has lowered their price and Advanced such articles as are allowed to be exported.

European & East India goods are still very scarce & dear Among us, and an assortment well Laid in at your place could not fail of yielding great profits—Should you or your friends chuse to Send any this way, we beg leave to tender you our Services, with an assurance, that every effort in our power shall be exerted to give Satisfaction and the strictest attention paid to your orders & directions—Our long experience in business enables us to transact any matters we may be entrusted with on as punctual & good A footing as any in this place—We have the honour to be [&c.]

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO CAPTAIN JOHN BRISBANE, R.N.

[Sandy Hook, N.J., 19 July 1778]

Copy of a Paragraph of a letter Rec^d. from the Viscount Howe, Dated off Sandy Hook July 19th. 1778.

As there is not a sufficient Naval Force for the defence of Rhode Island,¹ and none can be sent while the French Squadron without Sandy Hook continues so much Superior to that und^r: my Command: It may not be Unseasonable to remind you, that you are at liberty to apply the Force under your direction by landing of Guns & Men for the Service of the Batteries, Dismantling and even destroying the Ships to strengthen the defence of the Post in the most effectual manner in case of an Attack upon the Post, more especially when no longer in prospect of Rendering better assistance under the same circumstances, or preventing the Capture of the Ships.²

Copy, UKLPR, Adm. 1/5310, fol. 176. The original of Vice Adm. Viscount Howe to Capt. John Brisbane, R.N., 19 July 1778, cannot be found. This extract from the letter was sent by Capt. John Brisbane to Comdr. Hugh Cloberry Christian on 26 July and on 28 Sept. read at Christian's court-martial for the loss of H.M. Sloop Kingsfisher. Ibid., fols. 173–77. The addressee is conjectured but certainly must have been the senior officer commanding the British squadron at Newport, Capt. John Brisbane. Below this paragraph Brisbane added: "Every Commander is therefore directed to attend to the foregoing Paragraph and Act from Circumstances in the best & most effectual manner possible for the defence of the Post, and Ships under His Command, so as to answer the Intentions of His Lordship." JACOBUS VAN ZANDT TO GOVERNOR GEORGE CLINTON OF NEW YORK

His Excellency George Clinton Esqr. Sir, His Excellency William Livingston by Order of Congress was Pleased to Desire me and Capt'n Patrick Dennis to Collect as many Branch Pilots¹ as Could be had in this State for the use of His Excellency Count D'Estaing's Fleet now Laying within 4 Miles of Sandy Hook. I have the Pleasure to Inform your Excellency, that we have Collected Eight and Delivered them to the Count in Persons, four of which are the first Branch Pilots we had at New York before these Troubles, the other four are Men Capable of Carrying any Ship which draws less water than those under the Command of the Count. However they are Sufficiently acquainted to Follow the largest Ships in the Channel. I have Prevailed on Capt. Patt: Dennis to Remain on Board in Order to Encourage the Pilots there on board who is also well acquainted with the Channel.

As it was hinted to me by the Count, as well as the rest of the Commanders to have Several Coasting Pilots Sent on Board, I beg Your Excellency will forward Major Will'm Dobbs Down to Black Point,² or any other Coasting or Channel Pilots you may have in our State, Dobbs I well know is a Proper Coasting and Channel Pilot; they Signify also, to have at least one Pilot for Each Ship for the Channel if they are to be had. From appearance I find the Count will get a Long side the English fleet if He Can, which lay last Fryday Morning in line of Battle, from Sandy Hook up the Channel. They appeared when on Board the admirall's Ship to be about 30 in number, most of them from 14 to 36 Guns. I believe they may have five or Six Battle Ships with them. I hope you'll Excuse this Incorrect account, as I am much Fateagued and almost Burnt up with hot Sand, in going through a Villanous Tory Country. We had lik'd to have lost all our Lives, Pilots Included, on Board of a French open Boat, going over the Barr at Shrewsbury Inlett,³ as the Boat Struck on the Barr and Fill'd half full of water. One Sea more whould have finish'd about 30 in Number half of which was Englishmen. I have the Honor to be Your Excellency's Most Obed't Humb'e Serv't

Jacobus Van Zandt.

His Excell'y, George Clinton, Esq^r

Clinton Papers 3: 560–61. The letter is undated and no place given; however, the contents and other correspondence of this time suggest that it was probably written between 16 and 19 July 1778. The first date is when Gov. William Livingston said that the pilots he had contacted could, at the earliest, go on board the French fleet. The last date is the day before d'Estaing decided to abandon his attempt to enter New York harbor.

1. A branch pilot had a branch or commission for special navigation.
2. Black Point is in present-day Rumson, New Jersey.
3. The Shrewsbury River, where the French fleet watered, emptied into the southern extremity of Sandy Hook Bay.

Philadelphia 19th July 1778

Hon^{ble} Sir

In the recess of Congress, I am called upon by His Excellency Le S^r Girard, Minister Plenipotentiary from His most Christian Majesty to the United States of America, in order to obtain from Connecticut such Aids as His Excellency Count D' Estaing Vice Admiral of France, Commander of a Squadron of Ships of War of His most Christian Majesty, may stand in need of admitting Count D' Estaing shall proceed from Sandy Hook to Rhode Island.

I have, therefore taken the liberty in the name of Congress to address your Honor requesting you to afford all assistance in your power to Count D' Estaing, upon His Excellency's requisition, for the General Service of the French Fleet, and for facilitating the Vice Admirals intended operations, particularly that a sufficient number of skilful Pilots may be held in constant readiness for conducting the Fleet, if necessary into New London.¹

From a reflexion that His Excellency General Washington has undoubtedly written to you on this subject² as well from a certain persuasion that Your Honor will upon every occasion chearfully contribute to promote the service of His Most Christian Majesty our good Ally, in which the safety and welfare of these States are interwoven I have intimated to Mons^r Girard³ that the present application will scarcely be necessary. Be this as it may, it is with great pleasure I embrace the opportunity of assuring Your Honor of the continued good wishes Esteem & Respect with which I have the Honor to be [&c.]

3. Wulff's recall orders came from Brig. Gen. Augustine Prevost, who informed Elphinstone that he had issued them in a letter of 19 July. On being informed—incorrectly—that Elphinstone was contemplating offensive operations that would require Wolff's detachment, Prevost cancelled the orders. UkGrNMM,

CAPTAIN GEORGE KEITH ELPHINSTONE, R.N., TO BRIGADIER GENERAL
 AUGUSTINE PREVOST, BRITISH ARMY*Perseus* off St. John River, East Florida.

19th July, 1778.

Sir,—I have the honor to acquaint you that my mortification was excessive at finding my prize sloop had for want of proper orders been permitted to leave Augustine without the provisions we expected;¹ to remedy that neglect I instantly sailed to Saint Augustine, where I arrived at two o'clock the day after I had the honor of conferring with you, being the 16th, and that very evening dispatched the Nancy pilot boat, and loaded Clark's schooner² with your wants, but the wind setting in fresh at N.E. he could not proceed, and the day following according to the practice of the port the pilot boat returned, told me he had met bad weather and was obliged to throw part of the provisions overboard. In consequence of my advice Mr. Charnier has ordered the brig with the whole supply of provisions off this bar,³ where she now lies for your orders either to proceed into the river or return to Augustine, as you judge most requisite.

The instant the wind permitted I returned to this bar, where I am honored with your letter,⁴ as also a copy of one from His Excellency⁵ and from Colonel Prevost bearing the date the 16th,⁶ with respect to the first, I join with you in apprehending we are too late for the attempt of either of the places with so small a force, as doubtless their

Army (or banditti) will stop at these places for some time. It is generally dishonorable to fail in an attempt; however, if you are inclined or furnished with intelligence to encourage the former plans, I am most ready to dedicate my best endeavours with the force I have, of this you will be convinced when Colonel Prevost delivers the pilot's information, which I transmitted to Colonel Fuser;⁷ it respects the ports of Georgia. I must farther add that in my opinion it became proper to examine the Dreadnought and Thunderer galleys. My Carpenter who is a most capable man is on that service, he reports they are not without their faults, but the Dreadnought may be soon fit for service; the Thunderer will require more time and none shall be lost.

A letter from Captain Shaw, your Aid-de-camp,⁸ of the 18th I confess I am at a loss to understand, as I am confident it was never meant that the Troops should advance by the way of these creeks and narrows without my support, and according to my calculation it would require 30 tides to reach Sunbury by the inland navigation; this delay is owing to the tides dividing at every narrows, or in the middle of every creek. In short, I hope no officer under my orders hath taken upon him to give any opinion in my name, especially as it appears most essentially different from any conversation between us.

Last night on the passage here I spoke a French snow prize to a privateer, who mentioned his having met a tender belonging to the Roebuck,⁹ from whom he learnt that eleven Sail of the Line belonging to France had arrived in Virginia,¹⁰ that the said privateer had left York 10 days, five days 'ere he came away news of an affair between the Grenadiers, Light Infantry and Simcoe's Corps, with the whole Rebel Army was current, the Rebels were driven back three miles, a General killed and Lee mortally wounded; on our side Colonel Moniton killed and 90 men.¹¹ My informant did not seem to know much; Lord Howe with all the large ships was at Sandy Hook, a large fleet with troops from England expected.¹² The French prisoners deny any war, and are only out two months.

Perhaps I may have the honor of being with you as soon as this, but at all events I am with true esteem, [&c.]

Navy Board Eastern departm^t
Boston July 20. 1778

Dear Sir

I received yours of the 16th. and 18th Yesterday morning¹ by which I learn the *Columbus's*² Guns are Improved by General Sullivan.³ these we depended on for the Alliances quarter deck and Forecastle. I am not Certain of being able to procure others but if they are wanted at Providence will Try. I perceive the Result of your Conference is to procure one Vessell. I hope you will be able to get a suitable one with regard to Officers. I think no new Officers should be appointed while we have so many out of Actual Service. Lieutenants Appear to me quite Sufficient. M^r Deville⁴ is somewhere near Providence if not there and I can send you one or two more if wanted. M^r Knees⁵ has been here but has exhibited no Accounts tho' I spoke to him on the Subject of those Stores. I will consider the Accounts you inclosed as soon as I have leisure. I am Extreemly Crouded and hurryed and want some help very much. I have just dispatched a Vessell to Newbury with all the Stores necessary to bring up the New Ship.⁶ she is to come out the first Wind after Monday. the *Warren*⁷ sails to day to carry her to the Entrance of this harbour and then to proceed to Join the French Squadron at New York as are the other Ships to do as soon as they can be got ready. I have purchased another Packett for France. she will sail in two or three days. You may easily conceive my hands are full. Cap^t Deshon⁸ promised to return if you did not but I don't find he will soon. M^r Langdon⁹ is to be here to morrow with all his accounts but I can do Nothing with them in this State of things.

with regard to Provisions all the Ships here are furnished with Fresh Beef at 1/4 or 1/6 per lb which is the lowest rate it can be procured at and that dear as it is we Esteem Cheaper than Salt and necessary if it was not.

We are at present wholly destitute of money, have Stop'd the payment of Bills for some time and have had no other resource for Sometime but to Cap^t Bradfords¹⁰ assistance to Enable us to pay the Bounty to Seamen.

The patterns for the Guns and everything relating to them has been under the direction of M^r Brown¹¹ who has been here Sometime. if anything is deficient he must take it to himself. all possible Expedition must be used in Casting and forwarding them down. you will direct the proof of them which was to be Sufficiently done and I think with a double Charge of powder well ram'd and two Balls. please to Inform Cap^t Deshon of my Situation and urge his return. if you have any Letters for your son¹² that you would wish to go in the Packett you must forward them without delay. perhaps it will be best to say nothing of the Warrens Intention to join the French Squadron. By the Tryon Armed Brig¹ we have an Acco^t of the Arrival of the French Fleet at Sandy Hook. Every Precaution shall be taken to prevent their distressing this Post should they think of making us a visit before the Arrival of Admiral Byron² on the Coast. The Hope Sloop of War³ arrived here yesterday from Halifax with a Convoy, part of which have fallen into the Rebels hands, Two Sloops with Coals for this Garrison are taken.⁴ The Hope left Halifax five weeks ago; by a Letter from Cap^t Fitzherbert⁵ dated 11th. June, we learn, that some weeks before, a Ship from London arrived there with several large Packets for Admiral Byron. General Massey⁶ was fortifying the entrance of the Harbour. . . .

[Newport] R. ISLAND

[1778]

20th July. Thick heavy weather. Some rain. Very warm. Wind W.

The 38th Reg^t marched from Newport this morning, and encamped on Windmill hill, a short distance from the right of the 22^d;¹ and fronting Howland's ferry.

The two Battalions of Anspach² embarked at 9 o'Clock in flat boats, and encamped on that part of Connonicut called Beaver's tail.

I think this is a most dangerous position. The reason for placing them there is to possess the Island, and cover the Batteries at Fox-hill, (which fires on the Narragansett passage) and the Dumplings; (which fires on the entrance of the harbour). But if the French fleet appears, and succeeds in their attempt to come into the harbour, (which the battery on the Dumplings cannot prevent), we shall inevitably lose those two Battalions; as the withdrawing them from Connonicut, after the Enemy has forced an entrance, will be impracticable. We should not therefore risk the loss of so material a part of our force. It would be much preferable to sacrifice a small detachment, sufficient for working the Guns and the defence of the Batteries.

Coll: O'Hara¹ acquainted me with your Sentiments respecting the Re-inforcement of the Post at the Hook, and the purpose of sending off another Packet. I do not presume to form an opinion of the Force requisite, or the mode of applying it to the best defence of the Post. I have only meant to urge the importance of retaining it. And for any thing that yet appears I should conceive the numbers destined, to be fully competent to the purpose.²

I proposed sending the Advice-Boat with your Dispatches which I received this morning, as it promises to prove a more certain conveyance than in a Packet sent off from this Port. But I do not mean to recommend any changes in your first intention for sending off either of the Packets, when you think fit.

These Dispatches getting safe, it becomes of less consequence, tho' an accident should happen to the Packet with the Duplicates.

In case the French Admiral, laying aside all Idea of attempting to force his way into this Port, goes off to some place where he may be able to get the Supplies likely to be wanted for his Ships, it may then be expedient to send a Frigate to England, to apprise Government of your future prospects & expectations. And previous to that appointment, it may be requisite that we should meet if possible.

Lieut^t Coll: Morris³ is busy in collecting intelligence of the position of the French Guard upon their Watering Parties. He means, I find, to be more particular in his Inquiries; as from the matter he has already collected, it seems practicable to make a successful attempt upon their Post. I have the honor to be with the greatest regard D^r Sir [&c.]

The 20th. The General had the commanders assemble, expecting that the pilots did not want to lead the squadron in, he had even sent M. de Ribieess [?]¹, an English-speaking lieutenant, to sound the pass, and his reports were that there was only from 20 to 22 feet of water in the pass. He offered, the council assembled, fifty thousand ecus to the pilot if he would undertake to take the squadron in. He refused. The General decided, on the advice of the council, to sail from this road and concert with General Washington to go attack Newport. Monday 20. [July 1778.] At 10. o'clock in the morning the General had us signaled to weigh anchor in order to go to sea to investigate the source of several cannon shots that were heard. We set our head to the SE¼E, the wind to the NNE. At noon the lighthouse bore to the NW. At 1:30 o'clock we joined a royal schooner, the Dauphin, commanded by M. Christh, Lieutenant of ship of the line,¹ who told us that the cannon shots we had heard came from 3 American privateers that had chased him and had relieved him of two prizes, one French and the other American. Capt. Lereque Beaumars, who commanded the French ship was on board this schooner. The ship that he had lost was a brig laden with tobacco from Virginia and had departed for France when it was encountered by the Dauphin, which stopped it as an interloper. At 4 o'clock we headed for the squadron; the calm delayed our arrival.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL ALEXANDER HAMILTON TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Sir

[Black Point, N.J. July 20th 1778]

Inclosed I transmit your Excellency a letter from the Count Destain.¹ He has had the River² sounded and finds he cannot enter. He will sail for Rhode Island tomorrow evening; in the mean time he is making demonstrations to deceive the enemy and begot an opinion, that he intends to operate in this quarter. He would sail immediately but he waits the arrival, or to hear, of a frigate which carried Mr Gerard to Delaware, and which he appointed to meet him at Sandy Hook, so that he fears, his sudden and unexpected departure, before she arrives might cause her to be lost.³ He will not however wait longer than 'till tomorrow evening. We have agreed, that five cannon fired briskly shall be a signal of his arrival by day, and the same numbers with five sky rockets a signal by night. In communicating this to General Sullivan,⁴ the Count wishes not a moment may be lost—and that he may be directed to have persons stationed on the Coast and intermediate expresses to facilitate the Communication between them. Pilots will be a material article. He begs every thing may be forwarded as much as possible; and as many troops collected as may be. He would be glad a detachment could march from your army, or could be sent by water, for which purpose he would send covering ships, and some vessels he has taken, by way of transports; but he cannot think of losing any so much time as seems necessary. If the water scheme could shorten it, it would be a happy circumstance.

He recommends it to your attention, and that you would take measures if the end can be better answered in this[;] and meet him with information of the part he may have to act to execute the plan. I perceive he can with difficulty debark 4000 troops but he will try to do it. I am Sir [&c.]

I hope your Excellency will excuse my not being myself the bearer of those particulars the end may be answered by letter. M^r Neville⁵ is anxious to get on—I just have heard of dispatches arrived from you; I don't know but they may contain something new which may make the Count to wish a good conveyance, to return an answer. My stay till tomorrow morning may answer that end—I shall not delay coming forward.

My dear sir

Philad^a. [Pa.] July 20 1778

. . . I have not yet answerd your Letter of the 26th of June.¹ I declind it until I could assure you that the Sum you wishd for, for the Use of your Department, was granted.² I now have the Pleasure of acquainting you, that it is done and the Money will be orderd on as soon as it arrives here from York Town, which is every hour expected.³ I am in Pain about the Ship in your Harbour.⁴ Her Owners neglect to put her into Repair, and I fear, some of her officers for Want of Skill and Experience will be at a Loss what to do with her if she should meet with a Storm. What a Pity it is an honest old Pilot, who used to steer successfully through Rocks and Quicksands has lately been dischargd from Service!⁵ And that he should suffer this hard Usage, only because unknown to him, One who was a hearty well wisher to the Voyage, and was anxious that Capacity and Merit should always govern Promotions, had ventured to declare him the fittest Man to take the Command, when it was thought a Commander would be wanted.—Vanity and Avarice, which create an insatiable Desire of Places and Preferment, without Ability or Intention to fulfill the Duties of them, if gratified, would effect the Ruin of a Country. It would be the Glory of the American Republick, to find Men having no ruling Passion but the Love of our Country, and ready to render her the most arduous Services, with the Hope of no other Reward in this Life, but the Esteem of their Virtuous Fellow Citizens. But this, some tell us, is to wish for more than it is in the Power of human Nature to give. . . . Adieu My Friend

Extract of a letter from M^r Holker received yesterday 16th November, and written on the 20th July at Philadelphia.

The naval army under the command of the Count D'Estaing¹ is in the best condition. Congress had sent them supplies of fresh provisions.² Messrs. Gerard and Holker were taking the necessary steps to procure biscuit and flour for that fleet for the month of September;³ they were awaiting the vessels laden with salt in order to exchange any surplus they might have for other provisions also necessary.

M. D'Estaing was to attack the English at Rhode Island, if the deep draught of his vessels were an insurmountable obstacle against attacking them at New York, where Howe's squadron consisted of 6 vessels of 64 guns, and from 15 to 18 frigates.⁴

Three Congress frigates were to join M. D'Estaing.⁵

After the attack on Rhode Island, they were to occupy themselves with West Florida in concert with Washington, who had commenced to make preparations as secretly as such a project demanded.⁶

The partisans of the English are quiet; all the propositions of the English Commissioners have been rejected, although tempting; only that of independence will suit.⁷

We may count on the unanimity and fidelity of Congress; the Nation would dismiss immediately any Member who might be suspected of thinking differently.

Deputy Deane enjoys the highest consideration: the enemies he had here will soon be got rid of.⁸

The King of France is respected in America beyond all expression, and they have heard with the greatest joy there that the Queen is enceinte.⁹

Two of my vessels, excellent sailers, were kept to be sent off in September with despatches, they cannot fail to arrive soon.

3. Conrad-Alexandre Gérard was the French minister to the United States; Jean Holker was the French agent of marine in the United States and the French consul at Philadelphia.

4. Comte d'Estaing found the draft of his vessels to be an "insurmountable obstacle" for an attack on the British fleet commanded by Vice Admiral Viscount Howe at New York and on 22 July sailed for Rhode Island to participate in a Franco-American attack on the British garrison on Aquidnick Island.

8. Silas Deane, the former American commissioner to France, had returned to America with comte d'Estaing's fleet ostensibly to report on affairs in Europe, but actually to answer charges made against him by fellow commissioner Arthur Lee. The congressional investigation of Deane, which began on 14 August 1778 and continued, intermittently, for a year shows that Deane's enemies and critics had not been vanquished. REAR ADMIRAL SAMUEL BARRINGTON TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

Prince of Wales in Carlisle Bay,
Barbadoes, 20. July 1778.

Sir

Since my Letter of the 15th. instant (N^o. 11),¹ informing my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty of the arrival of His Majesty's Ships the Ruby and Boyne with the Trade from England,² the Ariadne and Ceres are arrived here, in consequence of orders from Admiral Young,³ to convoy the homeward-bound Merchant-Vessels from hence to St^e Christopher's; and the State of these Ships with respect to Provisions will better describe the shameful neglect of the Contractor for Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands, than all I can possibly add on the subject.

Their Lordships will see by the enclosed Report of the State and Condition of the Ships now here, that the Ceres is supplied with rice in lieu of Bread, and that the

Ariadne has only seven days Yams and no Pease; And their Commanders assure me, that they have hardly ever had any Bread since they have been on the Station, and the little they were supplied with, was so very bad and full of weevils as scarcely to be fit for men to eat.⁴

A scarcity of Bread therefore has generally prevailed here, and of course could not be unknown to the Contractor; And yet, to my utter astonishment, not a single Vessel of the last Convoy brought out any for the Supply of the Contract.

To relieve the Ariadne's present distress, I have ordered her Captain to purchase some Pease and a small quantity of Bread which fortunately arrived here in one of the Convoy; and, as they bear a very high price, I hope their Lordships will give directions for the loss accruing to Government thereby to be deducted from the Contractor's Bills.⁵

Cap^t Pringle having informed me that there is a person at Dominica, who will undertake to bake a Supply of Bread for the Ariadne and Ceres, I have written to him to have a Quantity ready for them upon their arrival, as they are ordered by Admiral Young to call at that Island in their way to St. Christopher's; And I beg leave to submit to their Lordships consideration, the necessity of establishing a Contract there, it being the best and almost the only convenient place for wooding and watering a Fleet, and also the most proper Rendezvous in time of War for watching the motions of the enemy and protecting His Majesty's Island in general.

By the Hillsborough Packet,⁶ which arrived here yesterday, I have received your Letter of the 4th. of last month (Tho' directed to Antigua) enclosing a Memorial from the Merchants and Proprietors of the Island of Tobago (representing the defenceless State of that Island, and complaining that the Aurora, which sailed from England in November last under orders to be stationed there for it's protection and security, had not appeared upon her Station on the 30th. of March,⁷ although she arrived at Barbadoes the beginning of January), and shall transmit a Copy of the same to Admiral Young by the Ariadne, that, as the matter relates intirely to his Command, he may report to their Lordships the cause of the said Ship's not proceeding to the Station assigned here, or why some other Frigate was not sent in her stead when she was diverted from that Service.

With respect to their Lordship's direction signified by the said Letter, that in future not only the Aurora, or some other Frigate of equal force, but also a Sloop, be constantly stationed at and about the said Island of Tobago for it's protection and security, and not withdrawn from thence upon any account till others are sent to relieve them; You will please to represent to their Lordships, that it shall be punctually complied with, whenever the number of Ships which may happen to be under my command will admit of it. But I understand there would be only three Frigates, two Sloops, and two Armed Vessels of Admiral Young's Squadron left on the Station when the present homeward-bound Convoy is dispatched; and how I am to furnish the next Convoy with protection, which I am told will be expected some time in November, I am intirely at a loss. It does not, however, appear to me at all necessary to send so many homeward-bound Convoys in the course of so short a time, two having sailed in the months of May and June; and I could therefore wish their Lordships would be pleased to limit the number to sail from hence in future, and to appoint stated times for their sailing, that I may regulate the motions for the Squadron accordingly.

I shall, in obedience to their Lordships orders of the 4th. of June which came enclosed, purchase four Vessels to be employed as Sloops in His Majesty's Service, as soon as I can meet with any fit for the purpose. I am Sir, [&c.]

Sam^l: Barrington

P.S. Since writing the foregoing, the Boreas is arrived here from Antigua with a Letter from Admiral Young: And application having been made to me for a Convoy for several Merchant-Vessels bound to Grenada, Tobago, and S^t Vincents and now lying here in readiness to sail, I have ordered Cap^t: Thompson to perform that Service and then rejoin me at this place.⁸

2. In his letter of 15 July, Barrington reported the safe arrival at Barbados of a sixty-five-ship merchant convoy escorted by H.M.S. Boyne, Capt. Herbert Sawyer, commander, and H.M.S. Ruby, Capt. Joseph Deane, commanding. Ibid.

3. H.M. frigate Ariadne, Capt. Thomas Pringle and H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Ceres, Comdr. James Richard Dacres, commander. Barrington was to replace Vice Admiral James Young as commander of the Leeward Islands station.

7. A copy of the letter is in the Samuel Barrington letter books, CtY. See Memorial of the Merchants and Proprietors of the Island of Tobago, between 23 and 29 May 1778, NDAR 12: 773–5. As seen in notes at that letter, Aurora, Capt. James Cumming, was injured in an engagement with an American privateer on its journey to the Leeward Islands and the repairs took until March 1778 to complete.

8. Adm. Young's letter of 16 July, conveyed by H.M. frigate Boreas, Capt. Charles Thompson, commander, discussed the need "appoint Ships to conduct the 1s of August Convoy to Europe." It is printed in the Barrington Papers 2: 29.

Fresh breezes and cloudy weather, with rain at times.

The Launch employed watering.

P.M. His Majesty's Ship the Boreas arrived here from Antigua with a Letter from Admiral Young,¹ and having saluted with 13 Guns, I returned 11. —Ordered Captain Pringle of the Ariadne (after he should have convoyed the Trade to St^t Christopher's agreeably to the orders he received from Admiral Young and in case of not meeting The Admiral there nor any orders from Him for his farther proceedings) not to remain there, but to proceed forthwith to Antigua with that ship and the Ceres to complete their Provisions and then rejoin me here;² by him I forwarded to the Secretary of the Admiralty a Letter acknowledging the receipt of the before-mentioned papers by the Packet, and informing the Lords of my proceedings to this evening,³ and transmitted to Admiral Young a Copy of the Memorial from the Merchants &c^a. of Tobago, that; as the Matter therein set forth related entirely to his Command, he might make the Report which the Lords of the Admiralty required.⁴

1. Vice Admiral James Young's letter of 16 July, carried by Capt. Charles Thompson on H.M. frigate Boreas, noted receipt of intelligence of Barrington's arrival at Barbadoes, left the composition of a home-ward-bound convoy to Barrington's discretion, and requested Barrington send the Boreas back quickly with word regarding whether the two should meet or Young may sail immediately for England. Barrington Papers 2: 29.

2. H.M. frigate Ariadne, Capt. Thomas Pringle, commander, and H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Ceres, Comdr. James Richard Dacres, commander. As seen by Barrington's journal entry of 23 July, below, he sent these vessels as escorts with the August convoy that sailed from the Leeward Islands to England.

[Newport] R. ISLAND

[1778]

21st July. Fine Weather. Cool and pleasant. Wind N.E.

The fleet for New York, sailed under Convoy of the Fowey.¹

Our whole attention is now given to the encrease of our means of defence in case of the appearance of The French Fleet, which it is generally expected will make an attempt on this Island very soon; for as they were too late to intercept the fleet in coming down the Delaware, and will probably find it impracticable to force an entrance over the bar of Sandy hook, this station seems likely to be the next object of consequence, and one in which the Rebels may co-operate with them. We are therefore completing the Batteries on Brenton's-point, Goat Island, The Dumplins,² and Fox-hill, as well as those at the North end of the town, as fast as possible. The Provisions and stores which are on board ships in the harbour, and in Storehouses on the Wharfs, are removing with the utmost expedition to the upper part of the town; and every other measure taking to repel the attacks of the Enemy's fleet, and the Rebel troops.

The Frigates in the Bay and harbour³ have received instructions, upon the appearance of the French fleet, to make the best of their way to some convenient part of the shore on the W. side of the Island,⁴ where they are to land their Guns, Stores, Provisions, &c., and defend them as long as they can; and in the last extremity to burn them, to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Enemy. The Kingsfisher,⁵ and The Alarm,⁶ and *Spitfire*⁷ Gallies, stationed in the Seconnet,⁸ are to run under our battery at Fogland.

REAR ADMIRAL JAMES GAMBIER TO THE EARL OF SANDWICH

[Extract]

Emerald, off New York town, 19 July 1778.

My honoured and revered Lord—The packet¹ sailed unexpectedly we find yesterday; from my friend Sir Henry,² I this moment learn another will probably be dispatched to-morrow if not this evening. I hasten to embrace the opportunity to tell your Lordship that affairs at and without the Hook remain as they were in my last except that the F[rench] fleet have been ever since watering at the mouth of Shrewsbury River near the Navesink, where they appear to do it with great convenience and dispatch. A certain corroborating proof to my early opinion that they meant no attempt to force the harbour after their knowledge of our force within, as on the bar there is at spring tides bare water for their large ships and if intended to pass it they would endeavour to lighten their ships instead of getting them down still deeper.

If Admiral B[yron] did sail, or at the time we hoped, is it not odd that d'Estaing should run the risk he does of being caught. Admiral B. being equal to his force we conclude without our junction, and we here almost equal (had the Raisnable and Centurion joined us)³ even without the expected addition of Admiral B., a deep game he appears to play, unless he has better information than we have. In the meantime 'tis said he has already sent in 30 prizes to the Delaware, taken on his passage out and on the coast, and takes daily others even since his arrival off here, some we have been eyewitnesses of. I never longed in my life to see the finest of women more than I do to see Admiral B., and his nephew [Lord Carlisle] as well as E[den] and the rest of our friends here join me in the same wish, for 'tis an important crisis!⁴

We hope he did sail and came direct hither; if not and first to Halifax it may be fatal. The southerly winds at this time of the year bring the Trade winds here; and the Eagle, a single ship, three weeks getting thence hither.

On my last visit down to the Hook, to again repeat my offer and importunate request on the vicinity of the F[rench] F[leet] to be employed on the more active and honourable service, I was again told he⁵ or I must remain up here to co-operate with the army, at which time he was pleased to put into my hands large packets containing the counterparts of official orders, arrangements, &c. which were for my government on his suddenly leaving the command in chief to me: the first item I have ever had from him of such an event likely to happen. I acquainted your Lordship with my repeated offers and request of the most active employ on the earliest appearance of the French fleet and refusals. It was not only my duty but what was my wish, after coming twelve hundred leagues from my family. I presumed also most respectfully to advise fitting the Leviathan with borrowed lower-deckers from the Army,⁶ and making half a dozen of the empty transports into temporary fireships on this very critical emergency, should they attempt to force their entrance or we by any fortuitous change be in condition to go out to them. Early I thought such my duty—I wrote your Lordship confidentially, trusting that what I communicate will remain in your own bosom. We are in a very critical situation indeed. The appearance of Admiral B. would relieve us and turn the tables.

Perusing, my honoured Lord, the several orders and arrangements and secret instructions put into my hands I cannot but feel too painful sensations (should they take place) at the certain prospect of my being left here with a force (it scarce merits the name of force) obviously and notoriously inadequate not only to the service expected from it but to any service at all, when the shattered state and condition of almost all the ships and vessels (numerous as on paper they may appear) is duly considered.⁷ Exclusive of the French, the rebels have by our last certain accounts not less than between twenty and thirty sail of armed Congress ships, completely manned and fit for sea at Boston, from 36 to 20 guns—and a nigh equal number in South Carolina—besides belligerent ships and vessels vegetating in every harbour and creek daily all along the coasts; ours, though at this time numerous, are all foul, out of repair in hulls, masts and yards, and in want of stores.

The several various arrangements, drafts, and deductions from this debilitated number that are directed by the arrangements in the secret instructions will leave but little behind of serviceable, or of force and consequence to act hostilely and offensively, or indeed to show their heads out of port—exclusive of that distress-completing paragraph: ‘to send the remainder also to E[ngland], including those which may be in the River St L[awrence] &c.’ The previous arrangements and sundry many appropriations would reduce this force to a very inoffensive one, foul, out of repair, and in want of stores, joined also to the several convoys likewise pointed out and directed; and should I not then, my revered friend and honoured patron, be left with very inadequate means to do my duty?

That conclusive paragraph would, I fear, make me poor indeed by robbing me of the power of doing service, few remaining and unconditioned ships and vessels and without possibly an asylum or port. Deign then, my dear Lord, as you bid me write confidentially everything, to commiserate my prospect as to situation, nor suffer my fate to be so wretchedly changed from that which I was given to be assured of when I quitted my dockyard.⁸ My fate is in your hands, and I am happy in that confidence and contented. . . .

New York, July 21.

The packet not being yet under sail, I have time to tell my honoured that this moment Sir H. C[linton] shows me a written intelligence just received that d'Est[aing] and General W[ashington] 'tis said meditate a general attack here at the same time. We here are all happy at the idea, as it will bring affairs to an issue; the Army holding themselves ready and equal to the whole force they can possibly bring, and the Navy as clearly deeming it impossible, but that they must lose their ships if they should attempt the harbour. Some fishermen escaped from them and deserters say they give out they only wait the spring-tide and pilots; we fear 'tis only a gasconade, and that 'twill end in a Spithead fight.⁹

If Admiral B[yrone] does but appear 'twill be glorious; we hourly pray for it as the most fortunate event that Heaven can bless us with. I send the Leviathan down to-day with a lower deck tier of 32, 24, and 18, being what I could borrow from the Train. I hope the fireship will be finished before the day after to-morrow that the tides lift, although I have no ideas that now they mean that attack; up here I think they may attempt something, but without success. But, my honoured Lord, I am more apprehensive that if they remain here, and we are not relieved, we shall be distressed for provisions: that is a serious matter with such a multitude as here, and if the Cork fleet should be intercepted, the consequence dreadful unless we are relieved. . . .

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO GENERAL SIR HENRY CLINTON

Eagle [at Sandy Hook, N.J.]

Tuesday 21: July 1778

D^r Sir/

Coll: Morris¹ waiting upon you to communicate the intelligence he has collected, it becomes needless for me to recite any of the particulars.

He has shown me the position the French had taken on Waddel's Hill, from whence I conclude it is totally impracticable to make any attempt upon them. I conceived yesterday, that they were posted on this Side the Neversunk River.² Our only caution on this Side, seems confined to any design that should be meditated, by the Neck, on Sandy Hook. Great threats are made, I find, against us on every part. I am D^r Sir [&c.]

JOURNAL OF CAPTAIN HENRY DUNCAN, R.N.

21st [July].—The *Leviathan*¹ storeship joined the fleet; she was fitted with two 32-pounders, three 24-pounders, and eleven 18-pounders for her lower deck, [and] her proper upper-deck guns, and [was] manned with volunteers, the whole number of which that served in the fleet until Lord Howe quitted the command amounted to about 1,000. They were discharged on his lordship's leaving the country, agreeable to his promise.

"Journals of Henry Duncan," p. 160.

1. Leviathan, Comdr. Joseph Tathwell, commanding, had originally been Northumberland, a ship of war, and therefore by the thickness of its sides was better fitted for this role than an ordinary merchant vessel. MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Dear General

Providence [R.I.] July y^c 22^d 1778

I have the Honor to Inclose you the Intelligence rece^d from Rhode Island Last night which is not only from Good Authority but is Corroborated by Intelligence Received from various other Quarters.¹ Three Regiments of the Enemy Encamped yesterday on Connannicut Island, Three more came out & Encamped on the North part of Rhode Island near Bristol: They may have Some Designs upon us but I Rather Suppose they are preparing to guard ag^t the French Fleet[.]² I think it necessary to keep you advised of the movements here that you may the better know how to Regulate your operations. Twenty one Sail of Square Riggd vessels (mostly Ships) went up the Sound Day before yesterday for Newyork. I cant Learn what was in them. I am pretty Certain they had no troops on Board. I cannot help Supposing that the Enemy will Soon bring the principal part if not the whole of their Army this way Either for the purpose of operating in this Quarter, or to make their Retreat in the way to Hallifax: most probably the Latter. If they Intended to Act offensively in the York Department they would not have Sent off Such a [number] of Troops from their Main Army So Soon after Defeat which Convinced them of your Excely^s Superiority in the Field: to Suffer their whole Army to Lay in Newyork inactive is what they Cannot afford & what in my opinion they will never attempt[.] to Leave a Garrison there while there is a Superiour Army in the Field & a greater Naval Force at the Entrance of the Harbor would (at Least) be Hazarding the Loss of the whole as their Supplies would Effectually be Cut off both by Sea & Land unless The British Fleet from England Should Arrive and oblige The French Fleet to remove for I can by no means think They would Leave this Garrison trusting to Supplies by way of the Sound as a Superiour Army might possess itself of Such posts in the Neighbourhood of Hell gate as would Effectually Cut off all Supplies through that Channel it Therefore follows of Course that unless they are Certain of the Speedy arrival of A British Fleet to assist them they must Remove & Even then Should the French Fleet which Laid at Brest follow their Situations would not be much mended nor Can I See any Solid Advantage Arising from their Coming to Act offensively in this Quarter as they must Later under the Same naval Disadvantages and in a Short time if not at once be Checked in their operations by Land. for these & many other Reasons (among which is that of their having Sent two Foreign Regiment with a Considerable part of their Heavy Cannons from Philadelphia to Hallifax)³ I am of opinion that they will Try to make their Retreat to Hallifax but that at all Events they will Quit New york[.] your Excellency will pardon this Trouble & believe me to be with Every Sentiment of Respect [&c.]

PS Since writing the above I Read the Inclosed Intelligence from Colo Williams have also Examined the Deserter & find he adds that he Saw the Enemy Embarking their Light Brass pieces in order to Come & Attack this place⁴ I have in Consequence called in the militia to oppose any Design they may have formed against this place & to keep them within proper Bounds⁵

Sullivan probably enclosed an undated and unsigned letter found in the Washington Papers reporting that a boat had just returned from Newport with word that the reinforcement "lately" arrived had numbered 3,000 British troops and that the British were fortifying Brentons Point and Conanicut Island "in Expectation of the French Fleet which they have intelligence of." 4. Sullivan enclosed a copy of the letter from Rhode Island Lt. Col. James Williams of 22 July. In addition to reporting that the British intended to attack Providence, Williams' source—a deserter—also reported that a fleet of twenty-two sail, mostly ships, left "yesterday" "and was followed by two or three others which went out in the Evening." He further reported that a fleet with additional reinforcements was expected "And that the Light House is ordered to be lighted for them to Come in by." DLC, George Washington Papers, Series 4. The letter from Williams is published in GW Papers, Rev. War Series 16: 135–6n4.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Sir

Camp near White plains [N.Y.] July 22^d: 1778

Since I had the honor of addressing you on the 14th. I have been favoured with your Letters of the 11th and 17th. with their respective inclosures.¹

The next morning after the receipt of the former, which came to hand on the 17th. I dispatched L^t. Col^o Hamilton another of my Aides, with the best Pilots and the most skilful masters of ships, I could procure to Admiral Count D'Estaing, to converse with him more fully on the subject of his operations than I was able to direct L^t. Col^o Laurens to do, for want of the information which I afterwards obtained from Major Chouin, and a knowledge in several other points besides.² On sunday night M^r Laurens returned and I found by him, that it was the Count's first wish to enter at Sandy hook in order to possess himself of, or to destroy, if possible, the whole of the british fleet, lying in the Bay of New York; and that for this purpose he had been much engaged in his inquiries about the depth of water, and in sounding the channel to ascertain it.³ The result of which was, that the water from the experiments made, was too shallow at the entrance to admit his large Ships—or if they could be got in, it appeared that it would not be without a great deal of difficulty and risk. After this disappointment, the next important object which seemed to present itself was an attempt against Rhode Island, which the Count inclined to make unless I should advise the contrary, as soon as the Chimere frigate which had carried his Excellency Monsieur Girard, into the Delaware, should rejoin him. L^t. Col^o Hamilton, who was well informed of our situation and of my sentiments on every point, was instructed to give the Admiral a full and accurate state of facts, and to acquaint him, what aid and how far we could co-operate with him, in case of an attempt, either against New York or Rhode Island, and also to obtain his ideas of the plan and system, which, he might think, ought to be pursued, and to agree with him on certain Signals.

Previous to my dispatching M^r Hamilton, from the information I received on my inquiries respecting the navigation at the Hook, I was led to suspect, however interesting and desirable the destruction or capture of the British fleet might be, that it was not sufficient to introduce the Count's Ships. Under this apprehension, I wrote General Sullivan on the 17th. by Express, that an Expedition might take place in a short time against Rhode Island, and urged him, at the same time, to apply to the States of Massachusetts- Rhode Island & Connecticut for as many men, as would augment his force to Five Thousand, and also to make every possible preparation of boats- provision- pilots &c, as if the event was fixed and certain.⁴

From this time till about Twelve OClock on Sunday the Troops continued passing the River, when I crossed with the last division. On Monday after noon I arrived at this place, in the neighbourhood of which the right and left wing encamped that night, with the second line a few miles in their rear. And here I am happy to add, that their passage across the river was effected without any accident, or without any more delay than necessarily attended the work.

Being persuaded now from the conversation which I had had, with several pilots and Masters of Vessels of character, as well as from the accounts of other Gentlemen and Colo Laurens's report on his return, that the passing of the Count's Ships by the Hook would be extremely precarious-if not impracticable, I determined yesterday, which was as soon as it could be done, without waiting for further intelligence upon the subject, to put Two Brigades under marching orders. They accordingly marched this morning at Two O'Clock for Rhode Island, under the particular command of Generals [James M.] Varnum and [John] Glover respectively-and both under the direction, for the present, of the Marquis de la Fayette. A Water conveyance was thought of, and wished for the ease of the Troops,- but on consideration of all circumstances, such as the difficulty of providing vessels-the change and precariousness of the winds-The risk from the enemy's Ships &c, their route by land was deemed by far the more eligible. The force with General Sullivan from the best and latest advice, I have been able to obtain is about Three thousand.- A Detachment under Col^o Jackson⁵ will follow Varnum & Glovers brigades. . . .

1 O'Clock. PM.

I this minute received a Letter from Colo Hamilton, who is on his return to the Army, dated the 20th at Black point.⁶ He informed that the Count D'Estaing would sail the next Evening for Rhode Island, being convinced from actual sounding that he could not enter his Ships. He was anxiously waiting the arrival of the Chimere, but at all events, meant to sail at the time he mentions.⁷ The Admiral has agreed on Signals with M^r Hamilton- Immediately after this Letter came to hand, my aid M^r Laurens set out for Providence, having many things to communicate to General Sullivan upon the subject of his co-operation, which neither time nor propriety would suffer me to commit to paper. Gen^l Sullivan is directed not to confine the number of his Troops to Five thousand, but to augment it, if he shall judge it necessary to ensure his success.⁸

I was informed by M^r Laurens that the Count D'Estaings magazine of bread is not so large as we could wish, and that in the course of a few weeks he will be in want. This circumstance I thought it right to mention, and I should suppose, that any quantity of Biscuit may be provided in a little time at Philadelphia.

The Inclosures No 2, are Copies of three Letters from myself to the Admiral.⁹ I flatter myself the present of stock, which I directed for him, on his first arrival in behalf of the States, will be approved by Congress. . . .

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN

Dear SirHeadquarters [White Plains, N.Y.] 22^d. July 1778

When I had the pleasure of writing to you on the 17th. Inst.¹—I mentioned the probability of an enterprize being meditated against Rhode Island, as the next capital object, in case the shallow entrance at Sandy Hook, should frustrate Admiral D'Estaing's first design of an attack upon the Enemys Fleet, in new York Harbour,—The most experienced Pilots have been employed in sounding, and after the deepest consideration of what might be effected by lightening the ships and the like, the attempt has been determined unadvisable—nothing detained the admiral from sailing immediately to Newport, but the absence of a Frigate which he was daily expecting from the Delaware. But as she has probably joined him by this time—I think it proper to apprise you, that the instructions which were given in my last, relative to collecting a proper force &^{ca.}, are to be regarded as having an immediate object.—I have this morning detached two Brigades to reinforce your your strength, and am this moment instructed of the sailing of the fleet for Rhode Island. You will, I am well assured, pursue every measure in your power that can render the enterprize happy, and fortunate,—and as its success will depend in a great degree on the promptness & energy of its execution, I trust the conduct will answer the spirit & hopes of the expedition.

The inclosure will shew you the demonstrations of the admirals arrival on the coast, and point out to you what is to be done on your part.²

This letter is entrusted to one of my aids Lt. Colo. Laurens³; he has had an interview with the Count D'Estaing, and is fully possessed of all such information, as concerns the present enterprize. I am [&c.]

In my letter of the 17th. I mentioned the drawing together as many men as would make up 5,000 including your present force—I do not mean to restrict you to that number—but wish you to get as many as will insure your success. I should suppose there will be many volunteers on this occasion.

I opened the letter after it was sealed to subjoin this Postscript.

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL JOHN LAURENS

Memorandum.—

[22 July 1778]¹

Col^o. Laurens will suggest to his Excellency Count de Estaing the advantages which would more than probably result from a French Ship of sufficient force getting into the Sound, as far up as the Lyons tongue, or somewhere thereabouts²—A Measure of this kind would clear that channel of the British armed Vess^{ls}. which now infest it, and cover the Passage, & landing of a party of Men which might be sent to Long Island for the purposes of removing the Cattle out of the way of the enemy, destroying their Horses &c^a—& would afford supplies of Fresh Provisions to the Fleet,—vegetables & other comforts.

The Vessels belonging to the Harbours of Connecticut, would presently take off the fat Cattle & other stock, if the British Cruizers were driven from the communication between the Island and the Main

How far the enterprize upon Rhode Island is compatible with a watch of the Fleet in the Harbour of New York is left to the Admirals superior judgment—But, as an embarkation of the Army at that place cannot happen without notice being had of it, nor an evacuation of the harbour after it is begun in less than 48 hours, it is submitted whether a capitol strike might not be aimed at that Fleet upon its departure from the hook.

The enterprize upon Rhode Island might be followed by an attempt upon Halifax; which, if fortunate, would be a deadly stroke to G. Britain; as it is the only Dock on the Continent in which Ships of large Force can Careen and moreover abounds in Naval & Military Stores of all kinds

REVEREND JAMES CALDWELL TO COL. ELIAS BOUDINOT

My dear friend,

Monmouth [N.J.] 22^d July 1778.

I informed you the other day that his Ex^y Gen^l W_ having ordered a present to Count D Estaing, the Com^y had requested me to procure the Cattle sheep & Poultry & send them on Board.¹ I accordingly hurried down the Cattle, 50- & yesterday got them on Board. The Sheep & Poultry cou^d not be procured in time, & cannot now be sent, but they have a very plentiful supply. Hard money easily tempted the Monmouth people to repair to this market.

As I had sent on the letters respecting the present & informed the Count when I should be at the Shore I found a Barge ready, & with a Number of friends went on Board[.] As the Admirals ship lay next Long Island we passed the whole fleet & had a fine view of them. It was very grand indeed. We were first politely received on Board a Frigate on our way & then on Board the Admiral when we dined. We were politely rec^d & pleased with every body & thing we saw except a proud Scot, who bears the Commission of Cap^t, but is called Col^o. his name M^cDonnold.² He was impertinent to some of the Gentlemen—and I strongly suspect from some hints is no friend to Congress Measures. But as they call him, one proud scotch-man, I hope he will not have much influence—

The Admiral in the politest terms begged me to present his thanks to the Congress & General Washington for the acceptable present of the Cattle, which he intended also to do by letter as soon as opportunity served. We had not much time to stay on Board as they expect to sail first opportunity. The reasons & circumstances of which I need not inform you. The day before I had an express from Gen^l Green³ to establish expresses betwixt this Fleet & the Army—Strange that Congress & other folks did not better know the soundings of the Hook, than to expect what was expected here. The fleet are furnished with good Pilots for there purpose.

One matter I have seen which I think requires the attention of Congress, altho' I know the subject is delicate. Upon the arrival of the Fleet, many fishing Vessels from Statten & Long Islands fell into their hands. Among the Hands were several of the most faithful inhabitants, who for their own support are obliged to fish they are taken and carried off. Application was made to the Admiral by Cap^t Dennis⁴ to have those men sent on shore for trial by their Countys & it was consented to, & afterwards seemed to be refused & as the fleet are now under way, I suppose they are carried off except Young Samuel Deheart whom I happened to see as I was coming out of the Admirals Ship & got him off with me. Might not the Ambassador be applied to, that all inhabitants so taken upon the Coast shoud be sent on Shore at convenient places to abide the trial of their country. The Officers of the fleet were exasperated by a murther committed by the Hands of a fishing Boat that was taken On board of which were left some French men—the Boats [ran?] in the Night murthered one & wounded another and went off. But why shoud innocent men suffer for that. Some of our best subjects on the coast may fall into their hands, & have no chance for trial if some mode is not established.

I was also sorry to see the Brigs, schooners &c taken by the fleet striped & be sunck or burnt. Several Vessels were preparing for destruction as I passed thro the fleet which would have been exceeding useful to us as coasters &c. Col^o Hamilton,⁵ Cap^t Dennis & others proposed how they might be usefully employed, but their proposals were not attended to. Cap^t Dennis offered to man one & sail ahead & that was not accepted.

I wrote in hurry upon the road & therefore you will excuse incorrectness. I sent a letter the other day from M^s Boudinot who was well at that time.⁶

With kindest regards & best wishes your most [&c.]

1. On 15 July, Gen. George Washington had written the comte d'Estaing presenting him, "in behalf of the United States," with a "small quantity of live stock, which I flatter myself, after a long sea voyage, will not be unacceptable." Washington to d'Estaing, 15 July 1778, GW Papers, Rev. War Series 16: 82n1. On the same day, Washington directed Commissary General Jeremiah Wadsworth "to select Fifty of your best Bullocks, and give orders to have two hundred Sheep if to be procured and a parcel of poultry purchased in the most convenient part of the Country...as a present to the Count D'Estaing." He also ordered Wadsworth to offer d'Estaing "any assistance that he may want in victualling the Fleet under his command." Washington to Wadsworth, 15 July 1778, GW Papers, Rev. War Series 16: 81–2.

The Reverend James Caldwell, a Presbyterian minister, served as assistant deputy commissary and assistant deputy quartermaster at Springfield, New Jersey. Wadsworth himself had written to d'Estaing, giving him much the same information on 15 July, as well as mentioning Caldwell's participation; FrPNA, Marine B¹, vol. 246, fol. 245.

2. Jean-Baptiste MacDonald, a captain in the Régiment de Dillon. In Heitman, Register, his name is given as Macdonnall.

3. Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene, the Continental Army's quartermaster general.

4. Capt. Patrick Dennis, a local pilot whom Gen. George Washington had sent to assist the French fleet.

5. Lt. Col. Alexander Hamilton, Gen. George Washington's aide-de-camp, who had been sent by Washington to consult with comte d'Estaing.

6. Caldwell wrote Boudinot again on 23 July and again addressed the question of the fishing boats. While conceding that the "greater part of their crews were vile Tories," he contended that "some were faithful subjects." Despite applications to d'Estaing, the fishermen had been forced to remain on board the French fleet when it sailed "yesterday." Caldwell added: "If unarmed Vessels are to be thus treated on our Coast we are not safe & broils may soon arise." He again suggested that Congress and the French ambassador work out an arrangement "agreeable to both & safe for all." In that letter Caldwell also reported intelligence that the British transports were taking on water and that some of the transport captains had talked of going "home if they could get away." HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS, TO GOVERNOR RICHARD
CASWELL OF NORTH CAROLINA

Sir

[Philadelphia] 22nd July [1778]

As I have nothing public in charge for your Excellency I must request you Sir to indulge me in this private with a cover of six Marine Commissions, Instructions and Bonds, and of a letter to Captain Cottineau.¹ The Captain applied to me in York Town for a Commission for his own Ship and for one or two which he said he intended to equip and to form a little squadron.² Congress are not inclined to grant Commissions for Vessels in distant States unless special descriptions are previously laid before them Your Excellency will be capable of judging of the propriety of Capt Cottineau's pretensions and will act as you shall think for the benefit of the public—at this Critical moment it is highly probable demands will be made on Your Excellency for all that remain after Captain Cottineau shall be supplied. I am told no less than 12 Prizes lately taken are advertised for sale on tuesday next at Egg Harbour—³ Vice Admiral Count d'Estaing has captured a much greater number at Sandy Hook, some of them Armed Vessels and some very valuable, but we have not learned particulars. The Admiral finding his large ships of too great a draught of Water for the Bar of the Hook after lying several days in view of the British squadron within, sailed as we are informed for Rhode Island, where he must be content to play a smaller game than that which he had originally had in view—if General Pigot and his garrison shall be compell'd to surrender the thing will not be very inconsiderable. . . . I have the Honor to be &c

LB, ScHi, Henry Laurens Letter Book. The portion not included concern newspapers that Laurens sent Caswell and dealing with the Carlisle Peace Commission.

1. Laurens's letter to Capt. Denis-Nicolas Cottineau de Kerloguen is printed in Letters of Delegates 10: 338–39.

2. The application made at York, Pennsylvania, as is clear from Laurens's letter Cottineau, was done orally. Cottineau was master of the armed French merchant ship Ferdinand, which was at Beaufort, North Carolina. From what Gov. Patrick Henry wrote to delegate to Congress Richard Henry Lee on 28 May, in NDAR 12: 275–76, it appears that Cottineau proposed an attack on British posts on the coast of Africa.

3. The Philadelphia newspaper Pennsylvania Packet or the General Advertiser in its 21 July edition advertised for sale at the “forks of Little Egg Harbour” three vessels and their cargoes. The sale was to be held on Tuesday, 28 July. The same notice also advertised the sale on 29 July of five additional prizes at “Chesnut Neck.” On 28 July the Pennsylvania Packet advertised the sale at the “Borough of Chester” of two additional prizes taken by Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing's fleet. These two were Bonite (also rendered Bonette and Bonetta) and Charlotte. On the details of their sale, see Journal of Lieutenant de vaisseau Jean-Julien Chevalier Le Mauff, French Navy, 8 to 9 July, above. This sale was scheduled for 29 July as well.

Dear Sir

I yesterday received yours of the 21st¹ with regard to the Cannon. it will be some time before we shall want them, and perhaps the General² will have no Occasion for them then. I dont observe by the Resolve that Gen^l Sullivan has given his Opinion of this Matter,³ but I suppose that has been done. With regards to the Officers I leave the matter to your Conducting, but must still be of the Opinion that our Navy Officers, who are Starving on their pay only, and wishing for any kind of actual Service should be employ'd. I think such a Vessell would be properly commanded by a Lieutenant, but if Capt^s are wanted, they may be had. I say more on this subject, because I would do justice to the Officers, and avoid Censure to ourselves. The Warren is not yet out of the Harbour. She has attempted to get out every day since Sunday, but cant effect it. I have just wrote to him⁴ to watch for the Cork Fleet. I will endeavour when 10 or 12 of the Cannon are cast to send some person from here to prove them if you can get no suitable Person there. we have no news. I am Sir Your Friend and Servant

1. On 31 July Blaine submitted this letter to Congress, which appointed a three-man committee to consider it. JCC 11: 734. That committee reported on 24 August that the “transportation of flour to the eastern states by sea, is wise and necessary” and, as a result, Congress ordered: that 20,000 barrels of flour be obtained in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia; that Wadsworth procure vessels to carry that flour to New England; and that Wadsworth confer with the Continental Marine Committee, which would provide “convoy” for those vessels. JCC, 11: 831. On the day Congress issued this order, Wadsworth wrote the president of Congress to remind him, that owing to the scarcity of flour in New England, there was need of a congressional resolution authorizing the shipment of flour to New England from Virginia if the army was to be supplied. Jeremiah Wadsworth to Henry Laurens, 24 Aug. 1778, MdHi, Carroll Papers, vol. 6, p. 1. Despite Congress’s order, however, the convoy was not assembled. On 14 September the Continental Marine Committee advised Wadsworth that the British controlled the seas between the Capes of Virginia and Boston and it would therefore be unwise to ship the flour by water. George Washington, 9 June 1776, NDAR 5: 434–35 and the Boston-Gazette, 10 June 1776, NDAR 5: 448–49. Another two companies had been captured later in June when their transports were taken in Boston Bay by the Connecticut State Navy brig Defence, Capt. Seth Harding, commanding, who captured the brig Annabella, the ship George, and the ship Lord Howe. See Capt. Seth Harding to Gov. Jonathan Trumbull, 19 June 1776, in NDAR 5: 618–19. A list of the prisoners appears in Lt. Col. Archibald Campbell to Maj. Gen. William Howe, 19 June 1776, NDAR 5: 619–21. The Hessians were undoubtedly from the Convention Army that had been captured after British Gen. John Burgoyne’s surrender to Maj. Gen. Horatio Gates at the Battle of Saratoga in Oct. 1777.

INTELLIGENCE REPORTS

Examination of N^o. 1.

Left Staten Island last night—the troops about one hour before Sun down began to strike their tents, and go on board of Small vessels to go to New York and Kings-bridge They are chiefly leaving the Island, even the highlanders¹ formerly stationed there were going.—the new levies did not move, he Saw 100. load of Baggage Sent off.—They are in great distress for forage—flour is very Scarce; but they are in daily expectation of the Cork fleet, which they hope is to be convoyed by an English fleet,² Sufficient to drive off the french fleet,³ and give them relief. They Sent off a frigate trough the Sound to hasten the English fleet and inform them of their Situation—She Sailed last Wednesday—The english Ships have fallen down to the hook, where they now lay—the général conversation is that the ennemy is going up the East or North river, but beliven to Kingsbridge first.—

As it is expected general Washington will attack that post—they have removed Some heavy cannon to the narrows where they are throwing up works to prevent the French fleet comming up.

Examination of N^o. 2.

Left Staten Island last night, where he has been Since Saturday last—the troops are except about 1200. leaving the Island for Kingsbridge as is Said, they removed 24. brass cannon 6. and 9. pounders on to long Island 2. days ago—they are at their encampment at flat busch—the 15th. 17th. and 52th. regiments.⁴ 4. are on Sandy Hook fortifying—and all the British Ships are fallen down to defend them—A Number of heavy cannon 40. or 50. that were taken in the Swedish ship, are Sent to the Hook—plateforms were Sent from the batteries in New York to the hook Colonel Trumbull⁵ is removed from powels hooks⁶ and 1. bataillon of the 71th.⁷ put there in his place—the british Ships⁸ are, the Eagle, Somerset, S' Albans, Ardent, trident of 64. LIEUTENANT COLONEL ALEXANDER HAMILTON TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Sir,

Newark [N.J.] July 23^d. One Oclock

I wrote to Your Excellency the evening of the 20th by Major Neville.¹ I remained in the neighbourhood of Black Point 'till the afternoon following. The Count² had received his expected dispatches from Congress and was to sail, as I mentioned before, the first fair wind. At Brunswick yesterday, M^r Caldwell joined me.³ He was immediately from the Point and brought intelligence that the fleet got under way yesterday morning. The wind unfortunately has been much against them, which is so much the more to be regretted, as they are rather in want of water.

I need not suggest to your Excellency that an essential part of the Rhode Island plan, is to take every possible measure to watch the enemys motions and to establish expresses from place to place to give the Count instant information of any movement among their fleet. This will enable him to be in time to intercept them should they attempt to evacuate New York, while he is at Rhode Island, and will in general facilitate the intercourse and cooperation between ~~the Fleet~~ him and your ~~army~~ Excellency.

I have nothing new to communicate, besides what was sent by Major Newille and what I now send. All the ideas interchanged between the Count and myself were such as were familiar before I left Head Quarters. He was to go to Rhode Island and in conjunction with General Sullivan endeavour to possess himself of the enemy ships and troops there; if on his arrival he had good reason to think it could be effected without further assistan[ce.] If not he will be glad of reinforcem^t from you in the most expeditious manner possible. What manner you think will be most expeditious you will adopt and if his aid may be useful he will afford it, as soon as he is informed of it.

This being the case my immediate presence at Head Quarters is the less necessary as to this business; and I hope your Excellency will indulge me, if I do not make all the dispatch back, which a case of emergency would require; though I do not mean to delay more than a moderate attention to my frail constitution may make not improper.

REVEREND JAMES CALDWELL TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Sir

Springfield July 23: 1778

The Comy. General having requested me to convey to the Count D Estaing Your Excellencys present,¹ I hurried the Cattle down & got them on board in time. For fear of some delay I went down myself and the Count in politest terms desired me to return his thanks to your Excellency for the seasonable Present, and told me that as he had a supply of sheep & Poultry in another way, he woud not have those sent on Board directed by your excellency, till I shoud receive farther order from him. The next morning, Yesterday, the fleet got under way.

By faithful men from New York, I am informed the Transports are wattering, & the common report is that they woud get home if they could, The inhabitants suffer for Provisions & only hope for relief by a superior fleet from England. Officers openly curse the Ministry, & the noise increases.

The report at the Hook is that part of your Army is to return & the Troops from the fleet to land & join them—that the fleet sail out for a blind & decoy. Howe² will probably be perplexed—Although he well knows that large ships cannot come in to disturb him, & he has nothing to fear from small ones. With kindest wishes & due respect

JOHN WEREAT TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir,

Savannah [Ga.] 23rd. July 1778

I wrote the Hon^{ble} Marine Committee two Letters respecting the three prize Vessels taken from the Enemy, the former on the 18th. May and the latter the first of June by Richardson who went Express to Congress and Edw^{dt}. Telfair Esq^r.—¹ As I apprehend there cannot be the least doubt of both those Letters having been received I think it needless to send Copies of them. This accompanies the proceedings against them in order to be laid before Congress;² the curious and extraordinary adjudication of the Assistant Justices in Liberty County³ on the 18th instant has made an appeal to Congress necessary, which I entered immediately as the Decree was drawn up and pronounced.—

In order to explain this business it is necessary to inform you that the Officers of the Army obstructed the sale as is set forth in my Letter of the 1st. and summoned me to shew cause why the amount of the Sales should not be paid into the hands of Colonel Elbert,⁴ this was at length got over by a Confirmation of the original Decree on a hearing before the Chief Justice, when this was done I thought every difficulty was got over, and endeavored to bring the Sheriff⁵ to Account and apply the amount Sales agreeable to the resolves of Congress, to effect which a Rule was obtained from the Chief Justice for the Sheriff to shew cause why an Attachment should not issue against him for Contempt and a day assigned for a hearing, when the Chief Justice on the Motion of the Officers Attorney referred the hearing to be had before the Assistant Justices of Liberty County on the 18th. Instant, at which time and place I attended in expectation of putting a finishing hand to the business; but to my astonishment, found that the assistant Justices took no notice of the Rule that was before them for the Sheriff to shew cause, but wisely took up a matter that was before them and decreed the Brigantine Hinchinbrook to the United States, as appears by the proceedings herewith transmitted; this was so gross an imposition and so absurd withal, that it exhausted my patience and determined me to appeal from so stupid a Judgment^e

Colonel White⁶ might as well have bought the Vessel at twenty thousand pounds and when he found the plan he had figured to himself was not fell in with, get the Court to take the burthen off from his Shoulders and throw it on the United States.— The Copy of Colonel White's Letter to me which I enclosed to the Marine Committee will help to throw some light upon this business, and shew the original intention of purchasing the Vessel.— I have been prevented from forwarding the exemplification before, as the Clerk of the Court in the other County sent the papers to me imperfect, altered one part of the proceedings and suppress^d another, which made it necessary to send again to Sunbury to get it properly done, and I have not got it done till to day, I hope however it will reach you within the time limited by Congress as I have given in Security for twenty thousand pound to prosecute it.—

If my Conduct upon this business shall be justified by Congress, which I presume will be the case, I hope the extra cost and expences attending it will be paid by those who caused the extra trouble, and obstructed the regular proceedings in the first instance.—

The question to be determined by Congress I apprehend is, if I shall be oblig'd to take a Vessel for the United States, which was bought by another person without my knowledge or concurrence, and with which I refused to have any thing to do upon an application made to me by the purchaser for that purpose, and assigned reasons to him and the Marine Committee for such refusal, which I hope will prove satisfactory; others may now be offered, which is the impossibility of Manning the Vessel; before this can be effected her Bottom will be eat out by the Worms without great care, and the price of her a dead loss to the public if I had acquieced in the decision of the Court.— As nothing in this way had happened here before, and being desirous to do what was right, I wrote to Charles Town to be informed how the business of the *Randolph*⁷ Frigate's Prizes was conducted and resolved to observe the same Conduct my self as nearly as possible, which I suppose to have been proper. I am with great respect

1. Neither letter has been found, but the contents of the letter of 1 June are discussed in a resolve of Congress of 29 July, below. George Richardson was an express rider; Edward Telfair was a delegate to Congress from Georgia who took his seat on 13 July.

2. Wereat enclosed a series of court findings and orders of Georgia Chief Justice John Glen and of the "Special Court" held at Sunbury. He discusses most of these in his letter to Laurens.

3. The county seat of Liberty County was Sunbury, which was where the associate justices met.

4. Col. Samuel Elbert of the Georgia Continental line who commanded the galleys that captured the three British vessels. For more on this engagement, see Elbert to Maj. Gen. Robert Howe, 19 Apr. 1778, NDAR 12: 138–39.

5. Sheriff Samuel Moorcock.

6. Presumably, Col. John White, who commanded a detachment of troops serving on board the Georgia galley Lee during the capture of Hinchinbrook.

COLONEL CHARLES COTESWORTH PINCKNEY TO BRIGADIER GENERAL WILLIAM MOULTRIE

Dear General,

Sunberry, [Ga.], July 23d, 1778.

It is with the greatest pleasure I embrace this opportunity of informing you that the sea air has already had a surprizing effect on the men with me; the weak and convalescents are getting strong daily, and the sick recovering fast. We have been hitherto, very much crowded in our vessels, but as the Georgia troops will be landed here, we shall soon have more room: I shall be able to procure the gallies of Georgia by Gen. Howe, and Commodore Bowlan's¹ orders, to carry us to Port-Royal ferry, from thence, (without I receive orders to the contrary, as the Georgia gallies will go no futher with us) I shall march the men to Charlestown; the sick and ailing I shall send round by water, together with our baggage, and that the men may be better accommodated on their short march, I shall send off in detachments of 40's and 50's, so that they will be able to sleep under cover in gentlemen's barns at night. I shall direct the commanding officers of these detachments, to draw upon you for money, to pay for what rations the men may want on their march: if you do not approve of any thing above proposed, an express will meet me (if you chuse to send one) time enough to bring me your orders, at Port-Royal ferry, as our passage through the inland navigation is very tedious and slow, and I do not imagine we shall be able to get from this place these two days. I dare say it will be a fort-night before we arrive in Charlestown. . . . I do not write to Gen. Howe, as I do not know whether he has left Georgia. One campaign to the southward is more fatiguing than five to the northward. The artillery I shall order to Fort Lyttleton at Port-Royal. I am. &c.

JOURNAL OF THE CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY

[Lebanon, Conn.]

At a meeting of the Governor and Council of Safety at Mrs. Alden's, Lebanon, specially called and met on Fryday the 24 July, 1778.

Letters just received from Gen. Sullivan,¹ advising that they are in expectation of immediate attack from the enemy at R. Island,² who will be 11,000 strong, in a day or two &c., requesting aid &c.

Another from Gen^l Washington of the 22d. at W. Plains, informing that the French admiral, not able to get into N. York for want of sufficient depth of water &c., were sailing to New Port &c., and requesting aid to cooperate with them, and that he is sending a detachment from his army &c. &c., and requesting pilots for the fleet &c.³

Considered those and a number of other letters, and agreed to request and direct Mr. Shaw⁴ to furnish a sufficient number of pilots forthwith and send off to the fleet;⁵ and a letter prepared and signed by the Governor and sent by express (Loomis) for that purpose.

1. Maj. Gen. John Sullivan, Continental Army. Sullivan received intelligence on the evening of 22 July that made him fear that the British intended an attack. CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO THE CONTINENTAL NAVY BOARD OF THE EASTERN DEPARTMENT

The Commiss^s of the Navy Board at Boston

Gentlemen

[Philadelphia] July 24th 1778

We have received your Sundry Letters of the 12th 24th & 29th. ultimo and of the 4th 7th & 8th Current to which we shall now reply in their order.¹ To yours of the 12th Ultimo. Our letter to you of the 11th instant will convey our Instructions for every possible endeavour being exerted in preparing for Sea the Continental Vessels of war in your department and for sending them out one after another to join the Squadron of France under the command of vice Admiral the Count D'Estaing therefore we hope before this will reach, that you will have dispatched the Warren and that others will shortly follow. We enclose herewith A Set of Signals received from the french Admiral, Copys of which you will deliver to our Commanders enjoining great Secrecy and in case of necessity that they destroy them.² We approve of your having purchased A Schooner for bringing round the flour and Iron from Senepuxent. In a Letter from William Smith Esq^r our Agent in Maryland of the 15th instant is the following Paragraph. “I am sorry to inform you there is the greatest reason to beleive Captain Whippy of the Schooner Loyalty is Captured by the enemy in his outward bound passage from Senepuxent—he had on board upwards of 900 Barrels flour and A quantity of bar Iron, and I am informed he was imprudent as to go to sea when three of the enemies Cruizers were in sight—they were seen in chase of him, and as he is so dull a sailor, there is very Small hopes of his having escaped—The Swan Captain Stiles arrived from Boston at Senepuxent about the 23d ultimo, his Cargo of flour and Iron was all ready and doubt not she is dispatched before this.” Should the Schooner be taken it will be a disappointment and we think Captain Whippys conduct will be highly reprehensible.³—

To yours of the 24th ultimo. The estimate of Monies wanted in your Department hath been laid before Congress who have granted the full amount we therefore send you five hundred & Twenty four thousand by the Bearer according to his Receipt enclosed⁴—this large sum we hope will be fully adequate to all your wants, and enable you to prosecute with vigour the business of your Department, we have no doubt but that you will render the expenditure thereof as beneficial to the public as possible.

To yours of the 29th Ultimo. We are much pleased to hear of Captain Scimmers Success and the arrival of his Prizes.⁵ To prevent delay and inconvenience hereafter as was the Case with regard to the Brigantine Resistance being without a Commander, we empower you to appoint to any Vessel under 20 Guns any Captain that may be unemployed in your department. We shall lay before Congress the Sentences of the Courts Martial relative to Captains Manly and McNeill.⁶ The Account you give of the Hampdens Stores has determined us to Countermand the Orders we formerly gave to build a hull accomodated to them therefore we desire you may drop that plan.⁷ When a proper opportunity shall present and you may think M^r Pecks⁸ Talents in the construction of Ships will be useful to the Public, you will please to give us notice. We shall overlook Captain Waters mistake and consider his appointment the first oppor^t.⁹ We enclose herewith an order of the Board of War to their Agents in the Eastern States to furnish you with Blankets, Duck, Oznabrigs Coarce Linnen, Stockings and Coarse Cloths, lead Copper &c: which they may have in their possession, and you may want for fitting out the Ships of war in your Department. As most of these articles are essentially necessary for the Army and will be much wanted in the Winter we request you will be sparing of them as possible. To yours of the 4th instant. We enclose herein A Resolve of Congress of the 15th November 1776 respecting the Bounty allowed for Men and Guns taken from the enemy at sea.¹⁰ It is the opinion of this Committee that Men of war and Privateers are the only Vessels that comes within the meaning of this Resolve, therefore on all Vessels coming within this discription the Bounty is to be paid but none other. We have ordered the Navy Board here to make a return of the British Seamen that are Prisoners within their district, when they do we shall attend to your proposal of Exchanging them for ours at Halifax and will write you.¹¹ For the present we desire you will engage Pilots for our Ships of war on the best terms you can. We wish to know your reasons for having Pilots established in the Navy—we apprehend they are founded on some local custom with you with which we are unacquainted.—You will also inform us what pay and share of Prize Money should be allowed to Pilots. We never have allowed any Commission to any of our Captains for disbursing Money, and would by no means have that Custom introduced. As we do not think proper that the Public should be concerned with individuals in Vessels of War we cannot accept of M^r Ginons proposals.¹²

To yours of the 7th instant. We do not approve of going into the custom of allowing travelling expences to the officers of the Navy, but on account of the particular circumstances attending Lieutenant Leeds¹³ of the Navy Brig Resistance we make him a gratuity of the amount of his account viz £56.7.9 which you will please to pay.

To yours of the 8th instant. As you think the ship Queen of France will do for a Cruizing Ship we desire she may be equipped accordingly and the Command of her given to Captain Joseph Olney. The One half of the sea Books you mention you will please to send forward to this place.

It is our desire that you have the accounts of the building fitting &c of the Hancock & Boston frigates compleatly settled and examined and sent forward to us. It is also our desire that you keep seperate and distinct accounts of all Vessels ordered to be built within your Department, and that you regularly furnish this Committee with the Cost of each when fitted for the Sea; and that afterwards you keep separate and distinct accounts of the Disbursements of each Vessel and furnish us with them in that manner. You will direct the Commanders that sail by your Orders to inform this Committee of all occurrences that may happen on their Voyages.

You will please to hold a Court of Inquiry on Captain Johnstons conduct relative to the loss of the Continental Brig Lexington of which he was Commander.¹⁴ M^r. Bradford the Agent at Boston hath lately remitted to us a bill drawn by Otis & Andrews on the Clothier General James Mease Esq^r. at this place for 29.651 $\frac{1}{3}$ Dollars being for Prize Goods which they purchased of him—we desire you will inform M^r Bradford, that he is to charge this Bill to your Board and not to the Marine Committee, as he and all other Agents in your department are to settle their transactions with you. We shall shortly transmit you the Money for the above Bill. We are Gentlemen [&c.]

P:S: we send this Letter by Post being anxious to communicate the contents—the 254000 dollars shall be sent off immediately after it

A Philadelphie le 24. Juillet 1778

Monsieur

Le pilote Thomson m'a fait grand plaisir en m'aportant de vos nouvells et en me faisant pressentir que par votre genie et par votre activité les difficultés que vous rencontrés pourront être Surmontées et vos Succès assurés. Oserai, je vous Suplier de charger quelqu'un de profiter des occasions qui Se presenteront, pour me faire instruire des nouvelles courantes de l'Escadre. On m'en demande tous les jours de la part du Congrès.

Le Pilote m'assure que vous étiez instruit de la croisiere du Roebuk et d'une autre fregatte.¹ M de S^t Cesaire² esperoit que vous l'envoyeriés degager ; il attend toujours les avis que les officiers des lieux ont ordre de lui donner Si les deux vaisseaux ennemis quittent leur Station. L'eau et les vivres abondant maintenant sur l'Escadre. M de S^t Cesaire se determinera peutêtre à laisser les deux prises dans la Delaware.

Depuis que j'ai remis un paquet pour vous, Monsieur, au Cap Nicholson,³ j'ai appris que le Gnal Washington vous avoit envoyé un Aide de Camp.

Le Cap Courter⁴ qui aura l'honneur de vous remettre cette lettre, passe ici pour un homme plein de zele, de bravoure et d'intelligence. Il va vous offrir Ses Services. Il a envoyé son batiment au [bout] de la riviere nous rapporter des nouvelles à M de S^t Cesaire. Ce batiment Suivra la fregatte.

On S'occupe fortement à preparer le tiers des approvisionemens que j'ai demandé, ainsi que j'ai eu l'honneur de vous en rendre compte. J'attends instructions ultérieures sur cet objet et sur tous ceux que vous voudrés me charger de traiter d'après les bases eventuelles que vous aves bien voulu me confier. Je Suis [&c.]

At Philadelphia 24 July 1778

Sir

The pilot Thomson has given me great pleasure in bringing your news and in informing me that by your genius and by your activity the difficulties that you will meet can be surmounted and your success assured. I dare to beg you to assign someone to profit from occasions that present themselves to inform me of the current news of the squadron. I am asked about it every day on the part of the Congress.

The pilot assures me that you are informed of the cruising of the Roebuck and of another frigate.¹ M. de S^t Cesaire² hopes that you will send to extricate him; he still awaits the advice that the officers of the place have orders to give him if the two enemy ships leave their station. The water and the victuals abounding now in the squadron, M de St. Cesaire might decide to leave the two prizes in the Delaware.

Since I sent you a packet, Sir, by Capt. Nicholson,³ I have learned that Gen. Washington has sent you an aide de camp.

Capt. Courter,⁴ who will have the honor of delivering this letter, passes here as a man full of zeal, of bravery, and of intelligence. He will offer you his services. He has sent his ship to the mouth of the river to report news to M de S^t Cesaire. This ship will follow the frigate.

They are strongly occupied in preparing the third of the provisions that I have requested, as I have had the honor of reporting to you. I await the latest instructions on this matter and on all those that you may want to charge me with handling according to the contingent bases that you have chosen to entrust to me. I am [&c.]

A GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY OF THE STATE OF SOUTH-CAROLINA, FRIDAY, JULY 24, 1778

CHARLES-TOWN, July 22.

Malcolm, M'Guire, and Johnson, 3 deserters from the 2d regiment of this State,¹ taken on board the Tonyn's Revenge privateer from St. Augustine,² having been tried, and received sentence of death, the first has been shot, and the two others reprieved.

The further proceeding in the expedition from Georgia into East Florida is suspended; as there is little to fear from the incursions of the enemy in that quarter, since they have destroyed and abandoned Fort Tonyn on St. Mary's River, which they quit- ted so precipitately, as to leave all their baggage behind, hidden in different places, to fall into the hands of our troops.³

1. The South-Carolina and American General Gazette of 30 July, gives the deserters' regiment as the "first regiment." This would have been either the First or Second South Carolina Continental regiment.

THOMAS SMITH TO CAPTAIN THOMAS GIBBONS

Sir

Williamsburg [Va.] 24 July 1778.

You will please to proceed immediatly over to Gloucester County, and apply to Captain John Young, who has at present the Command of the Schooner May Flower, and is now having her Caulked and fitted properly for the reception of a Cargo,¹ as soon as she is in readiness, bring her up to the landing Called Blasinghams on Queens Creek, then come to Town to receive orders, for loading.² At present I conceive Cap- tain Young has more hands than are immediatly necessary for his use, therefore you will apply for such as he can Conveniently spare,³ if not a sufficient Number, you must engage others of the best terms you can, giving a preference to Stout able Bodied Negro's which I have always found may be hired at lower Wages, and be made to do more duty then Common white men, Be cautious and run no risk in coming two far up the Creek, make what dispatch you can—I am [&c.]

THOMAS SMITH TO CAPTAIN JOHN YOUNG

Sir

W^mburg [Va.] 24th July 1778

This will be delivered you by Cap^t Thomas Gibbons who comes over to take the Command of the Schooner May Flower;¹ I hope she is refitted by this as she is much wanted for the purpose of carrying a Load of Powder to Fredericksburg and other purposes if you can spare Captain Gibbons any hands pray do it. and give him any assistance you can in getting the Schooner over to Queens Creek, & inform him how far he may venture to run her up with safty to Load, I observe by a letter received from Captain Charles Thomas at the Publick Rope yard, that he has furnished you with a large Quantity of different kinds rope. let me know what you have kept. for the use of your Boat & what was delivered Captain Wrenn,² also an account of the Bread you retained— On Consulting with the Honble David Jamerson Esq^r.³ he is of Opinion that your Boat should be Rigged as a schooner or sloop either of which you may do, but by no means think of her being Rigged as a Brigg, which you will take notice accordingly⁴ I hope before this the Boat is launched, and that you will soon be ready for Orders where to load, Let me hear from you soon, and write me fully how matters are going I am [&c.]

GOVERNOR PATRICK TONYN OF EAST FLORIDA TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

[Extract]

My Lord

[S^t Augustine 24th. July 1778]

. . . From the best accounts the Rebel Forces appear to have been about Eight hundred with their Gallies and armed Vessels, and between two and three thousand Land forces of which one half were Carolinians under the Command of the Rebel General How and Williamson, the other regulars and Militia from Georgia immediately under the Command of their Rebel Governor Houstoun,¹ mostly forced into the Service and many were enticed by the prospect of plunder thrown out as a Bait by their Governor’s Proclamation.²

In twelve days after our Provincial Naval forces were stationed in S^t John’s River so as effectually to secure it, Captain Elphinstone of the Perseus and the *Otter*³ arrived off this Coast, and soon after nigh five hundred Seminoly Indians advanced within a days march of the Enemy, and a short distance from the King’s forces.

These concurring circumstances I apprehend and finding their scouting Parties continually embarrassed by our Troops on the north of S^t John’s, determined them to relinquish their designs, and I have the honour of informing Your Lordship of their retreat without being able to effectuate any mischief in the Province or indeed doing any more than showing their numbers and Strength.⁴ Plans were formed to destroy their Gallies by Captain Elphinstone with our Naval force, but I apprehend they will have made their escape, and I wish the army could have been attacked in their retreat. . . .⁵

After pointing out the Establishment of proper Posts for the defence of S^t Mary’s River, I shall meditate on the necessary preparations for the conquest of Georgia and Carolina when Lord Howe and Sir Henry Clinton’s Operations are turned that way, that all our assistance may be in readiness for exertion with the Fleet and Army, so as to employ our Rangers and our Naval force to the best advantage, as the expenses of Equipment and maintaining these departments have been very considerable. I have the honour to be [&c.]

5. In a letter of 17 July to Brig. Gen. Augustine Prevost, Tonyn wrote that after conferring with George Keith Elphinstone they had agreed that if Prevost could send 250 men on an expedition with the naval forces, Elphinstone could "with the Perseus, Otter, and our provincial naval armament, render their designs against the Province abortive by cutting off the rebel galleys in St. Mary's or by penetrating to Savannah or Sunbury." Keith Papers 1: 109-10.

July 25

GOVERNOR SIR FREDERICK HALDIMAND TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

[Extract]

(N^o. 1.)

Quebec 25th July 1778—

My Lord:

I had the Honor of acquainting Your Lordship by a former one of the 30th of June,¹ of my Arrival here at Night the 26th, landing the next Day, and immediately, with the usual Ceremonies, put into Possession of the Government, and Command of the Forces, agreeable to His Majesty's Commissions—². . .

The Want here of Intelligence, for a long Continuance of Time, principally from Europe and the Scene of War, might prove highly disadvantageous to the King's Service in this Part of the World; till the Arrival of our Fleet, there had been no accounts from Great Britain for nine or ten Months, but what were conveyed in Rebel Newspapers, or those brought in from foreign Ports, or the West Indies; I am assured, that the Intelligence brought in by scouting Parties, Royalists, or Deserters, has hitherto in General proved far wide of the Truth, and no wonder, considering the Number of Lies industriously circulated through every Part of America; a Vessel or two from Halifax have arrived this Season, and we are still ignorant of the real State of Affairs to the Southward—

This determined me to purchase a small Rebel Privateer, that came up within forty Leagues of the Town, taken by the Triton, after having made four Prizes, and plundered one of the King's Post, in the River,³ and as she goes exceedingly well, I design her for a Advise Boat between this Place and Halifax, for which Service she is now preparing; this may however prove of little Avail, except the Commander in Chief upon the Sea Coasts⁴ be directed to forward there, for my Information, from time to time, Accounts of the Movements upon that side, and the Intelligence He procures of the Rebels Designs, as that may help to decide the Measures, the King's Service requires me to take upon this, and the Vessels employed in this Business, will still be cruising against the Enemy—

Your Lordship must be the best Judge of the Mode of conveying more frequent Intelligence from Europe to this Province; were some of the unemployed Packets, or other light Vessels, well armed, to sail at the Interval of a Month or six Week from each other, while the Navigation is open, it might prove of singular Advantage to the King's Service, it would be very agreeable, and Beneficial, I believe, to the trading Interest, both at Home & abroad—. . .

Several Applications have been made to me since my Arrival for Letters of Marque, but notwithstanding Your Lordship's circular Letter of 10th. January,⁵ I do not find, I am impowered to grant them, the Lords of the Admiralty not having yet vested me with any Authority for that Purpose—. . . I have the Honor to be with great Respect My Lord: Your Lordship's &c

In a paragraph of that report that discusses naval affairs, Haldimand wrote: "The navy upon the lakes are by the best accounts in very good order and put upon an exceeding proper footing. An unremitted attention must be paid to the keeping them up to see they are well officered and well manned, for upon securing the navigation of the lakes as well as the portages the safety and preservation of the upper posts must very much depend." MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

Head Quarters Providence [R.I.] 25 July 1778

My Dear Sir

Though I feel myself exceeding happy in having so able & approved an Officer as the Count De Estaing to co-operate with the Forces I have the Honor to command in reducing the common Enemy and though I already anticipate the Joys of Victory from the Strength of Your Fleet, the Zeal of Your Troops and the Ardor of my own, yet it becomes my Duty to inform You of every unfortunate Event which has already happened or may probably turn up in the Course of our Efforts to reduce the Enemy General Washington's Letter of the 17th Inst^t notifying me that there was at least a Possibility of Your Excellencys being disappointed in Your Designs against the Enemy's Fleet at New York for Want of a sufficient Depth of Water to come at them and that in Case of Failure You would operate in this Quarter did not arrive 'till the 22^d. Ins^t. after Noon;¹ the positive Order for the Attempt & which notified me of Your Excellencys having sailed from Sandy Hook was handed me by the Generals Aid Lieut. Col^o. Laurens² the 24th at 2 °Clock At that Time I had sixteen Hundred standing Forces, & scarcely a Sufficiency of Provisions for them & was under no Apprehension of such an Attempt in this Quarter. Added to all this the Enemy in their Descent on the 25th of May last had burned almost all the Boats prepared for a Descent³—But as this short Notice arose from natural & necessary Causes which could not have been foreseen I have used every Endeavor to prevent Your Excell^{ys}. being delayed in Your Design—I have forwarded the Pilots who will wait Your Signal at Point Judith: I have also collected a considerable Number of Boats sufficient I hope to make good our Landing under the Fire of Your Ships: I have established a Chain of Expresses on both Sides Rhode Island⁴ upon the Main for the Purpose of receiving from & carrying to Your Excell^y every Kind of Intelligence that may be thought necessary I will also have Boats plying in the Bay round Your Fleet for the same Purpose when it arrives—I have taken every Step to procure Provisions & other necessaries that the Time would permit & I flatter myself we shall not be disappointed. I am exceeding sorry that our Situation renders it uncertain whether we can co-operate the Moment of Your Arrival—The Marquis La Fayette⁵ is on his March with a division of the main Army. I trust he will be here in four Days—As his Troops may be depended on & mine are principally Militia I think the Attempt even if we were ready in other Respects would be hazardous before his Arrival But as Your Fleet is superior to every Thing on the Sea I think no great Difficulty can arise from a Delay of one or two Days after Your Arrival should that from the above Circumstances happen. There are three Entrances to the Harbor viz. one on the East of Rhode Island at Seconnet Point,⁶ one on the West called the middle Channel which runs between Rhode Island and Conannicut which Island of Conannicut⁷ lies to the westward of Rhode Island to the westward of which is still another Channel called the West Channe^l⁸—This will at once appear to Your Excell^y. on View of the Map which I sent You by Lieu^t Col^o Laurens & will be sufficiently explained to You by the Pilots sent onboard—

I have not sufficient Knowledge in the Management of Fleets to give Your Excell^y any Advice or useful Hints upon Your Operations under the present Circumstances but You will pardon me in offering the Thoughts which have occurred upon View of the Harbor, the Ships of the Enemy &c; and if my Hints should betray a Want of Knowledge in Naval Operations You will please to remember that I have already confessed my Ignorance in these affairs & am far from a full Dependence on my own Judgement—

I think the Mouth of the East Channel should be blocked up immediately on Your Arrival by three Frigates or by two Frigates and a small Ship of the Line: The Enemy have in that Channel a small Sloop of War⁹ with two large Gallies:¹⁰ they cannot remove as our Batteries above will prevent their going up & Your Ships below will prevent their going out—These Frigates will be ready to move up when notified that we are ready to go on & can soon silence the Enemy's Vessels & cover our Landing from Tiverton—I would also place four of the next smaller Vessels that can be spared at the Mouth of the west Channel, three of which should be sent up to capture two small Frigates¹¹ which lay in that Channel—These Ships may turn Conannicut Island on the North, fall into the Bay above Rhode Island & lay out of Shot from any Part of the Shore with their Prizes & remain there till they are notified to fall down to cover the Landing of Troops or assist in such other Operations as Your Excellency shall order—The Rest of Your Fleet should in my Opinion take Possession of the Middle Channel leading between Conannicut & Rhode Island and commonly called ~~Rhode Island~~ Newport Harbour & lay there out of Reach of their Forts till we are ready to co-operate with You—This Disposition will in my Opinion cut off all Possibility of Retreat from the Enemy, prevent their receiving Reinforcements & enable Your Excell^y to co-operate with us whenever we are ready to act of which Your Excellency shall be timely advised—There are not in this Department more than seven or eight small Frigates¹² unless lately arrived & cannot at any Event be sufficient to injure You in this Disposition.

I shall notify Your Excell^y when we are ready and of the Plan of Landing that You may order such Ships as You think proper to cover our Landing—The Enemy have a Number of Redoubts scattered through the Island upon commanding Eminences all of which I mean to pass after my Landing & proceed to the Town of Newport, which is defended on the Land Side by a Chain of Redoubts on an Eminence which runs nearly across the Island & commands the Town: These must be stormed & I doubt not will be carried without much Difficulty if attacked in the Manner hereafter mentioned—I wish at the Time of our Landing Your Excell^y would make a Show of landing Your Troops at or near Newport to deceive and amuse the Enemy & to give us an opportunity of getting possession of the Island—When we are ready to storm the Redoubts we will fix upon a Signal to notify Your Excell^y & then if it appears advisable You will move up Your Ships to cannonade the Town of Newport which must soon be abandoned and then land all the Troops You can possibly spare under Fire of Your Cannon to co-operate with us in our Attempt upon the Redoubts above the Town—The Reason of my passing the Redoubts on the north Part of the Island is because we can pass clear of their Fire & as no Possibility of Retreat or Escape will remain we can reduce them at our Leisure after having made ourselves Masters of the Town—I shall have a sufficient Number of Troops to watch their Motions & keep them within bounds—The Reason of my wishing the larger Part of Your Force being destined to block up the Middle Channel is to prevent a Reinforcements being thrown upon the Island from New York, to render Your Fleet so strong as to prevent any Attempt of the Enemy's Fleet from New York & to co-operate with those Ships which pass up the west Channel & turn Conannicut in preventing three British Reg^{ts}. now encamp'd on that Island from passing over in their Boats to reinforce the Troops on Rhode Island who after that is carried must all become Prisoners of Course—Your Excell^y will please to pardon my Freedom in giving these Hints—Your much superior Judgement will induce You to reject those which You conceive improper & improve on those which You may deem worthy of Notice—I should be happy to have Your Advice & Opinion upon the Operations which Colo. Laurens will instruct Your Excell^y how to forward—I shall be exceeding happy to have Your Excell^{ys} Opinion with Respect to every Land Operation as well as Your Instructions respecting those by Water—I shall cheerfully co-operate with You in executing those Measures which You may think most adviseable & have the Honor to be [&c.]

LIEUTENANT COLONEL JOHN LAURENS TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Point Judith [R.I.] 40 Miles from Providence—25th July 1778.

Sir.

I had the honor of writing to your Excellency from Lebanon- the 23^d ins^t the day following at 3 o'clock in the afternoon I arrived at Providence- as soon as I had delivered Gen^l Sullivan Your Excellencys dispatches and instructions- I set out for this place with Colo Wall and an ample number of Pilots which General Sullivan had provided,² and put under his command—Col. Wall is a man of Character and property perfectly acquainted with the coast &ca—those under him are experienced Pilots and men of responsibility—We arrived here at nine O'clock this morning—having been detained till that time in procuring a party of militia—and making arrangements both for securing such boats as we shall want for our own immediate use—and such as without this precaution might be employed in communicating intelligence to the enemy—We have agreed with four whale-boat privateers belonging to Connecticut manned with enterprising experienced mariners—and pressed four belonging to this state—we have given them to understand that the Frigate laying at Connecticut River³ is to push out of the sound—and that we are to meet her with hands to enable her to go round and join the french fleet—for which purpose their boats are necessary—the number that we have is amply sufficient for our business—and now we are in readiness—two Sentinels will be posted in an advantageous place whose business will be to attend to whatever signals may be given from the Sea-board—besides which Col Wall the Master-pilots and myself will alternately hold watch and keep our attention awake—’till last night 12 OClock, unfavorable winds have prevailed—if the Gale which we have at present does not prove inconstant, it will not be long before we are called upon—Our Situation commands a view of the several entrances to New-port— and block island is directly opposite to us—so that nothing can pass to or from New-port unnoticed—Gen^l Sullivan estimates the enemys land force here at 7000—the state of their Shipping he informs me is as follows—in the E. Channel (or that between Seconet Point and Rhode Island) 2 Galleys and 1 Small frigate—in the East Channel (or that between Boston neck⁴ and Connanicut Island) 2 small frigates—In the Middle or main Channel 2 Frigates—at Newport 2 or 3 Frigates[.] As Gen^l Sullivan will probably write to Your Excellency—I forbear descending to farther particulars—he has been indefatigable and nothing on his part will be wanting—I have the honor [&c.]

“The express just going, shall employ the present moment to inform you, that yesterday afternoon Col. Laurens¹ (Aid to Gen. Washington) arrived in town in forty-eight hours from Head-Quarters, with dispatches for Gen. Sullivan.² What I have collected of material consequence is, to hold himself in readiness to co-operate with the French fleet,³ who might be expected at Rhode Island every moment. Last evening thirty pilots were dispatched for Point-Judith, to go on board the fleet; and every disposition is making for landing a body of troops on the island.⁴ The enemy have, for ten days past, wrought with great industry in fortifying every entrance into the harbour,⁵ and thrown up many additional works on their out posts. Their Strength is supposed to be near six thousand. Two brigades are on their march from the main army.⁶ Col. Laurens was on board the French Admiral⁷ at Sandy-Hook a few hours, in which time they captured eight of the enemy’s ships, four or five of them armed vessels, private property.[”]

GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL OF CONNECTICUT TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

[Extract]

Sir

Lebanon 25th- July- 1778

I received a Letter from Maj^r General Sullivan of the 22nd advising that he expects the Enemy will make a Descent on Providence in a very short time—that they are now 7,000 Strong, and in a day or two will be eleven, requesting aid from this State—¹ Although we are exceedingly exhausted of Men &c—and this critical moment for securing the Labours of the last and the produce of this year, which is of essential consequence, rendered it additionally distressing to take off more of our Militia—yet, I doubt not, we should have made an effort to support them—But before we had come to a full determination, Your Excellency's Favor of the 22nd from White Plains came to hand, advising of Admiral D. Estaing's Design at Rhode Island which has greatly relieved our anxiety for the Fate of Providence.² I was this Day with my Council³ considering how and in what manner to raise or furnish aid &c agreeable to your Excellency's Requisition when I just received another Letter from Maj^r Gen^l Sullivan of yesterday requesting,⁴ from authority derived from you, five hundred Militia from the State, to act under his Command at Providence—So exceedingly difficult was it to take off any more from the pressing Labours in the Field, that instead of it, we have thought it necessary to call these Companies from our Sea Coasts, which strips them from Fairfield to New London, and leaves us none of four Regiments raised heretofore by enlistment and detachment for our own Defence, in addition to all in the various Continental Services in which so many of our Inhabitants are engaged—

If a larger number of the Enemy's Troops should be drawn from New-York to New-Port than Your Excellency was aware of, perhaps you may be able to spare a further Detachment from your Army, so as to release our Men who will leave our Sea Coasts exposed—

Agreeable to your desire signified by Lieu^t Colonel Lawrens,⁵ I yesterday gave orders for a suitable number of Skillful Pilots to be sent out from New London in quest of the French-Fleet whose seasonable aid appears probable to be of very great importance, and with whom this State will be forward to cooperate to the utmost of our power—. . . I am with great Esteem & Regard [&c.]

JOURNAL OF THE CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY

[Lebanon, Conn. 25 July 1778]

Saturday 25th, met again, at the Governor's.

Considered further of the affairs under consideration yesterday. And a letter of the 24th came in by express, from M. Gen^l Sullivan at Providence, counting upon the resolve of Congress of the 11th inst. authorizing Gen^l Washington to call upon the Eastern States for aid to coöperate with the French Admiral De Estaing, and by directions from Gen^l Washington, he, Gen^l Sullivan, requests 500 militia from this State, for that purpose.¹

Upon the requisition of his Excellency Gen^l Washington and Maj^r Gen^l Sullivan's letter for five hundred men to be sent to Providence &c.: Resolved, that Col. Oliver Smith with the two companies of draughted militia, except the guard stationed at Lyme, and Lt. Col. Gallop² with one company of the six battalions now at New London, Major Backus³ with the two of draughted militia at Newhaven, Capt. [blank] Pitkin with his company at Fairfield, and Capt. [blank] with his company at Fairfield, and Capt. Tyler⁴ with his company of matrosses, be ordered by the Capt. General⁵ forthwith to march to Providence and join the forces there under command of Major Gen^l Sullivan. The seven companies of infantry to form one under the command of the abovementioned field officers.

Resolved, That Sam^l Eliot, Esq^r, agent for this State, be directed by the Governor to sell the prize goods belonging to this State which were taken by the *Oliver Cromwell*⁶ and *Defence*⁷ and bro't into Boston, to the best advantage of this State: except the lead and such other military and naval stores as he shall think will be best to have saved, viz: the goods taken on board the Cyrus and the Admiral Keppel.⁸

PETITION OF CAPTAIN HECTOR McNEILL TO THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

To The Honourable, The Continental Congress.

The Petition of Hector McNeill, most humbly Sheweth,

That your petitioner, haveing had the honour of commanding the continental ship Boston, did Sail on a cruise from Nantasket road, on the 21st. of May 1777; in company with, and under the command of John Manley Esq^r: commander of the Hancock—

That dureing the aforesaid cruise a British Frigate, call'd the Fox;¹ was capture'd, by the continental Ships above mentioned; which Frigate was lost on the 7th of July Last, and the Hancock Also on the day following, both taken by the Enemy—

That in consequence of this Loss—courts Martial have been held on both the commanders of the Continental Ships,—by the proceedings of which courts and more especially their finall Sentence,²—Your Petitioner thinks hims[elf] exceedingly agreived; inasmuch as he finds himself thereby rob'd of his reputation and exposed to perpetuall infamy (as he humbly conceives) without even the Shaddow of Law, or justice, as will Sufficently appear by the Severall reasons set forth in his protest of the 30th. June 1778—³

Your Petitioner humbly presumes, that he can make it appear—That he has not been guilty of any offence within the compass of any of the Articles of war Prescribed by the Honourable Congress for the government of the american Navy—and thinks it extreemly hard to be condemn'd by Opinion or Prejudice, without Law—he therefore most humbly implores the mercy, & justice of the honb^{le} Congress, to Save him from the impending ruin, with which he is threatned, and prays that they would order the proceedings of the aforesaid Court Martial to be revised, or take Such other Steps as their wisdom Shall think most Expedient for procureing him that Justice which he finds himself under a Necessity of Seeking from them alone—and your Petitioner as in duty bound will ever pray &c^a &c^a.

With the Schooner Betsey under your Command you will proceed without loss of Time over to the Eastern Shore of Virginia and wait on Southy Simpson Esq^r¹ and he can in probability inform you in whose care the State's Goods were Lodged that came in the Rambler Captⁿ Buffington—² if not, you must make diligent enquiry after them, which being found you'll take, such steps as are necessary to get them on board your Vessel, as I suppose they are not sufficient to Load you, it will be incumbent on you to endeavour to procure an Additional Freight to make your Load complete—However do not spend any unnecessary Time in this pursuit, as the States Goods are much wanting here, I must recommend to you to use all possible care & Industry and return to Queens Creek & come up to Blessinghams Landing—³ Forward my Letters, I am [&c.]

GOVERNOR PATRICK TONYN OF EAST FLORIDA TO CAPTAIN GEORGE KEITH ELPHINSTONE, R.N.

Sir,

[S^t Augustine 25th. July 78]

As it was discernible, no attempt would be timely made of a diversion in Georgia, with design to compel the rebels to divide their forces Your favours of the 19 & 23. Instant¹ were no surprises to me—

When the rebels came forward to this province they left on Cumberland Island three hundred men sick of a bad infectious fever, they may have views of fortifying that Island and renewing the old fort on the south end of it, which commands the Harbour; it appears probable as the Gallies are stationed in proximity to the Fort.²

I think it would be an important object to the rebels to seize this advantageous Post, and perhaps it is their intention. This once effected they would be enabled to make this province in a very uneasy situation.

It would therefore be of equal consequence to us to prevent such operation and could it be discoverable immediately dislodge them before they had strengthened the Island. Saint Mary's Harbour would be rendered useless to us without we were Masters of that Island. I have for these reasons wrote to Captain Moncrief and beg'd of him to take measures accordingly, and I intreat you will second the report if any be made, that our views to fix S^t Marys harbour for the accomodation of the Kings Ships may not be frustrated and of holding the Rebels at a greater distance from this province.³

The arrival of the french Squadron in the Chesopeak leaves little room to doubt of an immediate declaration of War on the part of Great Britain, which is likewise signified to me by the proper Channel, to make the necessary preparations for such event, and to encourage the fitting out privateers for that purpose.

Our post of Saint Mary's is therefore more necessary to be secured from attempts which may be made by french Ships.

We hear L^d Viscount Howe had collected all his force at Sandy Hook consisting of seven 64, 5 fifty's & 4 forty fours. If this be true I am in certain hopes that the french Squadron are by this time totally defeated and will never get out of the Chesopeak.

The Brigadier General⁴ mentions that he had orderd Captain Wolf⁵ to cooperate with you with a hundred and forty men, and had left them purposely at Hesters Bluff.

If you require further assistance the Rangers⁶ are posted at Trout Creek and may easily march to the Town Ship on St Mary's, or pass the narrows to Amelia Island.

I have some thoughts of paying you a visit I could come to Hesters Bluff and the Narrows in case your operations extend so far.

The Carpenters here warrant the Thunderer to be sufficient to support the Guns, She was tried with them before she went from hence, and bore the weight of metal admirably, Your Carpenter on a tryal I hope will find her fit for the purpose⁷

The Commissary has received my directions respecting the Ballahoo prisoners,⁸ The rebels are indebted to this province nigh a hundred prisoners, the names of your men are inserted as a demand and opposed to others upon the Cartel List. The Cartel Vessel shall be dispatched as soon as she can be ready. If you desire it she shall call on the Perseus for the four men borne on the Books.

Some difference of opinion has taken rise with Captains Wright and Mowbray,⁹ I shall be much obliged to you to settle any clashing, that no detriment may happen to His Majesty's Service from mistaken punctilios in the Officers. I have the honour to be with great regard, and esteem, Sir, [&c.]

DIARY OF CAPTAIN FREDERICK MACKENZIE, BRITISH ARMY

[Newport] R. ISLAND

26th July. Fine Weather. Wind S.W.

The Faulcon Sloop of War¹ came in this Evening from New York by way of The Sound,² with dispatches from Lord Howe and General Clinton, notifying that the French fleet sailed from off Sandy hook the 22^d Instant; and that in all probability they would make their appearance before this place.

It appears that Lord Howe is at anchor with his fleet within the Bar of Sandy hook, but too weak to venture out to pursue and attack the Enemy.

Admiral Byron³ is hourly expected on the Coast with 11 Sail of the line from England; and as letters directed to him at Halifax have been received there from England three weeks ago, Frigates have been sent to that port, and others are cruizing for him, to give him information of Lord Howe's situation, and direct him to proceed to New York.

Before they had an opportunity of reaching the fleet, they sailed from the Road off Sandy Hook. VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

Duplicate
Number 70.
Sir,

Eagle Sandy Hook
July the 26th: 1778.

I wrote by the Grantham Packet to advise You, for the Information of the Lords Commissioners, that the Army returning from Philadelphia, was moved from the Jersey Shore for New York on the 5th Instant. That on the 29th: preceding, in my Passage from the Delaware,¹ I received your Dispatch of the 3^d: of May, respecting the Force and Destination of the Toulon Squadron, and Appointment of Vice Admiral Byron with the Ships of His Majesty's Fleet under his Command for Halifax; And that I was thereupon preparing those with me here, in readiness for being employed as Circumstances might require.

By this Opportunity you will receive the farther Reports of my Proceedings sent subsequent to the 6th: Instant,² the Date of my first Letter,³ by the Grantham Packet and a later Conveyance.

I have to add, that on the 22^d: in the Morning, the Enemy weighed and stood from before this Port to the Southward, with the Wind to the Eastward, Followed by the Advice-Boats which I had stationed without them. They were left the 23^d: in the Morning in the Latitude of the Delaware and about thirty Leagues from the Land, steering by the Wind at least, on the Larboard Tack.

The Weather having been very favorable the last three Days for prosecuting an Attempt to Force the Entrance of this Port, and the Toulon Squadron not appearing on this Part of the Coast, I conclude the French Commander has desisted from the Purpose he is reported to have declared, to that Effect; But his further Intentions are not yet sufficiently apparent, for enabling me to form any decisive Opinion on the immediate Object of them. I have not therefore seen Cause to make any Change in my former Requisitions left for Vice Admiral Byron to join me here as early as he is able; And must still postpone any positive Resolution on the Part it may be expedient for me to take in the mean Time, with the Force assembled at this Port.

On the 25th. Instant the Dispatch,⁴ sent for Halifax the 10th:, returned with Letters from Captain Feilding⁵ of the 19th;; By which I learn that no Intelligence has been received of the Arrival of Vice Admiral Byron in these Seas.

Captain Feilding, on the most laudable Motives, ordered away the *Centurion*⁶ and *Raisnable*⁷ from that Station, to strengthen the Squadron here, as soon as he heard of the Appearance of the Enemy on this Coast. The two Ships are not yet arrived; But from the last observed Position of the French Squadron, and Easterly Winds since prevailing, I flatter myself they will escape to the Northward of the Enemy, and may be daily expected at the Hook.

The Renown,⁸ which had been appointed to conduct the West-India Convoy to the Latitude of 31°, and 61° Longitude, came in here from Antigua the same Evening with the Dispatch.

Judging the safe Arrival of Letters in England by the Packets, at this Time more especially, to be very uncertain, most of those Vessels proving as ill adapted for fast-sailing as Defence; And being yet unable consistently to detach any Frigates from this Squadron fit for such expeditious Service; I have forwarded Duplicates of the Information⁹ now transmitted by the Hannah Armed Vessel,¹⁰ engaged for the Occasion on the Terms stated in the enclosed Agreement, which I am to hope will meet with their Lordship's Concurrence. I am, with great Consideration, Sir, [&c.]

VICE ADMIRAL JOHN MONTAGU TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

[Extract]

Europe in S^t. Johns Harbour
Newfoundland 27th: July 1778

Sir

For their Lordships information I beg leave to acquaint you I arrived here the 25th Ins^t: having parted Company with two Transports (I called at Cork for.) on the 4th Ins^t:

in a hard gale of Wind. they are not yet arrived. nor is the Martin with her Convoy.¹

By² a Vessell I spoke with from Trinity bound to Bilboa on the 17th Ins^t: I had just time to write a few Lines to Lord Sandwich acquainting his Lordship that on the 10th Ins^t: in Latitude 48°: 35´ [N] Long^{td}: 33°: 54´ [W] I fell in with Rear Admiral Parker,³ and Six Sail of Vice Admiral Byrons⁴ Squadron, four of which were disabled as follows. The *Royal Oak's*⁵ Foremast Sprung, *Grafton's*⁶ Main Mast Sprung, *Sultan's*⁷ Main Mast Sprung and had a Jury Topmast, The *Bedford's*⁸ Main Mast was also sprung, the Fame,⁹ and *Conqueror*¹⁰ were the only two of this part of that Squadron that had not received damage. I was likewise informed that the *Albion*¹¹ had lost her Main Mast and all her Topmasts, and was in the Night of the Gale seen to Fire several Guns in Distress, but at a time when it was not in the power of the Squadron to give her any assistance; The gale which seperated this Squadron was on the 4th Ins^t: since which they could give no account of M^r Byron, nor had they seen any thing of the Albion [since] the Night she Fired her Guns in distress.

On my Arrival here I found the Surprize,¹² Romney,¹³ and Proteus,¹⁴ with the Postillion,¹⁵ and *Bonavista*¹⁶ [armed] Vessels, I am sorry to inform their Lordships that the¹⁷ Surprize in her Passage from Ireland lost her Main Mast; but this misfortune Captain Linzee had recovered before my Arrival by taking the Main Mast out of the Proteus. that Ship being rendered useless, as their Lordships will see by the inclosed report of a Survey taken on her.¹⁸ The Postillion is also, so bad as to make it exceedingly hazardous sending her to Sea. And it is with great concern I acquaint their Lordships that on the 16th of last Month as Captain Frederick¹⁹ of His Majestys Sloop Spy was going in quest of some small Privateers (who had been comitting great depredations on the several Harbours about S^t: Maries²⁰ and Placentia Bay) unfortunately got upon the Rocks off Cape Race in a Thick Fog, and is totally lost. but (with great difficulty) her Crew were all saved. In this situation I am greatly distressed how to perform the services required of me, as also for Ships to Convoy the Trade bound to Market unless their Lordships will be pleased to send me a reinforcement to my Squadron.

By²¹ the inclosed Letters²² their Lordships will see how exceedingly the Harbours to the Southward have been Alarm'd by the small American Privateers. . . . I am Sir [&c.]

JONATHAN MASON, JR., TO JEREMIAH POWELL, PRESIDENT OF THE MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL

[Boston, 27 July 1778]¹

Sir,

Cap^t Allen Hallet has requested me to write a few lines to the Hon^{ble} Council to inform them that he is now ready to sail immediately, equipp'd entirely, saving the want of about twenty Men.—that there are now that number & more on board our Guard Ships that are willing & desirous to enter with him, able bodied & hearty Seamen, who are so fond of going with Him, that they are daily swimming on board his Vessell.—He begs therefore that Council would grant him a power to take from the Guard Ships the Number deficient which will be about twenty, & he will be at Sea in less than four hours.²—He now informs me that Council is not sitt^g to day,³ & begs that I would direct this to your Honor, & request you if you should think it prudent, (considering his circumstances) to grant him your permission for that purpose, which Liberty having before been granted, immediately upon solicitation. I hope his request will be deem'd a sufficient intrusion.—I am Sir [&c.]

In Council July 27th. Read & ordered that the Commissary of Prisoners⁴ be and he hereby is directed to permit such and so many of the Prisoners now on Board the Guard Ship who will voluntarily enlist the Number not to exceed twenty, to go on Board the Brig *Tyrannicide*⁵ Commanded by Allen Hallet Esq^r in the Service of this State

L, M-Ar, Mass. Archives Collection, vol. 169 (Revolution Council Papers, 1778–1779), fols. 38–38a. Addressed on cover: “Hon^{ble}. Jere: Powell—.” Docketed: “351/Application from: Allen/Hallet Commander of the Brig/ Tyrannicide belong^g to this State/for liberty to enlist Twenty Men/from on Board the Guard Ship/ July 27. 1778.” The order is entered in the Journal of the Massachusetts Council, dated 27 July, LB, M-Ar, Mass. Archives Collection, vol. 22 (Council Records, January–October, 1778), p. 351. Jonathan Mason, Jr., (1756–1831) was John Adams’s law clerk.

1. The date is based on the docketing and the order in the Journal of the Massachusetts Council.

2. It appears that Tyrannicide did not sail until 19 Aug. and then only to Barnstable, Massachusetts, where Hallet recruited twelve men to complete his crew. See Hallet to Samuel Philips Savage, 23 Aug., Mass. Archives Coll., vol. 205 (2nd ser., Revolution Letters, 1775–1783), p. 406.

3. Either Capt. Allen Hallet was mistaken about the Council not being in session or the dating given in the docketing is incorrect, because the Council acted on the petition on 27 July.

4. Joseph Henderson, Massachusetts Commissary of Prisoners.

5. The names of the twenty seamen, who were enlisted from the guard (or prison) ship to serve with Massachusetts Navy brigantine Tyrannicide, are listed in a letter to the Massachusetts Council immediately following. THE BOSTON-GAZETTE, AND COUNTRY JOURNAL, MONDAY, JULY 27, 1778

BOSTON, JULY 27.

Besides the grand French squadron now upon the American coast, they have stationed frigates and xebecs at different places to protect their trade. The above fleet have since arrived off Point-Judith.

Orders, it is said, are issued for all the Continental frigates, that are equipped, immediately to join the French fleet.¹

We hear that Capt. Johnson,² who has so well supported the honor of his country as a naval commander, is a first Lieutenant of a capital ship³ in the Count De Estaing’s squadron.

1. Despite these orders, no Continental Navy frigate was able to join the French squadron.

2. Capt. Henry Johnson, Continental Navy. He had formerly commanded Continental Navy brigantine Lexington. Johnson was one of four American captains given passage in d’Estaing’s squadron from France to the United States and served as a pilot in one of its ships of the line.

THE INDEPENDENT LEDGER, AND THE AMERICAN ADVERTISER (BOSTON), MONDAY, JULY 27, 1778

Boston.

. . . Several persons who lately left New-York inform, that the Count D'Estaing was cruising off that place, intercepting all supplies coming into the harbor: That Admiral Lord Howe had laid an embargo there for some weeks past, during which time, none but public vessels had been permitted to sail: That the press for manning the British ships was the most violent ever known, extending even to the Captains of transports, a number of whom had been obliged in the present extremity, to serve on board the British-fleet: That the largest offers had been made to Americans confined in their prison ships to engage them in their service on the present occasion, with promises of soon dismissing them, and setting them on shore in any part of the continent: That Lord Howe, had some time ago sent running vessels to collect his eastern cruizers at Halifax, and those on our coast and to the southward at New-York: That he had left at the last place, 8 or 10 sail from 40 to 64 guns, and a number of smaller ships with which he was fallen down to the Hook,¹ with a design as was given out, to fight the French fleet; and that Admiral Gambier,² had hoisted his flag on board the Emerald frigate, near the city. He lately brought to that place, upwards of forty thousand pounds sterling in specie for the pay of the British army and navy.

We hear that Capt. Thompson, late commander of the Rawleigh, frigate, whom we mentioned some weeks ago as on trial for his behavior at the capture of the Alfred, is broke.³

. . . .
The Warren, Capt. Hopkins,⁴ and another Continental frigate, are immediately to sail, to join the French fleet; all the Continental ships have orders to do the same as soon as possible, and not wait for their complement of hands, as the French fleet is so well manned, as to be able to spare a great number of seamen.⁵

1. Sandy Hook, New Jersey.

2. Rear Adm. James Gambier, RN, Lord Howe's second in command.

3. Capt. Thomas Thompson was charged with not doing his utmost by failing to come to the aid of his consort, ship Alfred, on 9 Mar. 1778. For more on his trial, see Captain Thomas Thompson to William Whipple, 1 July, 8 July and 21 July, above, and 30 July, below.

4. Capt. John Burroughs Hopkins.

5. In spite of these orders, none of the Continental Navy frigates at Boston joined the French squadron, mainly because they were undermanned.

CAPTAIN JOHN BRISBANE, R.N., TO VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE

Copy
My Lord,

Flora off Newport 27th: July 1778

I have just now the Honor of your Lordship's Letter of the 19th: Instant¹ in Answer to mine of the 7th: by the Falcon, since which I wrote You by the Fowey on the 19th: Also your Lordships Orders to make War upon, take or destroy all Ships of the French Nation appearing on the Coast of North America, and have given Orders in Consequence thereof to the Captains and Commanders of the several Ships and Vessels under my Orders.

Major General Sir Robert Pigot acquaints me; the Batteries on Goat Island, Brenton's Neck, Dumplings² and the North End of the Town are put in the best State of Defence possible for the time in order to prevent any hostile Intention of the Enemy.

Agreeable to your Lordship's Intimation respecting the Ships under my Orders should the Enemy appear, and endeavor to get in, I shall take the best Precautions according to Circumstances for their Safety. I must observe to your Lordship that Lieu^t Knowles³ agreeable to my directions has got all the Transports and other Vessels in the inner Harbor, and placed the Grand Duke Store-Ship⁴ across the Mouth of the North Entrance, in order to prevent as much as possible the Enemy's destroying them; The Pigot,⁵ and Rebel Galley *Spitfire*⁶ are placed at the South Entrance to answer the same purpose, and in Case the Enemy should come in, Lieu^t Knowles has directed to scuttle the Transports.

As soon as I have reason to apprehend the Enemy's Intention is not to attack this Port; I shall employ one of the Advanced Ships with the *Sphynx*⁷ to convoy the Wood Vessels from Huntingdon Bay to this Port, and place the Pigot Galley in her Station.

In my present Situation I know no Mode of supplying the New Galley with Guns of the nearest Calibre she is constructed to bear, but by taking the two 18 Pounders out of the Rebel Galley Spitfire, which I propose doing if the Carriages will answer.

The Complements of the Pigot and Spitfire are nearly complete; and the deficiencies shall be made up.

I have given the Surgeon of the Flora a direction to purchase Medicines for the Prisoners agreeable to your Lordships directions on that head, and have divided the Prisoners into two Ships separating those taken in Arms from the rest.

The ten British Seamen brought from Boston are fit for Service; have been exchanged within the limits of your Lordships former directions; and distributed amongst the Ships in order to complete their Complements; But as I have already acquainted General Sullivan, that, agreeable to your Lordship's Orders none of the New England Prisoners could be exchanged until Restitution was made for the Circumstance of the Royal Bounty,⁸ and from a Rebel Colonel being very desirous to come to Newport to confer with General Pigot; He, as well as myself have reason to believe it has taken a proper Effect, from the Idea they are to be sent to England; The Conference will shew the Event.

Yesterday the Sphynx, arrived from assisting in Convoying the Vessels up the Sound, Intended to have sent her to cruise 10 or 12 Leagues to the South-ward of Block Island to prevent any Vessels bound to the Port of New York falling into the Enemy's hands, but as Captain Harwood⁹ acquaints me he has been informed by the People on Long Island that they have left the Hook; I shall order her to cruise between the Harbour's Mouth and Block Island, in order to give the earliest Intelligence.

As Lieu^t Andrew Congalton first Lieutenant of the Flora, still continues incapable of duty from the Wound he received some time ago; I have given an Order to M^r Smith Master's Mate, to act as Second Lieu^t until his recovery or your Lordship's pleasure is known.

Captain Harwood's Orders from Admiral Gambier being to return immediately, I have therefore dispatched him, with orders to return to his Station, and forward my Letter to your Lordship as soon as possible. I am with great respect My Lord [&c.]

THE NEW-YORK GAZETTE; AND THE WEEKLY MERCURY, MONDAY, JULY 27, 1778

NEW-YORK, July 27.

The Le Despencer Packet, Capt. Pond, mentioned in our last to be carried into New-London, was taken by two Privateer Brigs;¹ one of them called the Satisfaction, of Boston, of 16 Guns and 110 Men; and the other the Brig Nancy, Capt. Melally, of New-London, of the same Force;² Capt. Pond made a brave Resistance, and did every Thing in his power to escape, but his Rigging and Masts were so disabled, that he was obliged to submit to superior Force.

Capt. Pond is now here, and left his Passengers Mr. Samuel Hake, of this City, Merchant, Governor Wright's Son of Georgia,³ and two other Gentlemen Passengers, in New-London. The three last mentioned Gentlemen had obtained Permission to go to St. Augustine.

On Wednesday Evening arrived here a Fleet of 20 Sail from Rhode-Island; seven of which were from Halifax, and had 35 Days Passage to that Place. The Halifax Fleet was met by the Tryon Letter of Marque, Capt. [George] Sibbles, of this Port, to the Southward of Long-Island; he informed them of the Situation of the French Fleet; they then proceeded with him to Newport, where Captain Sibbles also gave the first Intelligence of Monsieur D'Estaing.

The Tryon was outside Sandy Hook when the French Fleet made their Appearance, and was chased by one of the Frigates, but fortunately outsailing her, escaped, and by that Means, the Fleet under Convoy of the Hope,⁴ from Halifax, avoided the Snare they would have fallen into, had they proceeded to the Hook. Capt. Sibbles also assisted in conveying the Fleet through the Sound, having been directed (by Capt. Henry, of the Fowey)⁵ to bring up the Rear. They were dogged by a Rebel Privateer Sloop in the Sound, but she kept so much aloof, that there was not an Opportunity of bringing her too; she put into New-Haven.

The Letter of Marque Ship Rose, Capt. James Duncan, was met on the 6th inst. by a French Frigate of 32 Guns, with 300 Men, and, after an Engagement of 6 Hours and a Quarter, was forced to yield; the Action was fought in the Presence of 12 Sail of the Line and 5 Frigates, commanded by the Compte D'Estaing, who were at 4 Miles Distance, and could not, on Account of little or no Wind, get nearer. When the Attack commenced, the Rose had 60 Men on board, eight of which were sick and unfit for Duty, and when she struck, had 44 left; the Bravery of the Men and Officers, beyond Description, was applauded by more than Ten Thousand of their Enemies, Spectators of the Event. The firm Caledonian fought his Ship till she sunk; several of his Officers were killed, himself wounded, and his first Lieutenant dangerously so, his Life being despaired of.⁶

Two Schooners, one of them from France, the other from South-Carolina, that were taken by the Active Letter of Marque, Capt. [John] Powell, are retaken and carried into Egg-Harbour.

1. On the capture of Le Despencer, Capt. William Pond, see Journal of Ambrose Serle, 29 June, above.

2. Massachusetts privateer brig Satisfaction, Capt. Nathaniel Thayer, mounted 14 guns with a crew of 80, according to its letter of marque application; Connecticut privateer brigantine Nancy, Capt. Michael Melally, mounted 16 guns and carried a crew of 100. As seen at Melally to Nathaniel Shaw Jr., 16 June, above, there was some question if Satisfaction was one of the captors.

3. Andrew Wright, son of Sir James Wright, the Royal Governor of Georgia.

4. H.M. sloop Hope, Lt. Joseph Browne, commanding.

5. H.M. frigate Fowey, Commander Thomas Henery, commanding.

6. For the capture of the British letter of marque ship Rose, Capt. James Duncan, see Journal of French Navy Ship of the Line Languedoc, 5 July, and Journal of French Navy Frigate Engageante, 5 July, both above.

COMMODORE WILLIAM HOTHAM, R.N., TO SIR CHARLES HOTHAM THOMPSON

Preston off Sandy Hook [N.J.]

My Dear Sir Cha^s:

27th: July 1778.

Since my Letter of the 7th: Instant¹ (in answer to yours of March the 23^d) The Toulon Squadron under Monsieur D'Estaing² have made their appearance. they first anchored in the Delaware with a view no doubt of blocking up Lord Howe³ and the Transports, but He had fortunately left it with all his Ships about ten days before, being thus defeated, his next appearance was off this Port, on the outside of which he anchored about four or five miles from Sandy Hook, where he remained about a Week. My Lord Howe with his usual foresight had previously drawn the greatest part of his Force (which though but weak in comparison to theirs) to new york and the judicious Disposition which he made of them to defend the Entrance of the Harbour I believe weighed as much with the Count, as the pretended difficulty of passing over the Bar with his long legged Ships might do; however that might be, after looking at us for some days, the last of which he probably liked our appearance worse than the first, He thought proper to move off, and the last we have heard of them by our Scouts is, that they were seen about 30 Leag^s: to the Eastward of the Delaware standing to the SE upon the Larboard Tack, from which you are Seaman enough to know that the wind of course must be about ENE being so far off the Delaware and still standing to the SE it is concluded that Rhode Island Boston or the West Indies must be their Point. It is a mortifying stroke that we can hear nothing of Admiral Byron,⁴ whose arrival we have been eagerly expecting, and had he fortunately appeared at this Critical Juncture it would have been a happy Event for England. As it is, I can only rejoice that his Lordship is yet here instead of being upon his passage home which might have been the Case. From the very superior force of the French Squadron to that of ours, you may judge we were in daily expectation of their attempting to force the Entrance of the Harbour and to pass our small Ships (that in comparison to theirs) but it would have been difficult, and the Conflict must one way or the other have been decisive, and would at the same time have decided the Fate of the Army, for whether that, or the Transports had been destroyed I look upon pretty much the same thing. it would have been playing a deep Game, & I suppose the Count thought it too hazardous an one. The Spirit of the Soldiers and Seamen upon this occasion is not to be described; some Marines being wanted on board the Ships, a Detachment was ordered from the Army for that purpose, to be made up of Volunteers, when the whole of the Grenadiers and Light Infantry turned out to a Man, as did the whole Body of Seamen from the Transports. I am very apprehensive our Fleet will come too late, as the Expectation of it has been notified to the French Admiral by the Congress, who you to be sure have heard will have nothing to say to the Commissr^s:⁵ until the Fleet and Army are withdrawn, or that they are owned as what they say they are, Independent States. Thus have I given you the News of these parts, as I hope all the Nation will give the Credit which is due to Lord Howe for his admirable Conduct throughout this Business, for had the Squadron been divided, they consequently in this instance would have been useless, and the Destruction of the Transports by the Enemy getting possession of this Port, you will see must have been attended with the worst of consequences to the Army. Whatever was intended for me, is from this Event of course put off for the present, but be assured that in no Situation or Quarter of the Globe shall I be other than My Dear Sir Cha^s: most Affect^v: Yours

W Hotham

I beg Lady Dorothy & Miss⁶ to accept of my Affectionate Compliments & wishes for their Health—Your friend Cha^s: O'Hara commands upon Sandy Hook,⁷ and Doctor

Roberts is very well with whom I am become very intimate for all his Shyness.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE

[Extract]

Philadelphia July 27th. 1778.

My Dear Sir,

Your's of the 12th instant is just rec'd¹

I am fully sensible of the force of your arguments against privateering and if some proper methods were taken to restrain it to proper bounds, I make no doubt the public would be much benefitted by such restrictions; but (for want of a competent knowledge of those affairs I make no doubt) I am not quite satisfied that a total prohibition would be serviceable:² The Congress have some time since determined as soon as possible to take up the Marine affairs and make some very essential alterations in it and also the affair of our money which seems to be going to confusion by the enormous rise of every thing, but when it will be done God knows. The almost innumerable letters and business that daily crowd upon Congress for want of regular Boards, properly appointed and filled, and the time it takes in such large Assemblies, to transact business, keeps us forever behind hand in our affairs and I am sorry to say that sometimes matters of very small importance waste a good deal of precious time, by long and repeated speeches and chicanery of gentlemen who will not wholly throw off the lawyer even in Congress.

Till we get into better regulations as to our Marine affairs, I am persuaded no class of men are so much wanted in Congress as men acquainted with that business, for though Navy Boards are established, yet there is a constant appeal to the Marine Committee of Congress, who I am sure are at this time inadequate to the business. I hope our State will have wisdom enough to appoint you to relieve me here in the fall and that you will have virtue enough still to forego your own private interest for the public good and will accept of their appointment and without flattery I really think you would be very serviceable to the public here, especially in the Marine Department.³ If I knew you would not attend Congress I should be glad you might be appointed one of the Navy Board at Boston, for I am sure that Board does not attend sufficiently to the business.

. . . The French fleet are gone to Rhode Island and you will hear of their operations sooner than we. the Admiral⁴ seems very desirous of doing something to effect and was greatly mortified when he found there was not water sufficient for his large ships to go up to New York. I have nothing to write you in the new's way—have sent you a paper or two by which you will see what is stirring here. . . .

OWNERS OF A BRIGANTINE PRIVATEER TO GOVERNOR THOMAS JOHNSON, JR., OF MARYLAND

May it please your Excellency

Baltimore 27 July 1778

We are about fitting out a Brigantine of twelve fourpounders to cruize on this Coast, as a private Ship of War, but are likely to be disappointed in Guns of proper dimensions.— As we understand there are some belonging to the State, such as we want, and which are not in use at present, Can we obtain the favor of your Excellency to spare us the above number either to be paid for immediately, or return’d in kind at a future day your Excellency shall appoint.—

Short Guns that weigh about seven hundred weight, will suit our purpose best.— We have the honor to be [&c.]

REAR ADMIRAL SIR PETER PARKER TO SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY PHILIP STEPHENS

[Extract]

Cupid Port Royal Harbour
Jamaica the 27 July 1778.-

Sir

Since my last Letter of the 21st past by the Southampton,¹ I have not been honour'd with any dispatches from the Admiralty—the Glasgow and Cameleon proceed from hence this day and from Bluefields the 1st of next month, with the Trade bound to Europe²—The Hornet Sloop is to accompany them as far as the Lattitude of 32 North and then to return to this port³—The Glasgow goes on to the Downs and the Cameleon proceeds with the Trade bound up S^t George Channel and then repairs to Spithead for further Orders—I beg leave to offer to their Lordships consideration whether it may not be expedient, and tend more to the benefit and safety of the Trade to make some Alterations in the present Orders relative to Convoys; the passage through the Gulph of Florida is at most times hazardous but more especially so in the Winter months, and during the present contest with America every advantage may be taken by the Rebel Privateers that constantly lie in wait for the Trade under Cuba and the Florida Shore—Were it left to the Admirals option to send the Convoy through the Gulph or the Windward passage as Currents and circumstances might vary, the Rebels wou'd be in doubt & uncertainty and at a loss how to station their Cruisers. . . .

Tho the Active and the Florida Surveying Schooner saild from hence for Pensacola the 5th of last May I have not as yet heard of their arrival⁴—I have received a letter from Captain Nunn of his Majestys Sloop the Hound dated Pensacola May the 9th which is enclosed here with,⁵ together with Copies of the correspondence carried on by the Captains of His Majestys Sloops the Hound and Sylph with the Governors of West Florida and Louisiana⁶—Their Lordships will see that Mr. Campbells Brig is restored⁷ and all the British Vessels safe from New Orleans except the Ship Rebecca which the Spanish Governor refused to deliver up on the pretence that she was not taken within the Spanish Territories, but brought in there as a prize by the Americans which was a liberty allowed them in Europe⁸— . . .

I feel great satisfaction in transmitting to their Lordships a letter dated the 11th instant signed by Captain Rainier of His Majestys Sloop the Ostrich;⁹ the great disproportion between the Ostrich; and the Privateer she has taken, notwithstanding the assistance which she received from the Lowestoffes Prize will mark the Conduct and Character of Captain Rainer and reflect the greatest honor on himSelf, his Officers and Crew—When the prize arrives I shall be able to furnish their Lordships with a more circumstantial and clear account—I am in hopes that Captain Rainier Will soon recover, tho his wound as I am informed is more dangerous than was at first imagined—

Since my last Account of the 21st of June Twelve Prizes and Re-Captures have been brought into this port by His Majestys Ships— . . . I am sir Your most Obedient [&c.]

"COPY OF A LETTER DATED QUEBEC, JULY 28, FROM CAPT. AITKEN, OF THE HOWE TRANSPORT."

"I had a passage of eight weeks, and have found ever thing in the province extremely quiet.—If a French war had been declared before my departure from Europe, I should have benefited considerably, having boarded many homeward-bound West Indiamen. In the latitude 44.0. and longitude 40.0. I fell in with a continental privateer of 18 guns, six and nine pounders, and having as I suppose from 150 to 200 men; at seven in the morning I saw her three miles to the windward, she hoisted English colours, and so did I; she directly double-reefed her top-sails, and I being under close reefed top-sails, let out one reef to make the ship work the better, and I then hauled up my courses. At eight in the morning she came so near that I could heave a biscuit on board her, but she took care to lay on my bow, therefore I could not get all my guns to bear; she then hoisted American colours, and asked what ship; I did not reply, but was impatient to get the Howe properly along side.

"My adversary seemed very uneasy, and hailed us, enquiring from whence we came; I answered from Great Britain, and ordered my men to commence the engagement;— the fire was very hot on both sides, until I had not a brace or bowling standing, the entire rigging being torn to pieces; the privateer was likewise in a shattered condition, therefore she hauled off to repair her damages, and I was employed in the same manner. Every thing being put to rights in half an hour, the fight was renewed, which continued until eleven o'clock, with round, grape, and cannister shot; we drove them from their guns, and still kept up the fire; I then brought the Howe under her stern, and discharged my guns brisk into the cabin-windows. At that time we observed the privateer's name to be the Franklin;¹ at length she set her sails and got under way.

"I gave chase, but to no purpose, as she went three feet for my one; had the Howe sailed well, I should have given a good account of the Franklin; one of my people was killed, and another shot through the body with a swivel ball; he is in a fair way of recovery, but not out of danger; the other accidents are very trifling.

"The Howe was deeply laden, had two nine pounders, 18 six pounders, and 60 men."

GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL OF CONNECTICUT

[Extract]

Sir

Head Quarters White Plains 28th July 1778

I was this morning honored with yours of the 25th.¹ I think you need be under no apprehensions for the safety of your Coast, while the Count D'Estaings Squadron lays off the harbour of Newport, as the enemy will have sufficient upon their hands to prevent their carrying on a predatory War—I took the Liberty of suggesting to the Count the advantage of sending a Ship of force down the Sound to prevent the enemy from reinforcing thro' Hell-Gate; but whether he will incline to divide his Fleet in that manner I cannot say—²

I am well aware of the inconveniency of drawing out the Militia at this time, but I am in hopes that the importance of the object, and I think I may say the moral certainty of Success, if the enterprise is supported with spirit, will outweigh every other consideration. Besides the time of service will probably be but short, as the expedition will either be immediately determined in our favour, or must be laid aside.

It is impossible for me to spare larger detachments from this Army than I have already done, as the Enemy in and about New York are superior in force to our main Body. Should they reinforce Rhode Island, I shall do so of course— . . . I am with the greatest Esteem [&c.]

RIVINGTON'S THE ROYAL GAZETTE (NEW YORK), TUESDAY, JULY 28, 1778

NEW-YORK, July 28.

On the 6th inst. Capt. James Duncan, in the ship Rose, of 20 guns and 60 men, a Letter of Marque, belonging to this port;¹ fell in with a French frigate of 32 guns and 400 men, which he engaged six hours and fifteen minutes, when finding his ship was sinking, he was obliged to strike. Capt. Duncan and his first Lieutenant were wounded, the latter, it is imagined, mortally:² He had 16 of his officers and men killed in the action, which was fought in view of the French fleet, commanded by Count D'Estaing, then about 4 miles distant, and unable to get nearer, by reason of a calm. The Frenchmen, no doubt, were greatly mortified at the gallant resistance of such a handful of men, in a vessel of such inferior force, and probably formed melancholy conjectures of the event of a war, in which their honourable connection had drawn them, from the specimen of the intrepidity and valour of British seamen;

The Tryon, Capt. Sibbles, was outside Sandy-Hook, when the French fleet appeared, and was chased by one of their frigates,³ but fortunately outsailing her, escaped, and by that means the fleet, under the convoy of the Hope, from Halifax,⁴ avoided the snare they would have fallen into, had they proceeded to the Hook. Capt. Sibbles also assisted in convoying the fleet through the Sound,⁵ having been directed (by Capt. Henry, of the Fowey)⁶ to bring up the rear. They were dogged by a rebel privateer in the Sound, but she kept so much aloof that there was not an opportunity of bringing her too; she put into New Haven.

Two schooners, one of them from France, the other from South-Carolina, that were taken by the Active Letter of Marque, Capt. Powell,⁷ are retaken and carried into Egg-Harbour.

1. In a shorter account of this incident in the 25 July edition, Rivington awarded Duncan the sobriquet, "the firm Caledonian." Although Rivington calls Rose a New York privateer, it bore a commission from Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty in London. In the application for a letter of marque and reprisal, Rose, which is described as "employed in trade," is described as a 300-ton ship, carrying 24 carriage guns of 6 and 4 pounds and a crew of 40. UKLPR, HCA 26/60. For its capture, see also Journal of French Navy Ship of the Line Languedoc and Journal of French Navy Frigate Engageante, for 5 July, above.

2. In the letter of marque application, Rose's lieutenant is identified as Thomas Scott.

3. Tryon, a 16-gun brig, which was sailing without a privateering commission, was under the command of Capt. George Sibbles. Pougher, "Loyalist Privateering," p. 488. According to an account of this episode in New-York Gazette of 13 July, Tryon was cruising off the Virginia Capes when, on 6 July, it encountered H.M. frigate Maidstone, Capt. Alan Gardner, who informed him that a French fleet had arrived in North American waters and was believed heading for the Chesapeake Bay. Sibbles immediately set sail for New York to carry the news, and after a quick thirty-six hour passage, he arrived off Sandy Hook where he encountered the French frigate.

4. H.M. brig-rigged sloop-of-war Hope, Comdr. Joseph Browne, commander.

5. That is, Long Island Sound.

6. H.M. frigate Fowey, Capt. Thomas Henery, commanding.

7. British privateer sloop Active, Capt. John Powell. This 100-ton sloop mounted 12 four-pound carriage guns, 2 four-pound co-horns, 6 swivels, and carried a crew of 24. A former South Carolina Navy vessel, it was owned and commissioned in Liverpool, England, but operated out of St. Augustine. UKLPR, HCA, 26/61; Pougher, "Loyalist Privateering," pp. 526–27.

D^r Sir/

3 PM July the 28: 1778

I thought the weather, in the morning, would have proved such as to prevent the French Squadron from attempting Rhode Island, off of which Port they would probably arrive today, if such is their destination. But as from the milder appearance of the Weather later in the day, it is scarce to be doubted that the enemy may prosecute that Plan tomorrow at the latest; and it becomes necessary to form our final determination of the parts it will be expedient for us to take in that contingency; I will request to have the honor of seeing you tomorrow, as soon as it will be most convenient to you to so favor, D^r Sir, [&c.]

JOURNAL OF CAPTAIN HENRY DUNCAN, R.N.

28th [July].—The Raisnable joined us from Halifax.¹

"Journals of Henry Duncan," p. 160.

1. HMS Raisnable, Capt. Thomas Fitzherbert, commanding, was part of Capt. Sir George Collier's squadron stationed at Halifax, Nova Scotia. By "us," Duncan refers to the fleet of Vice Admiral Viscount Howe, which was then anchored at Sandy Hook, New Jersey.

"EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN ON BOARD THE FLEET, WITH LORD HOWE TO HIS FRIEND IN LONDON, DATED SANDY-HOOK, JULY 28."

[Sandy Hook, N.J.]

"You will probably have heard, before this letter can reach you, that Count d'Estaing¹ has paid us a visit with such a force as we did not dare to venture out upon without a reinforcement. This Gentleman anchored off the Hook on the 11th instant. We had notice of his arrival upon the coast a few days before. Fortunately Lord Howe² had collected the greatest part of his ships in time, of which he made such a disposition within the Hook as checked the ardor of Monsieur, and obliged him to desist of forcing his way into this harbour. Great as Lord Howe's abilities confessedly are, it is probable that the best use he could have made of his ships would have been ineffectual, not only on account of their inferior rate, but of the number of men sick at the hospital, if had had not been strengthened by the seamen belonging to the transports. These honest fellows gave a noble instance of their spirit, as well as of their affection for his Lordship, upon hearing of the French squadron's arrival upon the coast. Masters, Mates, and Seamen, all turned out as volunteers, to enable the Admiral to face the enemy, though they could have but little to expect in the event but hard blows. Of the few, whom it was thought necessary to detain at New York (which is about 28 miles above the Hook) to look after their vessels, &c. many found their way down by stealth to the ships of war, emulous to assist the noble Commander in the cause of their King and Country. Nor was the spirit of volunteering confined to the seamen only; but so many corps of the army offered their service upon the occasion, that it was necessary to draw lots to determine which should have the preference, as all could not be received.

On the 22d every thing seemed to favour Monsieur's project. A fresh easterly wind, of two days continuance, at a time when the spring tides were at the greatest height, raised the water on the bar very considerably higher than its common level. He got under way at the proper time of tide for allowing him to make a tack or two to get into a position for lying in over the bar at high water. In short, several other circumstances concurred to persuade us that we must have settled matters with the Count on that day; but however, instead of standing in to pass the bar, after tacking two or three times, he stood off to sea, and we have not seen the Gentleman since.³ Nevertheless, we have not given up the hopes of seeing him again before he leaves the coast; and if the reinforcement under Byron,⁴ which we have eagerly expected for several days, arrive in time, the Admiral may have it in his power to turn the tables upon Monsieur, and give a proper reward to French infamy. Every body here speaks in the highest terms of the Admiral's conduct upon the occasion. I hope to send you a better account very shortly."

MARYLAND COUNCIL TO JAMES CALHOUN AND OTHERS

In Council [Annapolis] 28th. July 1778.

Gen^t

We are much inclined to give you any Assistance we can, towards fitting out your Privateer. The Guns on Board the *Johnson*¹ called four Pounders, carry about a five Pound Ball and, we believe, weigh upwards of 12^ε² they, we fear, will not suit you, if they will, or if there are any on Board Stone's Brig,³ & Cap^t. Coursey⁴ says he thinks there are, you may use them, returning the same to us again at the End of the Cruise or paying for them if lost. We have no exact Account of our Guns, nor can at present, be informed whether we have any others which may probably suit you, if you know of any others, advise us of them and we shall let you have them if we reasonably can. We are &^{ca}.

DON BERNARDO DE GÁLVEZ, GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA, TO DON JOSEF DE GÁLVEZ, MINISTER OF THE INDIES

Emô Señor

Mui señor mio:

Como las criticas circunstancias en que me he hallado con mis vecinos los Yngleses de que estara V. E. instruhido por las cartas que le he escrito en los antecedentes correos me han puesto en la precision de valerme de todos los medios que me han parecido conducentes a ponerme en estado de defensa, y frustrar las malas intenciones que tenian contra esta Provincia justificadas por los repetidos avisos que me han dado los confidentes que como espías he tenido entre ellos mismos y por varias cartas que he interceptado me presento la casualidad uno del q^o me haproveche por contemplarlo el unico que pudiera apeteer no tan solo para separar a los Yngleses de sus siniestras ideas sino tambien para ponerlos en maior alarma de la que ellos han podido causarme y fue el siguiente.

A mediados de este mes me aviso el comandante del Puesto de Arcanzas haver llegado à el un Bató con veinte y cinco Americanos que conducian algunos viveres para la partida de D^o. Santiago Willing los que asi que se informaron de la situacion en que se hallaban sus enemigos en la parte vaja del Rio, y que les hera imposible parar por sus establecimientos sin ser destruidos retrocedieron para bolberse al fuerte Pit¹ de donde avian salido, ynmediatamente esparci esta noticia en la Ciudad aumentando que dho Bato procedia de una gran partida que quedaba mas arriba y que se preparaban a bajar en numero de 2000 hombres con la idea de apoderarse de los establecimientos de este Rio y a fin de que dha noticia se repartiase generalmente en la Provincia escribi a todos los comandantes hasta la Punta cortada la carta circular de que incluío a V. E. copia.

Tambien efecto me ha producido dha carta que continuamente recibo avisos de los comandantes del diferente semblante que han tomado las cosas pues los mismos que antes amenazaban en el dia solicitan y buscan nuestra amistad, Los Yndios que tenian a su debocion y con los que querian insultar nuestras costas asi que han oido que bajaban los Americanos se han exparcido cada nacion por su lado en busca de sus Aldeas, y aier me informo un avitante de esta colonia llamado Bicente Ricuso que viniendo por el Lago Pontchartrin en una Goleta suia encontro un Bote Yngles bien equipado al que hav^a. preguntado de donde venia y que novedades avia le respondieron que vien malas pues bajaban de Manchak e iban a Pansacola a toda diligencia a dar la noticia conto tres mil Americanos debian bajar dentro de poco para tomar todas las tierras de este Rio y que de un dia à otro esperaban este golpe, ultimamente me escribe el comand^{te}. de Manchak que haviendo recombenido al de Manchak Yngles m^r Malquibray² por haver hecho fuego a una piragua que bajaba el Rio con dos hombres le respondió que a la tarde pararia a darle la correspondiente satisfaccion y que haviendo hido le dijo que el motivo de haber hecho fuego à aquella Piragua fue porque creieron eran Desertores de Natches respecto à que no hicieron caso a las muchas voces que les dieron para que arrimaran a tierra y que extra de esto bien savia que estaban amenazad^s. de los Americanos que deben bajar y que podia bien discurrir estaban en la obligacion de tomar informes, y precauciones concluyendo su carta con decirme se hallan todos los Yngleses tanto soldados como avitantes en la mayor alarma esperando el momento de ser atacados.

Por fin debo a la citada carta y a lo abultado de la noticia de la vajada de los Americanos la tranquilidad que disfrutara esta Prov^a. a lo menos mientras se verifique la verdad (cuio tiempo que a mi modo de pensar no sera corto)—aprovechare para ponerme cada vez en mejor estado de defensa y no temerles. Lo que participo à V. E. para su noticia y la de S. M.³ Dios guarde [&c.]

Excellency

My Dear Sir:

As I informed Your Excellency in my earlier correspondence, my situation with regard to my English neighbors is critical. Through spies and intercepted letters I know of their ill intentions. I am using every means at my disposal to put this place into a state of defense so as to frustrate their designs. An unexpected opportunity arose through one of my agents. I exploited it because it seemed the best way to upset the sinister intentions of the English, as well as to put them in a higher state of alert than they placed me.

At mid-month, the commander of the Arkansas fort informed me of the arrival of a bateau carrying twenty five Americans as well as provisions intended for Mr. James Willing's detachment. The commander informed them of their precarious situation with their enemies downstream and of the difficulty they would have arriving safely at their destination, after which they returned to their base, Fort Pitt.¹ I immediately spread word throughout the city that the bateau had been part of a large detachment of two thousand men who were upstream preparing to descend and capture the forts along this river. To disseminate the news throughout the province, I wrote every commander up to Punta Cortada, a copy of which circular letter I enclose for Your Excellency.

This strategy proved so effective that every day I receive reports from those commanders of positive developments. Those who previously threatened us now seek our friendship. The Indians, who were in their service and were attacking our coasts, after hearing that the Americans planned to descend, have retired to their villages. And yesterday, Bicente Ricuso, a citizen of this colony, informed me that as he sailed his schooner across Lake Pontchartrain he encountered a well-equipped English boat. He asked where they were from and what news they carried, to which they responded that they carried bad news. They were en route to Pensacola from Manchac at full speed with word that three thousand Americans were preparing to descend at any moment to take over the lands along this river. Recently, I received a dispatch from the commander at Manchak who informed me that he had confronted Mr. Malquibray,² his English counterpart, for firing on a pirogue with two men as it sailed downstream. Malquibray responded that he would certainly offer satisfaction and visited the commander that afternoon. At their meeting, Malquibray stated he had opened fire on the pirogue, which he thought carried deserters from Natchez, because they ignored calls to come ashore. At the same time, the English commander pointed to the threat posed by the Americans who were set to descend at any moment to justify taking their statements as well as other precautions. My officer concluded his letter by stating that the English, soldiers and citizens alike, are in a state of panic awaiting an attack at any moment.

Ultimately, I owe the state of peace enjoyed in the province to the aforementioned letter as well as the circulation of the news of the impending descent of the Americans—at least until the truth is revealed (which I believe will not be soon). In the meantime, I will strengthen the defenses. I make this information known to Your Excellency and to His Majesty.³ May God protect [&c.]

Europe at Saint Johns [Newfoundland] 29 July 1778

Sir

You will be pleased to acquaint their Lordships that since my Letter of the 27th ¹ the two Transports with Troops (who Sailed from Cork under my Convoy) are safe Arrived; as is the Martin Sloop with a part only of her Convoy from England.

Captain Chamberlayne² informs me, he was in Company a day or two with that part of Admiral Byrons³ Squadron I saw (as mentioned in my Letter of the 27th) and that he also saw the *Albion*⁴ at a Distance under Jury Masts but did not speak to her.

I have the satisfaction to inform their Lordships the Naval and Ordnance Store Ships are safe arrived, and wish it was in my power to say the Victuallers were also, as the Squadron will be much distressed for Bread, and Flour should any Accident happen to them.

In consequence of the great depredations committed by the small American Privateers in the Harbour of Bay Bulls, Ferryland, Saint Marie's and in Placentia Bay (by which the Boat Fishery has been exceedingly distressed) I have since my Arrival made the best disposition in my power with the Squadron under my Command to protect them from any further insults. . . .

[Newport] R. ISLAND

[1778]

29th July. Heavy rain, with Thunder & Lightning about 1 o'Clock this morning, which continued for an hour. Fine day. Wind S.W.

The *Faulcon*¹ having been rather late in getting out last night could not clear the Lighthouse, and therefore was obliged to return into the harbour. The *Sphynx*² got out to Sea.

About 9 this morning a fleet of large ships appeared to the S.E. standing for the harbour, they were soon after discovered to be French; and about 12 they came too off the S. end of the Island.³ From 1 to 5 they kept standing off & on; and then came to an anchor off Brenton's reef, about 4 Miles S. of the point, in a line abreast. They consist of 12 line of Battle ships and 4 Frigates;⁴ with several small craft attending them.

As soon as it was certain they were the French fleet, our Frigates in the Bay and Harbour (Flora and Faulcon excepted) got under way from their several stations and run close in under the West side of this Island. The *Lark*⁵ at Freeborn's-Creek, *Orpheus*⁶ at Almy's point, *Cerberus*⁷ at Layton's Creek, and *Junō*⁸ at Codrington's Cove;⁹ and immediately began to land their guns, stores, and Provisions. The Flora hauled close in to The Long Wharf, and The Faulcon behind Goat-Island. Preparations were at the same time made for burning or Scuttling the Frigates, as Lord Howe had sent orders to Captain Brisbane, the Senior Officer here, on no account to risque their being captured by the Enemy.¹⁰

At 7 in the Evening two French Frigates¹¹ came into the Seconnet Passage,¹² accompanied by a Brig which appeared a Rebel Privateer;¹³ upon which the Kingsfisher Sloop¹⁴ and The Spitfire Galley¹⁵ run up under our Battery at Fogland ferry, where they anchored, with The Alarm Galley,¹⁶ in a line across the channel; The Kingsfisher nearest our battery, and the Alarm next the Rebel shore. The Kingsfisher immediately began to land her Guns, Stores, &c.

About the same time two large French ships¹⁷ stood for the entrance of The Narragansett passage.¹⁸

On the first appearance of the Fleet, orders were given for the 54th Regiment to march to Newport, leaving their tents standing. They were immediately employed in thickening the parapet of the North Battery, which was not completed.

All the Carts and other Carriages which could be collected were employed in removing such parts of the Stores, provisions, and Ammunition as still remained in the lower part of the town, to the Ropewalk behind Brindley's, and to Bannister's, house.

Boats were immediately sent over to Connonicut,¹⁹ from whence the Two Battalions of Anspach and Brown's Regiment of Provincials²⁰ were withdrawn, leaving small detachments only in the Batteries on Fox-hill and The Dumplins.²¹ The withdrawing these Battalions immediately, was certainly well judged. From the moment the French attempted to enter the harbour, it would have been impracticable, and the loss of so considerable a part of our force, would have proved disgraceful and perhaps fatal. They should not have been sent there.

A Captain and 50 men were sent to the Battery at Brenton's point; a like number to Goat-Island; and a Picquet of a Captain and 50 men was posted on the lower part of Brenton's Neck. The whole of the troops were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to move at a moments notice.

[July 1778, Languedoc, at sea]

From Tuesday 28 to Wednesday 29

The winds at the south, a little brisk, the land that we see is Long Island. We have steered to the E ¹/₄ NE, prolonging it in order to learn about Block Island. The wind brisk, veering from the south to the SSW. We have made all the sail possible to gather information about it before nightfall. At 7:30 in the evening we anchored under this island in 24 fathoms, bottom of sand. The opening of a cove at the distance of a half a league from land, the point of the north of the said island lay to the NNW 2° west, that of the south to the SSW 3° west. The houses in the middle of the Bay to the WSW 5° west, the whole of the compass. A boat came to us from the land with six men who told us that we were expected at Newport and that we would find at the point of [blank] pilots for the whole squadron. We had passed the night at the anchorage and several of our prizes remained at sea. At daylight we saw that we were missing six of them, which probably had not known of our anchorage. At 7 o'clock in the morning the winds at the SW, a little brisk, we weighed anchor and made our way to the NE¹/₂N, at noon we were in the road of Rhode Island—and the pilots had come on board and their distribution was made to the whole squadron. We were then hove to under topsails, the tower that was at the entrance of the West Passage lay to the NNE 2° N, distance ³/₄ leagues.

VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE TO REAR ADMIRAL SAMUEL BARRINGTON

Sir,

Eagle Sandy Hook [N.J.] July the 29th. 1778.

Deeming the safe Conveyance of this Letter to be uncertain, I confine what I have now to communicate regarding the Succours You are most probably prepared to expect from this Station,¹ to the Notice, that in the present State of the Force here, compared with the Strength of the Toulon Squadron in these Seas, I am obliged to postpone the Arrangement for the appointed Aid to a future Opportunity; Of which You will be further in due Time advised. I have the Honour to be, Sir [&c.]

JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Philadelphia] Wednesday, July 29, 1778

Two memorials from the Hon. the Sieur Gérard, one respecting a deserter from the frigate Chimère, and the other respecting the sailing of the said frigate, were laid before Congress and read:¹

Ordered, That they be referred to the Marine Committee.

The Marine Committee laid before Congress two letters, one dated 18 May, the other 1 June, from John Wereat, continental agent in Georgia, complaining of the conduct of Colonels White and Elbert, in the sale of three vessels captured from the enemy, and other papers relating thereto:² Whereupon, Ordered, That the Marine Committee take proper measures for referring to the governor and council of Georgia an enquiry into the conduct of Colonels White and Elbert, in the complaint against them by Mr. John Wereat, to give the said colonels an opportunity of being heard in their defence; and that the result of the said enquiry be reported to Congress as soon as may be.

A petition from Hector M'Neil was read:³

Ordered, That it be referred to the Marine Committee.

JCC 11: 727.

1. The memorials of French minister Conrad-Alexandre Gérard have not been found.
2. Neither letter has been found, but, for Wereat's complaints, see his letters of 6 and 23 July to Henry Laurens, above. For the prizes in question, see Colonel Samuel Elbert to Colonel John White, 23 Apr. 1778, in NDAR 12: 178.

Sir

[Philadelphia] July 29th 1778

Inclosed is a list of Timber wanted for repairing Two of our Continental Frigates which were partly burn'd by the Enemy while at this place.¹ It is our request that on receipt hereof, you immediately provide a Suitable Vessel, put on board of her the Timber Specified in Said List and dispatch her for this Port, ordering the Captain to use all expedition in the Voyage.

As there is a considerable quantity of Timber belonging to the Public in your State and under your care, which will be wanted at this place for the use of our Navy—we now direct that you take speedy measures for sending it round here. In procuring Vessels for that purpose we have no doubt but you will be as attentive to the Interests of the States as possible. We are Sir [&c.]

1. Continental frigates Effingham and Washington were burned during the British raid up the Delaware River in May 1778. The frigates were never rebuilt.

2. In shipbuilding, timbers are any principal piece of wood in the structure, especially the ribs or frames to which the outside planking is attached. Foot hooks or futtocks are curved sections of transverse frames extending from the vessel's floor timbers to its top timbers, which are the uppermost pieces in the frame. Hawse is the neck or extreme fore end of a ship. Counter timbers are transom frames forming a vessel's rounded surface between stern-post and rail. Encyclopedia of Nautical Knowledge, pp. 109, 189, 224, and 561.

TIMOTHY MATLACK, SECRETARY OF THE PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME EXECUTIVE COUNCIL, TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Sir,

Philadelphia, July 29, 1778.

I am directed by the Council of Pennsylvania to apply to you for blank Commissions, for private ships of War. The six which you were pleased to forward are filled up, but the Bond for the last is not yet compleated, as the Gentlemen who are to sign are not in the City. The whole six Bonds shall be delivered to you in a few days. As there is now a Gentleman waiting for a Commission, I shall thank you for such a number as you may think to send me immediately.¹ And am with the greatest respect, [&c.]

T.M.

Pennsylvania Archives, 1st ser. 6: 670. Addressed: "To Hon'bl Henry Laurens, Esq., Pres't., &c."

1. To receive a letter of marque and reprisal, owners and captains of "private ships of War" or privateers had to complete an application, or commission, and post a bond of either $5,000 or $10,000 depending on the size of the vessel.

SAMUEL ADAMS TO JAMES WARREN

My dear Sir

Philad^a. [Pa.] July 27 1778

Capt Manly¹ has obligd me with your favor of the 5th.² He and McNeil³ are here with different Views. The one to obtain another Ship, and the other to get the Sentence of a Court Martial reversd—Perhaps both may be disappointed. I have receivd a Number of Letters by both. To yours I shall pay a particular Regard, because I am well satisfied you never suffer Prejudices to divert your Attention from the great Object—the publick Good.—“Manly is a blunt, honest, and I believe brave Officer.” I observe your Caution, and am pleasd with it; for I think it is a fresh Proof of your Integrity. Manlys Bravery is an Article of your Belief. His Bluntness & Honesty are Matters of Certainty. I have not yet lookd into the Papers; but I recollect to have heard, when they were read, the Want of Experience imputed to him, and some thing that had the Appearance of blaming him for not giving any Signals for the Direction of the Ships under his Command. This it must be ownd, strongly implys a Want of Discretion. Does the Character of a blunt & honest Officer intitle him to the Command of a capital Ship if he is deficient in Point of Experience & Discretion? Especially if he has had the Misfortune of losing one already.—“McNeils Address is insinuating—His Assurance great—He will tell you fine Storys.” &c.^c I should think he had taken his Lessons out of Hutchinsons⁴ political Book, if I had not Reason to believe that he used to despise him most heartily.—When I advert to a Letter from another of my Friends, I find him “open & sincere” “His Temper naturally warm, which he has sometimes indulgd in speaking his Mind freely of Persons in office.”— This you know has always been deemd an unpardonable Sin, and I am affraid it always will be. To be sure it always will be so deemd by that Kind of Men in office, who meet with none to hinder them from persisting in the most egregious and expensive Blunders, but the open, sincere & warm Friends of the Country.— We all know, says my Correspondent, his Zeal & Sufferings for our glorious Cause.” Such a Character, I must confess, commands my Friendship; but it has no Consideration in the present Appeal. Has he had a fair Trial? I pay a proper Regard to the Decisions of Courts Martiall, and shall not give my Voice for altering them, but when Error, Partiality or Injustice shall appear plainly to my own Satisfaction.⁵

Our Navy officers must not expect to pick & chuse for themselves. They ought to be content with such Appointments as are given to them. Indeed Appointments should be made with more Judgment than I think they can be by any Set of Men at three or four hundred Miles Distance. For this Reason I movd that they not be made by the Navy Board,⁶ which obtaind in a certain Degree, as you will see by a Letter from the Marine Committee.⁷ Had this been the Case before, Olney⁸ would have remained in the Resistance,⁹ and Burk¹⁰ must have waited for another. If the *Queen of France*¹¹ is a better Vessel, it will turn out not to the Disadvantage of Olney. While we have more Captains in Commission than we have ships to give them, there must be Disappointments, Envy, and Suspicions (oftentimes unreasonable) of each other. This is the Make of Man, and we may as well think of stopping the Tide as altering it. “The Appointment of Cap Landais¹² affords an ample Subject for the Observations of Speculatists, & the Resentment of Navy officers.” I think he is, as you observe, an ingenuous & well behavd Man; and if he is an able & experiencd officer, as we are assured he is by those who ought to give us the best Information, it is a Pity that two very good Lieutenants should leave the Ship & the Service on that Account. I hope others may be found to fill their Places. “It is an opinion that I was Landais chief Patron.” This is a mistaken Opinion. You discover your self on this occasion, as you are disposd to do at all Times, partial in my Favor. If I was in any Degree instrumental in the Promotion of Landais, it was because I really thought him a considerable Acquisition & that he would be eminently useful to our Navy. And I am apt to believe it would have been thought a judicious Appointment, if there had not been a fanciful Predilection in favor of another. Even the Name of the Ship¹³ may have given Disgust to some Men. I hope when Manly is provided with such a Ship as will please him, the Difficulties or Obstructions in the Way of getting the Alliance manned will be removed. I am sure your Exertions will not be wanting to forward the Service.

Yesterday I sent you a fresh News paper by the Post which I intended as an Apology for not writing to you. I kept this Letter open, knowing that M^r Dod the Express was to set off soon, and designing to say a few things in Addition to what I just hinted to you in my last. But I must defer it till another opportunity. I shall be obligd to you if you will give my Respects to M^r Story & tell him that his Petition with a Number of others was put into the Hands of M^r Lovel¹⁴ when M^r H [ancock] left this City. We will take the first opp^y to present it, and endeavor to get his Wishes answerd.¹⁵ Adieu my Friend

5. Manley's letter of 27 July to Congress was read and referred to the Marine Committee on 28 July. JCC 11: 724. This letter cannot be found. On 5 Aug. the proceedings of the court-martial exonerating Manley were laid before Congress. JCC 11: 727 and 749. Evidently Congress took no further action on the request, and Manley turned his attention temporarily to privateering. William J. McNeill's petition of 25 July, requesting the sentence of the court-martial dismissing him from the navy be overturned, was read in Congress on 29 July and referred to the Marine Committee. CAPTAIN JAMES HAWKER, R.N., TO VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE

In the New Goal Philadelphia
29th July 1778-

My Lord

I beg leave to acquaint your Lordship that on the 7^h Ins^e before Sunrise being then at Anchor with his Majesty's Ships Mermaid under my Command in Delaware Bay within the Light House, we discovered the French Fleet going large for the Northward with the Wind at S.W. which consisted of twelve large Ships & the rest Frigates with two Merchant Vessels in Company. We continued at Anchor till we were discover'd by them, when they made many Signals, alter'd their Course & stood in for the Bay; we had then no time to lose, got under Sail, & stood for the Body of their Fleet, which we were obliged to do, Till we got clear of the Hen & Chickens,¹ when we haul'd our wind to the S^oward, & were Chased by the whole Fleet; many of them coming up with us very fast, & as we found it impossible to get an Offing, we made short trips off & on Shore. When we got of [f] Phoenix's Island,² one of the Enemys large Ships being in our Wake, several very near us to leeward and expecting every minute to be brought to Action, we run over a Shoal in less than four fath^m. water, on which she run aground, & we thought two others also struck, which put their whole fleet into confusion, several of them coming to an Anchor, & the rest leaving off Chace. We continued beating to Windward with all the Sail we could, and in about two Hours by the assistance of Boats & Anchors the above Ship got off; when Five Sail were sent in Chace of us, (the rest bore away as we imagine for the Delaware) and came up with us fast; We then cut away one of our Bower Anchors, & threw four of the foremost Guns (at times) overboard & finding no alteration in her Sailing we started about ten Tons of Water in the Fore Hold, slacking the Rigging and used every method we could to get the Ship into better trim, but to no purpose. We continued making short trips close in Shore, untill dark, when we stood off in hopes of getting clear; but at about 3 AM seeing several of the Enemy's Ships at a very little distance from us and raising us very fast, and not the least prospect of escaping, we tacked and stood in Shore, one of their two Deckers standing in our wake after us, and others so near that to prevent His Majestys Ship from making one of their Fleet, all my Officers and Self thought it best to destroy her, but as we were some distance from the Shore, in hopes of making some alteration (for the better) in the Ships trim, we threw all our Guns overboard, except six, which we kept to defend us from any attempt from the Enemys boats, as the water was very smooth, & while standing in, we threw all our Musquets, Pistols, Pole-axes and Gunners Stores we could get at, overboard, I likewise destroy'd every Signal, Private & Public, Charts, &c. After a Chace of Thirty hours & about 10 AM of the 8th we run our Ship on Shore, a little to the Southward of Senepuxton³ (an inlet where several American Vessels were Riding) with all Sails set; but as she lay very quiet and to all appearance had received very little damage, & the French Ships standing in, I then hoisted A S^t Georges Ensign for about a quarter & a minute, & struck it to America, before the French had time to fire a Shot, & to prevent their claiming her, went with my second Lieut^t and another Officer to surrender; & by my Orders all her Masts were very soon cut away. The French hoisted out their Boats, but before they could come very near the Ships, the American colours were hoisted onboard her by the Commander of an Armed Schooner, I prevailed to go onboard for that purpose.⁴ The French Admiral then made a Signal, fired a Gun, & their Boats returned to their Ships⁵—

I forgot to mention to your Lordship that Lieut^t Knight of the Harlaem past us about half Gun Shot distance,⁶ on a Wind about 10 oClock the first morning of this Chace; and as he certainly knew our Ship by a Private Signal settled between him & myself, make no doubt of his having informed your Lordship of our then situation: It gave us all great pleasure & satisfaction, when we saw the French paid no attention to him, except one of the firing a few Shot as he past them; we stood longer on the Sailboard tack on his account, that he might escape to your Lordship, which we hope had the desired effect.—

I cannot omit to inform your Lordship, that we met with exceeding kind treatment & myself, Lieut^t Purser Master Surgeon & Marine Officer were on Parole untill our arrival at Philadelphia when I had the greatest reason to think we should have continued so, but to our great disappointment, were one & all conducted to this Goal yesterday.⁷ I have only further to observe to your Lordship, that it is well known in this Country that the indulgences to Americans taken by the Mermaid have not deserved the severe treatment; of which a Letter from the Governor of Maryland, addressed to the Board of War (here) will I presume be the best proof; a Copy of which I beg leave to annex for your Lordships Information⁸- I am [&c.]

PRESIDENT RAWLINS LOWNDES OF SOUTH CAROLINA TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Extract]

Dear Sir

. . . The Letters of Marque you sent me are all disposed of, every thing that carries a Gun, is Sollicitous of being in fortunes way, and taking out a Commission, which makes great demands upon me every day, and their obtaining them free of all expence gives a greater Scope to these speculative Genius's—¹

. . . . A Sloop from Jamaica which Sailed out of that place in Company with a fleet of 104 Vessells under Convoy of the Southampton Cap^t Garnier,² was lately brought into Charles Town by the Sailors (All Americans) seven in Number, who took the Command, near Augustine where she was bound from the Captain & Mate and Conducted her in here together with M^r. James Jamieson (and his Family) who was owner & going to reside in Augustine—³ Jamieson was sent off the State last Fall, as his Principals and Practice did not at all Coalesce with our measures; he is now here without being Guilty of Treason, which a voluntary return would have subjected him to; I shall send a Flag to Augustine in a few days with him and other Prisoners perhaps Bachop, but Osborne I fancy must abide a little longer with us to answer some Charges of a Criminal Compection not warranted by either Law Civil or Martial,⁴ pray Sir does the Enemy exchange our People whom they Capture in Ships of War indiscriminately with other Men or do they require Prisoners in the like Situation in Exch^a because both Bachop & Osborne and their Crews were in Armed Vessells purposely Equiped, and if the Enemy insist on Similarity of Circumstances as conditions in their Cartels, or lay us under any difficulties in exchanging our People we ought to know it, that our Conduct may be regulated thereby⁵

. . . . Dear Sir Your most Obed^t Serv^t.

Cha^s. Town 29th. July 1778—

Raw^s. Lowndes

L, ScU, South Caroliniana Library. Addressed below close: "His Excy Henry Laurens Esq^r." Docketed: "Presid^t Lowndes/29 July 1778/Rec^d 19 Aug^t/Ans^d 21st—." In the portions not included Lowndes discusses the end of the expedition against East Florida and the dispute over command of the expeditionary force that marred its last days. He discusses a commission issued to a French army officer by the governor of North Carolina as a possible precedent and the gist of his conversation with John Christian Senf concerning the disposition of British and German regimental flags after the Saratoga convention. He notes that reports of a battle have arrived from the North; congratulates Laurens on Congress' return to Philadelphia; details the case of John Mills and John Hutchinson, which includes the forgery of notes of exchange and possible espionage; and asks Laurens to look into the financial affairs of John Dorsius, who states that he has supplied a large sum of money to French officers traveling northward.

1. In his reply dated 20 Aug., Laurens promised to send Lowndes more commissions; ScHi, Henry Laurens Letter Book.

2. The convoy escorted by H.M.S. Southampton, Capt. William Garnier commanding, left Jamaica in late June.

3. The crew of sloop Dolphin, John Roberts, master, commandeered the vessel on 20 July. The American crew had been earlier taken prisoners by the British. Dolphin arrived at Charleston on 25 July. As Lowndes writes, the vessel's owner, James Jamieson, his wife Rebecca, and their four children were also on board, as was another passenger, Mrs. Margaret Bennet. The cargo consisted of 80 hogsheads of rum and "other articles" that were "in great demand." Laurens Papers 14: 89n.

4. Capt. Peter Bachop had commanded the East Florida Privateer sloop Tonyn's Revenge; Capt. George Osborne had commanded the East Florida Privateer sloop Ranger. On the capture of both vessels, see The Gazette, of the State of South-Carolina, 24 June, above. South Carolina sent eighty-two prisoners, including the crews of the Tonyn's Revenge and Ranger to St. Augustine aboard the Oakhampton packet cartel on 8 Aug. The Gazette, of the State of South-Carolina, 12 Aug.

5. In his reply of 20 Aug., Laurens wrote that the British only exchanged seamen of equal rank and that they treated captured American seamen with "a rigor and barbarity unheard of before the present contest." He then launched a diatribe about British policies toward American prisoners, concluding: "thousands [of American naval prisoners] have died languishing miserable deaths, they have exchanged the emaciated survivors, for healthy well fed fellows, compassion for fellow Citizens on our part has induced us to submit to the injustice and inequality of the Exchange"; SCHi, Henry Laurens Letter Book.

THE GAZETTE, OF THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1778

CHARLES-TOWN, July 29.

. . . Captain [Alexander] Stockdale likewise informs us, that the Experiment privateer brig, of New York, Captain David Squires, commissioned by Governor Bruere of Bermuda, who passed in sight of this Bar the 18th ult. has been cruising on the coast of North Carolina ever since, quitted only 12 days ago, with 7 prizes, amongst them a French ship¹ of 20 guns bound for this port, to a part of whose crew he gave the long boat, in which they got ashore at Bogue inlet.

A letter from North Carolina of 19th inst. says, Lord Howe has ordered 4 men of war to Chesapeak Bay, to cut out all French ships they may find trading there.²

The Comte de Sabran, Captain Bartholemi Garguy, mounting 26 guns, is safe in this port, from Marseilles.

Last Saturday night arrived here the sloop Dolphin, John Roberts late master, from Jamaica, intended for St. Augustine, till the 20th instant, when six Americans that were on board (who had been a considerable time prisoners in Jamaica, and had no other way to get off the island, but by assisting to navigate merchant vessels belonging to the enemy, or by entering on board their ships of war) thought proper to alter the voyage, by taking charge of the vessel, quitting convoy, and steering for this port. The fleet of which this sloop was one, consisted of 104 sail, and sailed from Blue fields Bay in Jamaica, the 25th of June, under convoy of the following ships of war, viz. the Southampton Frigate of 26 guns, Capt. Garnier,³ the Hind, Ostrich and Camel of 20 guns each,⁴ and the Stork sloop of 14, which last left them about the 10th instant, to proceed for her station at Pensacola.⁵ The sloop's cargo consists of, 80 hogsheads of rum, and some other sallable articles And there were passengers on board, Mr. James Jamieson, formerly of this town merchant (but some time since compelled to depart this state, on account of improper correspondence with the enemy) Mrs. Jameison (his lady) and 4 children and Mrs. Margaret Bennet.— Amongst the papers found on board are several letters of Capt. Venture,⁶ Henry Mickie, &c. &c. to Mr. Jamieson, and strong recommendations of him by the Captain to Lord Howe and others.

By the Jamaica News-papers to the 20th of June, we find, That on the 5th a Jamaica privateer carried into Montego-Bay, a Dutch snow called de Verre Keyker, Capt. Kamer, laden with elephant's teeth, tobacco, coffee and some rum, taken off Tiberon, on suspicion of belonging to Mr. Murray of Jamaica, and trafficking with the Americans; but by her papers belonging to Flushing, had been to the coast of Guiney for slaves, sold them at Curacoa, and from thence was returning for Holland.—

. . . Our other advices from Jamaica are, that a few days before the fleet left that island, two New-England vessels were carried in there, by the crews.— That a brig was fitting out at Montego-Bay, which might sail about this time, to cruize on this coast, called the Wasp, to mount 16 guns, and to be commanded by Capt. John Smith. And that the conduct of Admiral Sir Peter Parker (who now commands the fleet at Jamaica) to such Americans as have the misfortune to be carried there, is as widely different from that of his predecessor (Admiral [Clark] Gayton) as the true Gentleman's character differs from that of the savage.

1. Privateer brig Enterprize, Capt. Daniel Squires. See Rivington's The Royal Gazette, 1 Aug., below, for more on Enterprize.

2. This report was untrue.

3. H.M.S. Southampton, Capt. William Garnier, commanding.

4. H.M.S. Hind, Capt. Charles Hope, commanding; H.M. sloop Ostrich, Comdr. Peter Rainier, commanding, which carried fourteen guns; H.M. frigate Camel, Capt. Richard R. Bligh, commanding.

5. H.M. sloop Stork, Lt. Francis L'Montais, commanding.

6. Possibly Thomas Venture, captain of the British letter of marque True Briton, captured by Contimental Navy frigate Randolph in September 1777. See Capt. Nicholas Biddle to Robert Morris, 12 Sep. 1777, NDAR 9: 919–20.

CAPTAIN JAMES WILLING TO THE CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE

Sirs

New Orleans 29th. July 1778

A few days after my last to you,¹ Our Agent fitted out a large Batteau with the remainder of the States Goods to follow those already sent² and which we are informed are safe arrived at the Illinois, and will stay there untill either my Party or some other comes for them—but the loading and destination of those Goods were immediately after her departure known to the Tories, who sent off dispatches to Manchac then strong with British Troops and to Fort Natchez³ to intercept and cut her off, upon this Intelligence we sent off an Express who luckily reached her before she got to the Natchez and brought her back; Immediately applied to the G—⁴ here for permission to leave this and to endeavour to force my way up the River, this he absolutely refused alledging that should I be repulsed, he could not protect me and as the Enemy were well posted well armed and Three times my Number of Men and those well disciplin'd, upon a Counsell of the Agent Captⁿ Pickles⁵ and Officers here it was determined a thing impracticable to go up the River untill reinforced both with Men and Provisions, However altho we have been at a great expence to the States and have not as yet been able to fulfill our mission, We have distressed the Enemy very considerable and obliged them to erect Forts at Manchac and the Natchez which will be of great utility to the States in a future day as this Country of course must fall to Us, they have drawn down their Shipping and Troops from Jamaica to Pensacola and are putting that place in a state of Defence as they expect our People upon them momentarily, John Stewart and Harry Stewart⁶ the Superintendant and Comm^{rs}. have endeavoured to raise the Choctaws, Creeks and Chickesaws, against the States by giving them great presents but the Creeks decline and the other from the best intelligence wish to be quiet altho there is with their Commissaries in the River about 1,000 of them at different place, say Chickesaw Bluffs Fort Natchez & Manchac, I am informed by good authority that the presents given and expences the Government of Pensacola and Stewarts Gang have been at since my arrival has cost the Government £120 to £130,000 St^{ls} and the presents issued last Year to Indians alone amounted to £120,000 St^{ls}

The Sylph Sloop Captⁿ Ferguson⁷ of 12 Guns is at Manchac to prevent my passage up[;] she came here accompanyd with a 16 Gun Sloop with Arms, Ammunition &c and as God would have it sunk about 3 Leagues below this Town having Run upon a Stump however they saved some trifles out of her⁸—I have just received intelligence that Captⁿ OHara⁹ is arrived at Aux Arc and that he has forwarded Your Dispatches if so I shall receive them in a few Days and in consequence shall sett off through the Spanish Govern^t or by Sea immediately, should I go up the River or not its necessary for you to send a supply of Men and Provision and the Officer to have Orders to take the Goods from the Illinois, but in that as in every other Transaction I shall consult G—G—z[.]¹⁰ We have intelligence from the Intendant Gen^l of Hispaniola¹¹ that France has declared our Independance and that France, Spain, Portugal &c &c &c have enter'd into a Treaty of Commerce with Us for Thirty Years, if so, there will be inevitable a War with France should that be the case, from every thing I have seen of the Ohio and the Mississippi by establishing a few Posts, you'll have a sure Trade, the produce of Fort Pitt and the back Country will sell here very high, and Goods may be got in return A post of about 500 Men at the Falls of the Ohio, 250 Men at Aux Arc or Chickesaw Bluffs¹² about 700 Men at the Natchez and 300 Men at Manchac, this number of Men will secure to the States this River and part of the Province of West Florida and put it out of the power of Stewart and all his savage Gang to interrupt our Trade or take the Country, should there by a Spanish Warr Pensacola must fall however if the Men can be spared it would be worth while for the State to take it as they would find the benefit of it hereafter, but further particulars I refer You to the Agent and am Gentlemen [&c]

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MONTEGO BAY, JAMAICA

Extract of a letter from Montego Bay, Jamaica, to a gentleman in New York, dated July 29, 1778.

"On the 8th instant, cruising off the east end of this Island, we saw a vessel in shore and southward of us.¹ We gave chase, the Leowstoff's prize of 8 three pounders, commanded by Lieutenant Hibb, being in company, but 7 or 8 miles astern.² The chase on our drawing near made several signals; we made the signal of the day, which not being answered, shewed she was none of our fleet. We continued the chase, on which she shortened sail, hoisting a French flag. We fired a shot athwart her fore-foot,³ and Captain Rainer⁴ hailed the supposed Frenchman to lay his head the other way and he would send a boat on board him. He answered he would, but immediately discharged a broad side into us and hoisted the stripes (colours of the United States;) we instantly returned the salute, and the action became very hot on both sides. He wore and gave us the other broad side, and shot athwart our bow. As we had a little way, he fell on board us; on which Capt. Rainer ordered me at the head of some fine fellows to board the enemy. The first salute I had was a pike, which entangled in my hair, which forced me of[f] the fore peak. Returning, another struck in my ankle. On this we retired from the fore peak and employed ourselves in returning the pikes, tomahaws, &c. thrown by the enemy. After this, I mounted the fore-peak again and made a third attempt, when I received a pike in my throat, by which I was disabled.

The gunner of my party received a ball in his head and another through his body; two others were killed, and some wounded. The privateer then sheered from our bow and made a discharge of musketry, by which Capt. Rainer was wounded through his body and leg, and our Master killed. The conduct of the Ostrich fell to the Boatswain. Still the fight continued very briskly, and the privateer played round around us with great dexterity, and indeed throughout the action was worked to admiration. We should, however, soon have silenced her, if our boys had not suffered some cartridges to take fire, by which eight or nine fine fellows were blown up, and the vessel set on fire. In the confusion, some cried “hawl down the colours.” Just at the moment the truck of the flag-staff was shot away, and the colours fell. The crew of the Leowstoff's prize imagined we had struck. Capt. Rainer in the cabin hearing the cry to lower the colours, ordered them to be hoisted in the mizzen shrouds, which was done. In two or three minutes the fire was put out; and now the action was renewed with double spirit. Soon after the Leowstoff's prize came up, and in about a quarter of an hour after the enemy struck.⁵ The action lasted from three to six. We had the Master and 5 other killed and 27 wounded; the privateer about 60 killed and wounded, as we learned. We threw 23 of their dead over board. She is called the Polly, Mons. Piegant, Commander, a resolute, daring man, who luckily fell in the latter part of the fight, else more bloodshed would have happened, for our Captain was determined never to yield.⁶ The crew, save two or three, were all French. She mounts 6 nine pounders, 16 six pounders cannon, 30 swivels, and 8 cohorns in her tops, and had 140 men;⁷ a vessel compleatly fitted, but much shattered in the action.⁸

“The Ostrich is an old merchant ship, without a fore-castle, with a windlass and masts as formerly, carries four pounders, and goes heavily. Admiral Gayton purchased and fitted her.⁹

“We daily expect to hear great events from you, either through the Commissioners,¹⁰ or fleet and army. We have no news for a long time from America or England.”

Pennsylvania Packet or the General Advertiser (Philadelphia), 17 September 1778.

1. It is clear that the author was Lt. Edward O'Bryen. Comdr. Peter Rainier's official account of this engagement, addressed to Rear Admiral Sir Peter Parker, on 11 July, above, mentions that O'Bryen suffered the pike wound in the throat the author discusses later in his letter.

2. H.M. armed brigantine Lowestoffe's Prize, Lt. Robert Hibbs, commanding. According to testimony in a later court-martial, Lowestoffe's Prize was “four Leagues” from H.M. sloop Ostrich when the engagement began. UklPR, Adm. 1/1530, fol. 100.

3. The forefoot was the upward-curving timber connecting the keel of a vessel to its bow. The term was also used to describe the area of a vessel in the immediate vicinity of that connection.

4. Comdr. Peter Rainier.

5. As seen in the notes at Rainier to Admiral Sir Peter Parker, 11 July, above, the actions of Lowestoffe's Prize during this engagement became a point of controversy and resulted in the court-martial of its commander, Lt. Robert Hibbs.

6. In his published letter giving an account of this engagement, Rainier calls the captain “a native of Ireland.” Rivington's Royal Gazette (New York), 23 Sept. 1778.

7. In his published letter, Rainier writes that Polly had 16 6- and 9-pounders, 12 swivels and 8 cohorns in her tops, with 175 men, chiefly Frenchmen.

8. Rear Adm. Sir Peter Parker later purchased Polly and commissioned it as a sloop in the Royal Navy.

9. Vice Adm. Clark Gayton, Parker's predecessor as commander of the Jamaica squadron.

JULY 30

ROYAL GOVERNOR JOHN MONTAGU OF NEWFOUNDLAND TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN

Europe in S^t Johns Harbour

My Lord

30th July 1778—

I have the honour to acquaint your Lordship that I arrived here the 25th. Ins^t. and found the Brilliant and Commerce Arm'd ships in the Service of the Ordnance¹ who brought over the Company of Artillery, and some Recruits belonging to different Regiments, who, for want of Barracks are encamped on the Barrens. The two Transports that Sailed from Cork with me, (and from whom I parted in a hard gale of Wind) are also arrived.

I am sorry to inform your Lordship that the Privateers are doing much mischief in the out Harbours, and that I greatly fear before the Summer is over most of the out Ports will be destroyed.

The few ships I have shall be constantly employed for their protection, but the Privateers being very small, will make it difficult to get at them.

The Ships of my Squadron have been very unfortunate. The Spy Sloop is lost off Cape Race, The Proteus totally disabled, and the Postillion not fit to go to Sea;² By these accidents the squadron is so reduced as to prevent my complying with my orders so effectually as I could wish;

Captain Pringle³ has made known to me the directions of the Board of Ordnance, to take the Serviceable Guns from Placentia, and send them to Quebec. But, as I find the Different parts of the Island daily attacked by the small Privateers. I have given him my order to let the Guns remain and have ordered Lieutenant Colonel Hay to send the Company of Highland Emigrants to strengthen that Garrison.⁴ I have also proposed to the Merchants at the different Harbours to supply them with Guns &c. to defend themselves, and their property against these small Vessels, This I hope will meet with your Lordships approbation.

As I find it is impossible to provide any place to Lodge the Number of Troops sent hither. I shall order the Recruits of the 4th and 54th. to Halifax.

It surprises me much that neither myself, Lieutenant Colonel Hay, or any of the Officers of the different Corps have any directions in what manner they are to proceed. I have the honour to be [&c.]

THE CONTINENTAL JOURNAL, AND WEEKLY ADVERTISER (BOSTON),
THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1778

BOSTON, July 30.

The public is warned not to be anxious to make hasty purchases of cloathing and other necessaries at the very extravagant prices at present extorted by the dealers. It should be considered that the arrival of the superior naval force on the coasts of this country sent for our relief by our great and good ally the king of France, has already broken the chain of cruizers which heretofore disappointed almost every effort made by our European friends to supply us; but, considering the very exposed situation of the goods lately hurried away from Philadelphia (now water born in the bay of New York) we may contemplate the likelihood of seeing some dozens of these valuable cargoes returning very soon to our wharfes, as prizes to the Count D'Estaing and consigned to Congress for sale. It is certain that the French Admiral would not be able to find a more suitable market for these merchandizes.

It is said, the Count D'Estaing has more than a common number of marines on board his fleet, besides the 3000 land forces, mentioned in the French and London papers; so that, he can land upon occasion, a body of four or five thousand men, under experienced and picked officers.

THE INDEPENDENT CHRONICLE, AND THE UNIVERSAL ADVERTISER (BOSTON), THURSDAY,

DIARY OF CAPTAIN FREDERICK MACKENZIE, BRITISH ARMY

[Newport] R. ISLAND

30th July. Fine Weather. Little wind last night.

Our Frigates¹ employed in landing their Guns, Stores, &c. The Lark received orders, after most of her things were on shore, to re-ship them, and be ready to run through Bristol ferry into Mount Hope Bay, if The French Fleet should come in.

At day break The French Fleet appeared in the same position they were in last night. Soon after day break, a two-decker,² with her Colours out, stood over for the Narragansett passage,³ with the wind at W. As soon as she had passed the Light house⁴ she crouded sail, and stood up the passage. At 6 she reached opposite Fox-hill battery, which fired 4. 24 l^b shot at her, each of which she returned with 7 or 8. However, she passed without any apparent damage, and about 7 o'Clock anchored half way between the N. point of Connonicut⁵ and Hope Island.

About the same time another large Ship stood in, and anchored off the entrance of the harbour, about 2 Miles from the S. point of Brenton's Neck, there she was soon after joined by two of the Easternmost ships of the fleet, who also anchored.

The two French Frigates⁶ in the *Seconnet*⁷ came up early this Morning, and anchored in the Station lately occupied by The Kingsfisher.

At 8 this Morning a Frigate appeared to the Eastward, near Martha's Vineyard. As soon as she discovered the French Fleet at anchor off the harbour, she crouded all the sail she could, and stood off to the S.E. We suppose her to be an English Frigate.— Probably the Sphinx.⁸ The General, judging it would answer but little purpose to risque the loss of the Detachments upon Connonicut, sent orders, as soon as The French ship had passed the Battery on Fox-hill, to withdraw them and the Guns from that Island. The Troops were brought off; but as there was not a sufficient Number of Oxen to remove the Guns, those on Fox-hill were spiked, and the 2. 24p^{rs} on the Dumplings⁹ were thrown down the Rock into the Sea. The Island was entirely Evacuated by 10 o'Clock, without any interruption.

At 9 o'Clock another two Decker¹⁰ stood up the Narragansett passage, and at 12 anchored near the first.

Wind W. after 12 o'Clock.

At 1 o'Clock, the Two French frigates in the Seconnet got under way with the Wind at N.W. and stood up towards Fogland.¹¹ As soon as they reached Black point, orders were given to set fire to The Kingsfisher, which was immediately done. The Gallies¹² ran up as far as the S. side of the Sandy point, where they were also set on fire, and in a short time the three vessels were in flames. The moment the fire appeared the Frigates shortened sail, and they soon after anchored about a mile and half S. of the bluff point of Fogland, near the Rebel shore. There is a Brig in company with them.¹³ Our vessels continued to burn fiercely, and about 3, the Alarm blew up and went to atoms. The Spitfire having some sails set, kept under way down the passage, and did not blow up 'till she got near the Bluff-point. The Kingsfisher burnt almost to the waters edge, and then breaking off from her anchor, drifted over behind the Bluff point where she went ashore, and soon after blew up. As there was not time to land the guns of these vessels, and they were loaded, they went off as the fire reached them. Several of the shot fell near the Barracks, but fortunately no damage was done by them.

I think our people were rather precipitate in burning the vessels, for had the Gallies run to the N. Side of the Sandy point, and there waited the approach of the Enemy, who must have advanced under the fire of the 2. 12p^s at Fogland, and the 18 p^s of the Gallies, which last would have raked them as they came up, they might have been saved for the present, and probably the Frigates might have suffered in attempting to come so high up. The preservation of the Gallies would have been a matter of great consequence to us. They might have run into Shoal water under Quaker-hill, or even higher up under the protection of the guns at Windmill hill, and the Howland's bridge Redoubt where the Enemy could not have annoyed them.

The Frigates appear to be about 28 Guns each. Several boats went from them to the Rebel shore as soon as they anchored, but no considerable numbers of people appear on the shore.

We have not observed any particular movements among the Rebels since the arrival of The French fleet. They are in general perfectly quiet at all the posts near us, and certainly are not prepared for a descent on the Island.

Some small Sloops came up the Seconnet in the Evening, and joined the Frigates.

The 54th Regiment returned to their Encampment this Day.

76 Rebel prisoners were landed this Morning from the Prison ships in the harbour, and lodged in the Barracks within the Redoubt at Fogland Ferry.

We have a party employed in repairing the Redoubt at Bristol ferry. The Rebels fired two shots at them to day, but without effect.

The French took possession of Connonicut this day and hoisted a White Colour there.

It is expected the Rebels will place some Guns in the Battery on the Dumplins, in order to annoy our Battery on Brenton's point, and facilitate the entry of the French Fleet.

Several boats passed from the Narraganset shore this day to the French fleet.

The French ships off the harbour continued in the same position at Nightfall as Curières de Castelnau de Saint-Cosme-Sainte-Eulalie, and Alcmène, commanded by Lieutenant de vaisseau Pierre-René-Bénigne-Mériadec, comte de Bonneval Ruffo.

COMMANDER HUGH CLOBERRY CHRISTIAN, R.N., TO CAPTAIN JOHN BRISBANE, R.N.

(Read) Copy of a letter from Captain Hugh Cloberry Christian: dated Fog land the 30th. July 1778. to Captain Brisbane relative to the loss of his Majesty's Sloop Kings Fisher.

S^r Fogland [R.I.] July 30th. 1778.

Yesterday Evening about 5 oClock two French Frigates¹ and an Armed Brig² entered the Seaconnet Passage.³ I weighed anchor with his Majesty's Sloop Kings Fisher under my Command and Run up to this place, the Frigates Anchoring near the Station which I had left, I began to land the Stores and Provisions agreeable to orders,⁴ at 1 oClock this Day the Frigates and Brig (after making some Signals) weighed and stood towards us with a strong Breeze of wind at SW. as I saw no probability of defending the Ship against such Superior force, I set her on fire when the Enemy were Just within Cannon Shot, the Provisions and the greatest part of the Stores were landed, as were 2 of the Guns. the rest were Spiked and the Ship effectually destroyed, I made known to the Officers commanding the Gallies⁵ my intention of destroying the Kings Fisher and desired them to Run up into Shoal water, to Ground their Vessels and to act as circumstances might require, but to prevent the Capture of their vessels by burning them, those Officers have I presume made known to you the steps which they have taken. I have the Honor to be S^r [&c.]

CAPITAINE PIERRE-RENÉ-BÉNIGNE-MÉRIADÉC, COMTE DE BONNEVAL RUFFO TO VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING

Mon Général

J'ay L'honneur de vous informer, quoyque M^r de S^t Cosme Sous Les ordres duquel Je Suis, S'acquitte de Ce devoir,¹ que Conformement à vos ordres, Je mouillay hier à 7 heures du Soir à L'Entrée de La passe de L'Est de Rhode island à une grande portée de Canon d'un Camp anglois qui me parut Contenir à peu près Cing Cent hommes, à Mon arrivée j'apperçus une petite frégatte Sous voile, qui Chercha a S'Enfoncer desqu'elle me vit, et que je Crus ne pas devoir suivre pour Le moment, de L'avis de mes pilotes pratiques, qui m'assurèrent, qu'elle alloit se refugier sous Les Batteries angloises.

à huit heures et demy M^r de S^t Cosme vint mouiller à un Cable de L'alcmène ; Je L'informay de Ce que j'avois apperçu : Son premier Soin, (nos pilotes n'etant pas absolument d'accord sur Les moyens que nous pouvions Employer pour detruire Cette fregatte) fut d'Ecrire selon vos intentions au Général Suliwan qui se trouve dans Ce moment Cy à la providence, et au major Général Conwel² Commandant su fort ou poste american de howlands ffiry pour Se Concarter avec Eux sur nos opérations : Ce matin au Lever du Soleil nous avons apperçu dans la passe Cette même frégatte et deux galères³ L'une maltée à voile Latine et L'autre en brigantine mouillies fort près de La Côte de L'isle. Sur Ce qu'un Colonel américain m'a fait dire, qu'il Croyoit que Les anglaise avoient enlevé La Grosse artillerie de Leurs Batteries, M^r de S^t Cosme et [moi] Sommes Convénus de nous Enfoncer dans la passe Si Le vent Le permettoit de tacher d'enlever ou détruire Ces trois Battiments, en Effet à un heure après midy les vents O.S.O. nous avons appareillé Sous petite voile, la [brik] le *Stanley*⁴ à notre Suite, et passants par un Chéanal assés Etroit mais [illeg.] nous avons toujours trouvé de Six à Sept Brasses d'eau, nous avons donné dans La passe. à notre arrivée la Galere maltée à Brigantin qui etait plus en dehors a mis sous voile pour nous fuir ; un instant après la fr[égatte] qui etoit mouillée et Embossée sous un Camp anglois d'où on nous à [tiré] quelques Coups de Canon qui ne sont pas venus à Bord et auxquels nous n'avon pas répondu S'est Brulée avant que nous fussions à portée Canoner ; nous allions poursuivre Les deux Galeres qui etaient sous voiles déjà très Enfoncées, Lorsqu'à L'imitation de la frègatte elles ont pris [illeg.] Le parti de Se Bruler : Les vents alors NNO. Nous avons été forcées de [illeg.] par Les Cinq Brasses et demy, Bon fond, à une demy portée de Canon de Côte angloise et à un Cable et demy de La terre firme.

la plus forte de Ces Galeres n'a pas tardé de sauter en L'air [illeg.] de nous, L'autre dont Les voiles etoient orientées vent arriere et qui [illeg.] avoit respecté quoyque Le Copes du Batiment on fut Convert [illeg.] dessus et nous eut inquietté si nous ne Luy avions detaché nos Bateaux [?] à rame pour La détourner, Cette opération S'Est faite avec Succés mais non sans risque puisque L'ayant à La remorque elle a Suté en L'air et Coulé Bas pour La frègatte dont Les amarres ont sans doute eté Brulées, elle à abandonné la Côte de L'isle et est venue darriver sur Cette du Continent ; ne la voyant pas Sauter en L'air quoyque Le feu La dévorat depuis plus de deux heures j'ay Cru ses poudres enlevées ou Noyées et en Consequence j'ay detaché mes Battiments à rame pour tacher d'Eteindre ou du moins enlever quelque Chose mais ils ont fait à Cet Egard des vains Efforts et ont Encore Couru des grands risques par L'Explosion de La poudre qui S'Est Enflammée dans Le moment où quelques uns de mes Gens etoient à Bord, Cependant personne n'a pris mal. Enfin Mon Général Cette frègatte Brule Encore et la Cap^{ne} du Bateau american qui m'a paru juoir avec plaisir de Ce Spectacle pourra vous Le Certifier.

avec des Ennemis aussi prudents je puis vous Certifier Mon Général que tout Ce qu'il etoit possible de faire a eté fait. J'ay La Satisfaction de pourvoir vous Dire que mon Equipage m'a donné Les plus fortes Espérances de Valeur Cette affaire n'a pas été Chaude mais elle pouvoit L'Être et La Bonne Volonté et La joye me repondoient déjà des plus grands succès Lors même que nous aurions trouvé de grandes difficultés à Combattre ; J'ose vous supplier de Luy en tenir Compte et de Le mettre souvent à même de Contribuer à votre gloire.

Mes Officiers au dessus de toute Eloge n'ont pu en meriter dans Cette occasion permittée moy Cependant Mon Général de vous faire Celuy de M^e D'orcet⁵ auquel il n'a pas tenu que nous ayons Sauvé la frégatte incendiée s'il y eut eu de la possibilité, et qu'il s'est plus Exposé que je ne L'aurois voulu.

Dans Ce moment Cy mon Général nous sommes ainsi que j'ay eu L'honneur de vous Le Dire mouillés à demy portée de Canon de la Côte angloise, et Embossés pour Luy presenter Le travers et Canoner s'il plait aux Ennemis d'apporter du Canon sur La Cotte.

S'il faut en Croire plusieurs américains qui nous assiègent dans nos [bords ?] Le Gâl Suliwan sera icy samedy prochain à la tête de trente mille de milice⁶ s'il a Besoin de notre aide M^e de S^t Cosme et moy L'Empressons de Luy en donner.

On nous assure Encore qu'il sera possible de faire icy un peu d'Eau, et y travaillerons Mon Général si vos ordres nous Le permettent. Je suis [&c.]

My General

I have the honor of informing you, although M. de St. Cosme under the orders of which I am, acquitted himself of this duty,¹ that conforming to your orders I anchored yesterday at 7 in the evening at the entrance of the East Passage of Rhode Island at long canon shot from an English camp that appeared to me to contain nearly five hundred men, on my arrival I noticed a small frigate under sail, which sought to hide itself as soon as it saw me, and that I believed I should not follow for the moment, on the advice of my local pilots who assured me that it took refuge under the English batteries.

At eight thirty M. de St. Cosme came to anchor at a cable's length from the Alcmène; I informed him of what I had seen: His first care (our pilots not being absolutely in accord on the means that we could employ to destroy this frigate) was to write according to his instructions to General Sullivan who was at that moment in Providence, and to Major General Conwel² commandant of the American fort or post of Howlands Ferry in order to consult with them on our operations: This morning at sunrise we saw in the pass the same frigate and two galleys,³ one Maltese with lateen sails and the other brigantine-rigged anchored very near the island's shore. On what an American colonel had informed me that he believed that the English had removed the large artillery of their batteries, and St. Cosme and I agreed to withdraw into the pass if the wind permitted it to try to remove or destroy those three ships, in fact at 1:30 pm the winds W.S.W. we weighed anchor under little sail, the brig *Stanley*⁴ following us, and passing by a rather narrow channel we were still in from six to seven fathoms of water, we went into the pass. On our arrival the Maltese brigantine galley which was the more outside set sail to fly from us; an instant later the frigate, which was anchored and broadside under an English camp from which they fired on us a few canon shots which did not come aboard and to which we did not respond, was set on fire before we were within cannonade; we went to pursue the two galleys that were under sail already very far away, when in imitation of the frigate they were set on fire. The winds then NNW. We were forced by the five and a half fathoms, good bottom, at half cannon shot from the English shore and a cable and a half from the mainland.

The stronger of these two galleys did not delay leaping in the air [near ?] us, the other, whose sails were backed to the wind and that [illeg.] had respected although the [?] of the boat had been covered above and would have worried us if we had not detached our rowboats to deflect it, this operation was done with success but not without risk, since having it in tow it leapt into the air and sank.

For the frigate whose cables had without a doubt been burned, it abandoned the shore of the island and arrived on the shore of the mainland; not seeing it leap into the air although the fire devoured it for two hours, I believed its powder to be removed or drowned and in consequence I detached my rowboats to try to extinguish or at least remove something, but they made in this regard vain efforts and again ran grave risks by the explosion of the powder which caught fire the moment some of my people were on board, however no one was harmed. In fact, my General, this frigate is still burning and the captain of the American boat, who appeared to me to enjoy this spectacle with pleasure, can certify it to you.

With enemies so prudent I can certify, My General, that everything that was possible to do was done. I have the satisfaction of being able to tell you that my crew gave me the strongest expectations of valor, this affair was not hot but it could have been and the good will and the joy already answer the greatest success even when we may find great difficulties to fight; I dare ask you to hold them to account for it and often to employ it to contribute to your glory.

My inferior officers of all praise have not been able to merit any on this occasion, permit me however, My General, to make that of M. D'Orcet,⁵ through whom we would have saved the burning frigate if it had been possible, and who exposed himself more than I would have wanted.

At this moment, my General, we are, as I have the honor to tell you, anchored at half cannon shot from the English shore, and broadside on to present the cannonade if it pleases the enemy to bring cannons to the shore.

If one must believe it of several Americans who besiege us on board, General Sullivan will be here next Saturday at the head of thirty thousand militia,⁶ if he has need of our help M. de Cosme and I will strive to give it to him.

We are still assured that it would be possible to take on a little water here, and we shall work at it, My General, if your orders permit.

j'ai l'honneur de vous rendre compte que j'ai mouillé hier au soir a huit heures et demi dans la riviere siconet aussi avant que les pilotes voulurent me Mesner. Lalcme et le bricq¹ avoient mouillé demi heure au paravant m^r de bonneval ma dit avoir aperçu la corvette a la voile, les pilotes point quelle fut se refugiers sous une baterie anglaise quilz massurerent etre de dix canons du calibres de 32. ce matin je lai appercue tres pres de terre et tres pres de la baterie avec une galere que les memes pilotes mon dit porter deux canons de dix huit en avant et six canons en baterie, et un autre Batiment portant une piece de dix huit et quatre canons en baterie.² je nai pas cru mon general devoir les attaquer sans minformer de letat vrai de ces forces, et j'ai ecrit a m^c. Le general sullivan³ pour le prevenir des ordres que vous mavies donné et au general cornell⁴ qui commande en son absence pour les prier de me donner des eclairissements. je nai pas encore recu leurs reponses, mais dans lintervalle ayant appris par un colonel americain dont j'ignore le nom quil etoit persuadé que les anglais avoient transporté leurs gros canons du coté du nord, je me suis decidé, malgré lirresolution et la contradiction des pilotes pratiques de meclairer par moi meme le vent d'o.s.o me permettant de prendre un mouillage qui est hors de la portée du canon j'ai appareillé a une heure après midy lorsque la marée et le vent metant permis. ce parti a tres bien reussi quant a la destruction des batimens, la corvette et la galere ont été en flammes avant que nous fussions a la grande portée, et nous navons pas eu meme de bruler un amorce. la baterie a tiré quelques coups je nai point reposté netant pas a portée de faire du mal. le troisieme batiment nous a été detaché en espece de brulot très bien dirigé pour la route la marée et le vent le portant sur moi, mais trop pressé par le feu il a sauté en lair a environ trois cables de la fregate au moment où m^r de grasse⁵ venoit de laccrocher pour le detourner, j'ai peur pour lui, par le plus grand bonheur personne na été tué [illeg.] des eclats de deux coups de canons qui etoient pointés a couler bas. jespere mon general que vous voudres bien tenir compte à mon equipage de la bonne volonté quil à montre j'ose me flatter daprès sa bonne contenance que javais [?] le compte le plus avantageuse a vous en rendues. m^r de bonneval a Rien [?] de vous ecrire selon vos ordres, sans quoi je vous dirai mon general, apres lui et moi avions la meilleure envie de bien faire je compte garder ce mouillage jusqu'a [ce qui] vos ordres me rappellent, a moins que les projets du general sullivan ne mengage a en changer jespere mon general que vous approuveres que je profite du loisir quon nous laissera pour faire de leau et du bois dont lune et lautre fregate ont grand besoin, peut etre faudra employer des charettes ; sil est possible de faire autrement je chercherai a eviter cette depense. je ne dois pas oublier mon general que vous direz que jespere sauver en partir les canons de la corvette le Kingfisher qui en portoit dix huit en baterie et quelques uns sur le gaillard, son cable a brulé et la marée la fait darriver assés pour pouvoir sans hazard et les batimens a rames la faire remorquer sur la rivage du continent où elle est echouée actuellement quoique le feu soit encore tres vifs jespere pouvoir faire travailler demain matin[. . .]

je vous demande pardon mon general de vous rendre un compte aussi diffus je nesperais pas pouvoir vous donner de vues [?] nouvelles ce soir, et je nai pas le tems de le rendre plus court, voulant vous renvoyer ce soir le bâteau et etant interrompu a tous moment par nombres d'americains. je crois que je pouvois vous donner demain matin des nouvelles par la voie du general sullivan je ne son vieu encore mais jattens un bateau [illeg.] minuit j'ai lhonneur detre

My general

I have the honor of reporting to you that I anchored yesterday in the evening at eight thirty in the Seconet River as far advanced as the pilots wanted to lead me. The Alcmène and the brig had anchored a half-hour earlier.¹ M. de Bonneval told me that he had seen the corvette under sail, the pilots thought that it was taking refuge under an English battery that they assured me was of ten cannons of the caliber of 32. This morning I perceived it very near the land and very near the battery with a galley that the same pilots told me carry two guns of 18 in the bow and six guns in battery, and another ship carrying one piece of eighteen and for guns in battery.² I did not believe, my general, that I should attack without informing myself of the true state of these forces, I wrote to General Sullivan³ to alert him to the orders you had given me and to General Cornell⁴ who commands in his absence to beg them to give me some clarifications. I have not yet received their responses, but in the interval, having learned from an American colonel whose name I do not know that he was persuaded that the English had transported their large cannon from the north side, I decided, despite the irresolution and contradiction of the local pilots, to reconnoiter myself, the wind from the WSW permitting me to take an anchorage out of cannon shot, I weighed anchor a half hour after noon when the tide and wind permitted. This action succeeded very well as to the destruction of the ships, the corvette and the galley were in flames before we were within long cannon shot, and we had not even had a shot fired. The battery fired several shots, I did not at all reply, not being within range to do any damage. The third ship had been detached to us as a fire ship, very well directed for its route, the tide and wind carrying to toward me, but too hurried by the fire it leaped into the air at about three cable-lengths from the frigate at the moment that M. de Grasse⁵ had just hooked onto it in order to turn it aside, I feared for him, by the greatest of fortune no one was injured by the explosion nor by two cannon shots which fired at the sinking. I hope, my general, that you will be so good as to take account of the good will that my crew showed, I dare flatter myself following its good constancy of which I make the most advantageous account in reporting it to you. M. de Bonneval has nothing [?] to write to you according to his orders, without which I would tell you, my general, he and I have the best desire of doing well. I intend to keep this anchorage to which your orders remind me, unless the plans of General Sullivan engage me to change it. I hope, my general, that you will approve that I profit from the leisure that we have been left to take on water and wood, of which the one and the other frigate have great need, perhaps I should use carts; if it is possible to do otherwise, I shall try to avoid this expense. I ought not forget, my general, to tell you that I hope to save some of the corvette the Kingsfisher's cannons, which carried eighteen of them in broadside and some on the quarterdeck. Its cable burned and the tide brought it far enough for the rowboats without hazard to tow to the shore of the mainland where it is currently aground, although the fire may be still very lively I hope to be able to have work done on it tomorrow morning. . . .

I beg your pardon, my general, for rendering a report so diffuse. I did not hope to be able to give you any new views this evening, and I do not have the time to render it briefer, wanting to send the boat back to you this evening and being interrupted every moment by numbers of Americans. I believe that tomorrow morning I can give you some news by way of General Sullivan. I have not his views yet but I expect a boat any minute. I have the honor to be [&c.]

I think it shou’d be proper that I might have an opportunity to speak with you or somebody you trust upon that I shou’d Know the better what I shall do for the best, and to be well acquainted Concerning the english forces hereabout. the american pilots sent to me don’t agree among themselves upon that matter. My General was advis’d here was anchor’d a sloop of war of sixteen guns;⁵ and I perceive, myself, that here are a galley and a third ship⁶ anchor’d under an English Batery that my american pilots believe strong of ten guns of two and thirty pounders: my Guns being but of Eight pounders are very likely not strong enough that I may hope we cou’d destroy her under Such a Shelter. May it please your honour, to give me all the hints in your power that I may be enabled to fulfill the orders given me by my general, who charges me to follow all the Directions you will give me to protect and help your Descend. VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING TO MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN

En mer Le 30 Juillet 1778.

J'ai Recu par Monsieur Le Colonel Laurence¹ la lettre que vous m'avez fait l'honneur de m'écrire le 25 de Juillet.² J'en ay admiré les Vûes, et J'en ay étudié les details.

Les Deux plus petites fregattes, L'Aimable, et L'Alcmene et le Brigantin Le *Stanley*³ sont Entré hier au soir dans le Canal de L'Est.⁴ les Vaisseaux le fantasque, et le sagittaire n'ont pu donner que le matin Dans Celui de L'Oüest,⁵ et le Chenal du milieu⁶ Est Bloqué par L'Escadre. voila Je crois Les mouvements préliminaires que Vous avez eu la bonté de m'indiquer; J'ai eu plus en Vüe en les executant, de faciliter Votre Debarquement, que de faire des prises. Je presume que tous les Batiments anglaises, sont actuellement a Newport, sous la protection de leurs Batteries. Je vous serai très obligé de faire passer a M^r le Commandeur de Suffren, Capitaine des Vaisseaux du Roy,⁷ Commandant le fantasque de 64 canons, et a M^r D albert de Rions⁸ Commandant le sagittaire de 50 Canons, l'indication de ce qu'ils doivent faire pour Vous être Le plus utile.

MM. Les chevaliers de S^t Cosme,⁹ et de Bonneval¹⁰ Commandant L'Aimable, et L'Alcmene executtiront aussi tout ce que Vous Croires Convenable. Je vous supplie de leur faire parvenir les instructions Les plus frequentes qu'il Vous sera possible. Je n'en ay pas moins Besoin, Monsieur, que ces officiers.

Ce que disent les pilottes annonce que je ne peux pas m'embossier plus près qu'a un demi mille de distance de la principale Batterie, qui est Celle de Dyers-point.¹¹ l'avantage du feu des Vaisseaux sur celui De terre, diminue en Raison de Eloignement. au dela de la portée Du fusil, ce n'est plus que du Bruit. un navire Recoit du dommage, sans presque En causer. est il plus pries, il detruit, et Renverse tout. ou nous assure aussi qu'il n'est point de Mouillage Dans Newport où l'on soit à L'abry du Canon de terre. s'expera a etre pendant un Jour Entier tiré au Blanc sans aucune fruit, est une position facheuse pour toute une escadre. passer sous le feu des Batteries, pour celles mouiller plus loin, est très possible, mais alors L'Ennemi pourrait Se Sauver, et la porte lui serait ouverte. Laisser un Vaisseau pour Continuer a bloquer Le Chenal Du Milieu, pendant que Le Reste de L'Escadre forceroit le passage, diminuerait le nombre de mes troupes de débarquement; c'est Cependant le parte qui pourrait paraitre Reunir Le plus de probabilités et de prudence; parcequ'on peut tentir d'eteindre les feu des Batteries, et que si on n'y Reussit pas, on passe au dela, et que l'objet se trouve a moitié Rempli. mais s'affaiblir lorsqu'on n'est pas très fort a des grands inconveniences, et J'en aiderais D autant moins Vos operations sur terre.

Je ne connais ny le genre, ni la position des deffenses, et ce que me disent les pilottes ne m'a nullement éclairé sur cet objet. ils Varient Beaucoup sur une infinité d'autres articles maritimes; J'attends de Vos nouvelles pour fixer un plan toujours nécessaire avant que d'agir. il me paraît que Votre intention est que nous operions précisément ensemble, et que J'attende l'arrivée de M^r le Marquis de la Fayette. La position dans laquelle Je me trouve ne peut finir trop tôt mes Besoins D'Eau L'exigent, et chaque instant Donnera à L'Ennemi une fortification de plus; Messieurs le Colonel Laurence, et Lieutenant Colonel de fleury¹² Voudront Bien, Monsieur Vous Rendre Compte de mes Joués D'hier au soir sur L'attaque De Cononikut.¹³ Ce que Vous En penserés Decidera Le cas que nous Devons faire De ce projet. J ay l'honneur D'etre avec Respect, Monsieur, [&c.]

Sir

At Sea 30 July 1778.

I have received by Colonel Laurens¹ the letter that you have done me the honor of writing to me on July 25th;² I have admired its views and I have studied its details.

The Two smallest frigates, the Aimable and the Alcmène, and the brigantine *Stanley*³ entered the East Channel⁴ yesterday evening. The ships of the line Fantasque and Sagittaire could not come into the West Channel⁵ until this morning, and the Middle Channel⁶ is Blockaded by the Squadron. Such are, I believe, the preliminary movements that You have had the kindness to indicate to me. In executing them I wished to facilitate Your Landing rather than to take prizes. I presume that all the English Ships are now at Newport under the protection of their Batteries. I shall be greatly obliged to you if you will indicate to M. the Commandeur de Suffren,⁷ Capitaine de Vaisseau, commanding the Fantasque of 60 guns, and to M. D'albert de Rions,⁸ commanding the Sagittaire of 50 Guns, what they can do to be most useful to You.

MM. the Chevaliers de Saint-Cosmé,⁹ and de Bonneval,¹⁰ Commanding the Aimable and the Alcmène, will execute also all that You Think Proper. I beg you to see that instructions are sent to them as frequently as possible; I do not have less Need of them, Sir, than do these officers.

The pilots tell me that I cannot anchor nearer than a half-mile of the principal Battery, which is That on Dyers Point.¹¹ The advantage of the fire from Vessels over that from land, diminishes in Proportion to the Distance. Beyond the range of the guns, it is nothing more than Noise. a ship Receives damage without causing much. If it is nearer, it destroys, and Knocks down everything. We are assured also that there is no Anchorage At Newport where we can be sheltered from the Guns on land. To be subject to being fired on Point-blank for a Whole Day without any result, is an unfortunate position for any squadron. It is very possible to pass under the fire of the Batteries in order to go and anchor farther away, but then the Enemy could Escape, for the door would be open to them. To leave one Ship to Continue to blockade the Middle Channel, while the Rest of the Squadron forced the passage, would diminish the number of my troops on landing; it is However the plan which would seem to Combine most satisfactorily both probability and prudence, because if one does not succeed there in an attempt to silence the fire of the Batteries, one passes beyond them, and the purpose will be half-Realized. but to become weakened when one is not very strong, has great inconveniences, and I should then be so much less help to Your operations on land.

I know neither the kind nor the position of the defenses and what the pilots tell me has not enlightened me at all on this subject. they Disagree Considerably on a multitude of other maritime subjects; I await news from You before making any plan, which is always necessary before acting. It seems to me that it is Your intention that we act precisely at the same time, and that I await the arrival of M. the Marquis de Lafayette. The position in which I find myself cannot be ended too soon; my Need of Water demands it, and every instant Gives the Enemy one more advantage. Colonel Laurens and Lieutenant Colonel de Fleury¹² are going, Sir, to Report to You on my Success of yesterday evening in attacking Conanicut.¹³ What You think of it will Decide what we should do regarding this plan. I have the honor to be, Sir, [&c.]

From Wednesday 29 to Thursday 30

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon [illeg.] and made two small tacks in order to anchor in front of the West Passage and that of the Middle. At 3 o'clock the entire squadron anchored at the distance of from one third to two thirds of a league in front of the two passages in 20 fathoms, bottom of mud, the land the farthest south to the SW $\frac{1}{2}$ W, the farthest East to the E $\frac{1}{2}$ NE and the lighthouse¹ to the north 5° N West. An hour later an American privateer of 14 guns arrived and saluted with 13 guns.

Thursday 30 continued

The frigates the *Aimable*² and the *Alcmène*³ as soon as they had their pilots on board the General⁴ gave them orders to go anchor in the East Passage, which they executed before nightfall, not allowing ships of under 20 guns to leave this passage, and ordered *Sagittaire*⁵ to anchor at the entrance of the West Passage in order to enter it the next morning, this passage not being fortified, or at least with only a few canon. Before nightfall, the English burned several ships and blew up a storehouse.⁶ At six o'clock in the morning, the Sagittaire entered by the West Passage. They fired two canon shots from the Island of Conanicut. It responded with a full broadside, a bit farther two more canon shots. It silenced them and it went and anchored at the head of the north end of this island, which forms a passage and communication with the city of Newport and the Providence River, in order to prevent the departure of any frigate by this passage. As it was announced to the General that he could capture an English ship of 44 guns and several frigates carrying 12, the General decided to have the *Fantasque*⁷ enter by the same passage, having signaled to it, at 10 o'clock it went into the passage and the two batteries of two canon having been abandoned it joined the Sagittaire without having been fired at.

[at anchor off Newport, R.I.]

At 8. o'clock in the morning, the wind being at the WSW, the *Sagittaire*¹ went into the West Passage. It delivered a brisk fire to a battery, which fired some canon shots at it, but it soon passed out of range. It anchored rather advanced into this passage. The General,² fearing that this ship might be engaged, ordered the *Fantasque*³ to weigh anchor in order to go join it; this latter ship executed the order without encountering any opposition from the enemy, who had spiked his cannons and evacuated the Island of Connecticut.⁴ At 6 o'clock the General ordered us to weigh anchor in order to reconnoiter 17 ships that the squadron's lookouts had seen in the Sound and at the same time ordered the squadron to heave short so that, if it was the English squadron, it would not be caught off guard.

At sunset, the wind to the S., rather brisk; the lighthouse on the Island of Connecticut⁵ bore to the NNW, distance 1 ½ leagues

During the day the Aimable,⁶ the Alcmène,⁷ and the *Stanley*⁸ went into the East Passage where they found the corvette the *Kingsfisher*⁹ of 16 guns and 2 half-galleys,¹⁰ and a battery of 2 cannons, 6 pounders, which fired at the frigates but its balls fell short; the vessels headed for the corvette, which, at their approach, was blown up, as well as one galley, the other was directed as a fire ship toward the Aimable. M. de St. Cosme, who commanded it, immediately sent M. Degrasse-Limermont¹¹ in the ship's boat, who blew up the fire ship at a distance from the frigate.

It is not certain what position Palmer held in Revenge but part of his duty may have been captain's clerk since a portion of the log of Revenge, also in Palmer's hand, is with this journal. The "Remarks" portion of that journal continues the narrative of the cruise of Revenge, which ended on 19 September. Palmer recopied and revised his journal; the recopied version is also at CtMyMHi. In the revised version, Palmer shortened some entries and improved the spelling and grammar. Notable differences between the versions are discussed in the notes following.

1. Connecticut Privateer sloop Revenge, which was re-commissioned on 23 July 1778 under the command of Capt. Nathan Post. It carried 12 guns, a crew of 80, and was owned by Nathaniel Shaw Jr. Middlebrook, Maritime Connecticut, 2: 207-8.

2. In the revised version, Palmer wrote "A fleete of British Ships and Other Small Sails."

3. Connecticut Privateer sloop Beaver, Capt. William Havens, commanding, carried 12 guns, a crew of 65, and was owned by Joseph Trumbull, John and Samuel Broome, and John Livingston. Middlebrook, Maritime Connecticut, 2: 54.

4. In the revised version, Palmer gives this anchorage as "Watch Hill," which is across Little Narragansett Bay from Stonington, Connecticut.

D^r Sir

I have sealed & shall immediately forward your dispatch to the Secretary of State. The Cornwall & *Centurion*¹ arrived today, and have made a considerable addition to my Means; But no inference can be formed from the accounts by the former, when Byron may be expected.

The Cornwall meeting the Advice-Boat which was sent with our Dispatches intended to go from Halifax, the Captain of the Cornwall detained the Boat to bring me intelligence of his arrival on this Coast, and our Dispatches have been returned to me. I shall forward them by the present opportunity.² I reckon upon being able to move from hence on Saturday, & expect hourly to hear that our opponents are arrived at Rhode-Island. JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

[Philadelphia] Thursday, July 30, 1778

Resolved, That the commissary general of prisoners,¹ be directed to engage in the continental service, all, or as many as he can, of the seamen sent from New York by Admiral Gambier,² who shall appear to be effective, or likely to be soon fit for service; and that he furnish such as will so engage, with the means of travelling to Boston, where they are to be delivered to the commissioners of the navy for the eastern department, to be shipped on board the continental vessels of war fitting out at that port:

That the said commissioners be authorized to make such advances to these seamen as is usual in the port of Boston, making reasonable deductions for the expences to that place; provided always, that this resolution shall not extend so as to prevent any particular State from applying in Jersey for such of the seamen as belong to such State.

The Committee to whom was referred the petition of Richard Marven and Samuel Shaw,³ brought in a report, which was taken into consideration; Whereupon,

Resolved, That it is the duty of all persons in the service of the United States, as well as all other the inhabitants thereof, to give the earliest information to Congress or other proper authority of any misconduct, frauds or misdemeanors committed by any officers or persons in the service of these states, which may come to their knowledge.

Whereas, a suit has been commenced by Esek Hopkins, Esq. against Richard Marven and Samuel Shaw, for information and complaint by them and others made to Congress against the said Esek Hopkins, while in the service of the United States:

Resolved, That the reasonable expences of defending the said suit be defrayed by the United States.

Ordered, That the secretary of Congress furnish the petitioners with attested copies to the appointment of Esek Hopkins, Esq. to any command in the continental navy, and his dismissal from the same, and also to the proceedings of Congress upon the complaint of the petitioners against the said Esek Hopkins, preferred to Congress through the Marine Committee, as mentioned in their petition.⁴

1. John Goodrich, a former plantation owner in Isle of Wight County, Virginia, had four sons: John Jr., William, Bartlett, and Bridger. Formerly patriots, the Goodriches had been converted to loyalism by Lord Dunmore. Imprisoned by Virginia authorities in 1775, they escaped individually, made their way to New York, and then led a small fleet of loyalist privateers that preyed along the coast from New Jersey to the Carolinas for the remainder of the war. Selby, The Revolution in Virginia, p. 69.

2. In September, First Commissioner of the Virginia Navy Board Thomas Whiting announced that the Virginia Navy galleys Tartar and Dragon and the brigantine Northampton would immediately put to sea “cruising backwards and forwards within fifty Leagues of the Land and using their utmost diligence to capture the enemy’s cruisers particularly those commanded by the Goodriches.” Stewart, History of Virginia’s Navy, p. 54. On 16 Nov. 1778, the Continental Marine Committee wrote to the Continental Navy Board of the Eastern Department that they considered it “an Object of importance to destroy the infamous Goodrich” and instructed the board to order a “Sufficient force to range” the American coast “to remove the nuisance.” DNA, PCC, Marine Committee Letter Book, p. 202 (M332, roll6). Furthermore, on 15 Jan. 1779, the Continental Congress resolved to protect the trade of Chesapeake Bay, adding that they “flatter themselves a speedy end will be put to the depredations of Godridge.” JCC 13: 69. Despite all of this effort to stop them, the Goodriches continued their successful privateering ventures until the end of the war when they retired to England and Bermuda. 1. South Carolina brigantine Comet, Capt. James Pyne, commanding, was captured by H.M. frigate Daphne on 22 Dec. 1777. See Journal of H.M.S. Daphne, 22 Dec. 1777, NDAR 10: 786.

2. South Carolina brigantine Defence was captured by H.M. frigate Roebuck on 2 Apr. 1777. It appears that the commander of Defence, Capt. Thomas Pickering, had already been exchanged or paroled, although he complained of “harsh treatment” while a prisoner. See Elphinstone to Lowndes, 24 August 1778, Keith Papers, 1: 129.

3. Lowndes did as the Board suggested and wrote Gov. Patrick Tonyn of East Florida proposing to exchange East Florida privateer captains Peter Bachop and George Osborne for James Pyne and his officers. The offer was rejected, however. The British naval commander at East Florida, Capt. George Keith Elphinstone, wrote Lowndes on 24 August: “With respect to Bechop and Osbourne now in confinement, I can assure you they have no connection with the King’s Service, nor are they to be looked on in any other light than Masters of Vessels bearing letters of marque, consequently they may be exchanged for men of like rank and no other.” Ibid. Even before Elphinstone’s letter could have arrived, the Navy Board renewed its appeal for the exchange of Capt. James Pyne in a letter to Lowndes of 27 August, South Carolina Commissioners, p. 176.

BRIGADIER GENERAL EZEKIEL CORNELL TO MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN

Fall River [Mass.] July 31st. 1778—

Dear Gen^l,

I have in the first place to Acknowledge my fault in not writing before, but when I Acquaint you it was Occasioned thro' the Multitude of business I flatter myself you will pass it by—

I am now to Acquaint you that I had the pleasure yesterday to see the British Sloop of War King fisher and the two Galleys¹ all in flames at One and the same Instant. it was a Glorious Sight, more Especially to See the Joy that appeared in every Countenance on the Occasion, even the Ladys where heard to say it was the pleasantest Sight they ever saw—the Affair was truly this—yesterday forenoon I rec^d. a letter from the Officer Commanding On Board the French Frigates² in Seconnett passage,³ that he was determind to destroy the British Vessells above yesterday Afternoon and desired that I would give him Assistance by Field pieces On the Shore, in Order to keep the Galleys out of Shoal Water, on this side the River, which I Accordingly did and just as we got abreast of them when they were drawn up in line of Battle with all their Canvas Spread, they set themselves On fire and were all in flames in an Instant—the French frigates⁴ then Coming up the River at the distance of two leagues, they fought a very Considerable battle after they were On fire by firing their Cannon altho it was not very regular yet they Seem determined to do Execution as they fired plenty of Grape Shot—I am, Sir [&c.]

CAPTAIN JOHN BRISBANE, R.N., TO VICE ADMIRAL VISCOUNT HOWE

Flora Newport Rhode Island

July the 29th: 1778

My Lord,

I did myself the Honor of writing to you the 27th. Instant, in Answer to your Lordships of the 19th. to which I beg leave to refer you,¹ and which was to have been forwarded to your Lordship by the Falcon, who sailed the 28th. Instant, but the Wind blowing strong Southerly, she returned in the Afternoon.² The next Morning about 10 O'Clock, on the breaking up of a Fog, a French Fleet appeared in sight, consisting of 12 Sail of the Line and 4 Frigates, pretty near the S E Point of the Island, they anchored just without Brentons Ledge, about 2 O'Clock in the Afternoon: In the Evening two Frigates and an Armed Brig³ went up the Seconnet⁴ and Anchored in the Station appointed to the Kingsfisher,⁵ who with the Galleys⁶ retreated above Fogland Battery.⁷

The next Morning, the 30th. Instant, Two Line of Battle Ships⁸ ran up the Naraganset Passage, off the North End of Connanicut,⁹ where they remain at Anchor: The rest still at Anchor without.

The General¹⁰ has thought proper to withdraw all the Troops from Connanicut, destroyed the Battery and taken off the Stock: The Battery on the Dumplins¹¹ is likewise destroyed.

I have got the *Flora*¹² into the Inner Harbour and as Cannon are much wanted for the Batterys, and Exterior Defence of the Island, I shall land them with the Powder, Ammunition &c. part of the Provisions are already got out, and I shall proceed in getting out the remainder, with such other stores as can be saved, and have every thing prepared to set Fire to the Ship, when all hopes of saving her becomes impracticable.

The *Juno*¹³ is hauled close into Coddington's Cove, has landed her guns (for Batteries) Provisions and some other Stores.

The Orpheus and *Cerberus*¹⁴ are hauled behind Dyers Island, and have landed their Guns, Ammunition, Provisions and this Morning Captain Smith¹⁵ informed me he had a Battery for 12 Guns nearly compleat.

The Falcon is in the Inner Harbour, as I find she cannot now perform the Service I intended for her (which was pushing thro') I have given Captain Harwood directions to land his Guns, Ammunition, Provisions &c.

The Kingsfisher landed two of her Guns, some Ammunition, and all her Provisions; But on the two French Frigates of 36 Guns each, getting under Weigh, and standing towards her, Captain Christian thought proper to set the Kingsfisher on fire, as did the Galleys, about 2 O'Clock on the 30th. Instant.

Having neither seen or heard anything of the Sphynx,¹⁶ since her Sailing to cruise between this Port and Block Island, as mentioned in my Letter of the 27. Instant, I am in hopes she has discovered the French Fleet, and proceeded to join your Lordship.

July the 30th: 1778.

In the Morning about 6 O'Clock, a French Ship of two Decks,¹⁷ ran up the Naraganset Passage, the Batterys on Fox Hill fired at her, and Hulled her (as I am informed) three times, she returned the Fire proceeded on, and anchored off the North end of Connanicut; In the Evening another Ship of two Decks¹⁸ ran up.

July 31st 1778.

At Day break, the two Ships of the Line in the Narraganset Passage where discovered turning down, And about 9. O'Clock Anchored, the Ebb Tide being done. The Fleet without, were under Weigh all Night, but Anchored again about 11 O'Clock, in their former Situation. The Frigates in the Seconnet Passage still remain in the same Situation.

On the determination of General Sir Robert Pigott, to defend the South part of the Island in case of an Attack, and draw his force into as small a Body as possible; in which case, the Guns, Provisions &c. landed, from the advanced Ships, must necessarily have fallen into the Enemy's Hands. I have directed (agreeable to his desire) the Captains Smith, Dalrymple, Hudson and Symons¹⁹ to use the utmost Dispatch in getting on board their Guns, Provisions &c. and to join me in the Inner Harbour, without a Moment's Loss of time: I have the pleasure to acquaint your Lordship they are as forward as time will permit, And if the Wind is Northerly, I am in great hopes will join me to Morrow. I have prepared some small Vessels with Combustibles, to act against the Enemy, if their should be the least probability of their succeeding.

As I think it of the utmost importance your Lordship should be acquainted with our Situation, I have sent this by a good rowing Boat, dispatched by Major General Sir Robert Pigot, and by a person in whom he reposes an entire confidence.

I shall give your Lordship every intelligence in my power from time to time, relative to the Enemy's Ships, and situation of this Place. I have the Honor to be with great Respect My Lord, [&c.]

DIARY OF CAPTAIN FREDERICK MACKENZIE, BRITISH ARMY

[Newport] R. ISLAND

31st July. All quiet during the night. Hazy at day break, with the Wind at S. The French fleet seen off the harbour, and the whole under way steering towards Point Judith: at 6 they tacked and stood to the Eastward. We at first imagined their intention was to attempt to come in; but it soon appeared they were endeavoring to get further off shore, as there is a prospect of bad weather. They anchored at 10 o'Clock, something farther to the Southward than before.

The two ships¹ off the N. point of Connonicut² got under way when the rest of their fleet did, and endeavored to work down the Narragansett passage;³ but the wind & tide being against them they were obliged to anchor in a line with the N. point of the Island. At 11 they began to warp down, but about 2 o'Clock, finding that little could be done that way, they desisted, not having got more than a mile down.

The Frigates⁴ in the Seconnet⁵ made no movement. We are inclined to believe, by this attempt of the two ships to go down again without having attempted anything, that The French Admiral⁶ has received some information of the approach of the Fleet under Lord Howe, or that under Admiral Byron,⁷ and that he is endeavoring to collect his force.

The fog came in very thick at 8 o'Clock, so that little could be discovered at Sea. At 1 o'Clock, we could just discern the position of the Enemy's fleet. It was so thick in the afternoon, that no part of the surrounding shore could be seen.

Some rain after 6 in the Evening. Wind S.E.

No appearance of any movements among the Rebels.

The Crew of a Rebel Privateer landed on Connonicut yesterday, where they plundered and abused the Inhabitants.

Orders were given last night for the baggage of all the Regiments encamped without the Redoubts, to be sent into town immediately.

It has been determined this Morning by the Generals, to withdraw the Troops from the North part of the Island, bring off all the Cannon and Stores, burn all the Barracks, and drive in all the Cattle and horses, as soon as it becomes evident that the French Fleet are determined to force an entrance into the harbour. Every thing is to be withdrawn within the New Redoubts, and our defence on the land side is to be confined to that height and position from Tomini hill on the left, round by Green-End and Easton's beach on the right. It is taken for granted, that the Rebels will attempt making a descent under cover of The French ships; If that is the case, it will most probably be attempted somewhere on the E. side;—and as The Mill-Creek opposite Fogland⁸ is the most likely place for assembling boats for a descent on any part S. of Fogland; and Wanton's Cove⁹ near Howlands ferry for the like purpose N. of Fogland; it should if possible be ascertained whether they have any number of boats, or any considerable bodies of troops collected at or near those places;—for if they have not, it is probable the Object of the French fleet is nothing more than to intercept our Victuallers from England, which since the appearance of the Enemy off Sandy hook, have probably received orders to proceed to this port. Having effected that object, they may perhaps proceed to Boston.

Sir

Little Compton 31 July 1778.

The fatigue of the Horse added to the rain impeded me from having the honor of reporting to you myself on my mission. In short, yesterday I was on board the prize Flying Fish eight hours.¹ I found there a dozen pillagers who had caused considerable havoc. I have drawn up an official report of everything and tomorrow morning as early as possible I will bring it to you. I found the Continental agent² who is taking care of the merchandise of the lost boat and who wants to send all of it to Bedford³ where there are two others of your prizes, one of 14 guns. He wanted to send the Flying Fish there, but that has changed. The captain told me it has been decided to send it into the river where you are.⁴ He has almost no victuals. There are the men of the lost boat with the captain at the point of Coxet⁵ whence I come and they are very embarrassed living at the inn. In addition the English or better to say the English frigate has destroyed two of your prizes and the men, according to what I have been told, are wandering and do not know where to go. I have not been able to transport myself there. Furthermore, I have asked the Continental agent to give me his letter for Monseigneur Le Comte d'Estaing. He has not wanted to: I understood his reasons: he fears losing a prize that should return much. Everyone has warned me on that point. I communicated to him the havoc made by the Americans in the ship the Flying Fish. He responded to me gallantly, That is a small loss for the king of France—and I believe that you would do well to let it pass in silence.—I am a Frenchman attached to my king, to my country, entrusted with a certain commission. I want to acquit myself with honor. I do nothing for self interest, too happy to find myself in a circumstance so favorable! And in order to remove any suspicion of my conduct, if is grandeur, Monseigneur the vice admiral⁶ deigns to accept my good will I will dare to request of him an officer of his choice to accompany me everywhere. The letter of the agent should reach his grandeur perhaps before tonight; I have had the honor of writing him some lines but pressed by these people who have an interest to have me write a few words, I have not been able to enter into this detail. If you judge it proper, Monsieur, to pass my letter to my lord this evening, tomorrow when I shall have the honor of coming aboard your ship you will have some orders ready for those people which I would be able to send to them by way of my servant.

I have the honor of presenting my respects to M. de Boneval⁷ And to all your gentlemen—

Nothing equals that with which I will do myself always a glory to be, Monsieur, [&c.]

The official report is so wet that I cannot send it to you this evening. I need to make a copy of it.

My general

I had the honor of reporting to you yesterday evening by an American boat whose captain told me he had been dispatched by you to learn from me news of the burning and entire destruction of the three English ships that were anchored in the river.¹ I hope, my general, that my letter reached you. We have retrieved from the corvette seven six-pounder cannons, one of small caliber, and three swivel guns and a rather large quantity of iron; I have had a note made of it, although I hope, my general, that you will authorize me to leave this small gratification to the crew of the two frigates who have taken such pains. I reckon that tomorrow we shall be able to declare everything that could be from it. The *Alcmène*² has taken on a ship's boat of water, I shall take on as much tomorrow morning, we can take on only about forty barrels a day, which made me decide to take advantage of an offer made me by General Cornell³ to ask him to procure some for us, not knowing at the moment whether you will judge it appropriate to recall me I asked him at the same time for some wood, the one and the other frigate have the greatest need of it. I presume that M. de Borda⁴ will take on himself to have the expenses that we shall incur in the matter.

General Cornell answered me this morning, his letter was sent to me by Colonel Jossam⁵ and it is he who is charged with procuring for us all our necessities. Everyone appears very intent to be useful to us and to see us very easy that the frigates are not disabled. And you are well assured, my general, that M. de Bonneval and I neglect nothing to maintain this good will.

I have the honor of alerting you that Colonel Jossam has announce to me the visit of General Cornell tomorrow. I beg you, my general, some men on the island, they returned at midnight and gave me for news that the small island of Conanicut should be taken by the French or by them; that all the ships that were in Newport had been assembled under the city, and had unloaded almost all their effects; but they are not agreed on the quantity of the ships of war, some saying that there is a ship of 50 guns and four frigates and the others carrying the number of frigates to seven and even to ten. I have the honor to be [&c.]

LIEUTENANT DE VAISSEAU CHEVALIER DE SAINT-COSME-SAINTE-EULALIE TO MAJOR GENERAL
JOHN SULLIVAN

j'ai eu lhonneur de vous ecrire dans une langue que je connes bien peu, vous vous en serez appercu a coup seure;¹ j'aprends monsieur que le francais vous est aussi familier que langlais: je vous demande la permission den revenir au francais, jen serai plus intelligible vous aures été informé monsieur de la brulure des trois batiments anglais² qui etoient dans la riviere,³ les anglais ont pris ce parti tout vite et nont pas meme attendu que je fasse a portée de leur tirer du canon.

j'ai été informé⁴ monsieur a mon arrivée ici qu'une prise faite par l'escadre française se soit perdue a la pointe de Cox,⁵ et qu'il y avoit une autre prise mouillée tout auprès, j'ai envoyé sur les lieux pour chercher a sauver la cargaison du bâtiment perdu et mettre le second en état de venir me joindre ici. on vient de me rendre compte que ce dernier appelé Le fling fisch avoit été en endommagé par quelques habitans des environs, et que l'agent du continent⁶ qui prend soin de la cargaison du bateau perdu avoit le projet de la faire passer a Bedford⁷ ou il a relâché deux autres prises. comme l'équipage de ce bâtiment ne point de moi en pour se rembarquer j'ose vous prier monsieur de donner vos ordres pour qu'il leur soit fourni des vivres et accordé libre passage pour se rendre a bord de ma frégate, je vous fais la même prière pour l'équipage de deux autres prises qu'on assure avoir été brûlées dans ces parages par une frégate anglaise.⁸

M^r le comte d'Estaing me prescrit de m'adresser a vous, monsieur pour lui faire passer les comptes que j'avois a lui rendre je prends la liberté de vous prier de lui faire parvenir le plutôt possible le paquet que je joins a ma lettre. j'ai profité de l'honnêteté et des offres de service du général Cornell⁹ pour lui demander de l'eau et du bois dont les deux frégates ont grand besoin et très pressant.¹⁰

j'ai l'honneur de vous assurer de nouveau de mon zèle de mon empressement a vous être utile dans vos opérations; et du sincère respect avec lequel j'ai l'honneur d'être Monsieur [&c.]

Sir

I have written to you in a language that I know rather little,¹ you will have certainly perceived this; I learn, Sir, that French is as familiar to you as English; I therefore ask your permission to return to it as I shall be much more intelligible in that tongue. You will have been informed of the burning of three English ships² which were in the river,³ the English undertook this suddenly and unexpectedly and without even waiting for me to come within range of their guns.

I have been informed,⁴ Sir, on my arrival here that a prize taken by the French squadron was lost at Point de Cox;⁵ and that there was another prize anchored quite near. I have sent therefore to try to save the cargo of the lost ship and to put the second in a condition to join me here. I have just been told that the latter, called the Flying Fish, had been damaged by some of the inhabitants in the vicinity, and that the agent of the Continent,⁶ who is taking care of the cargo of the lost ship, had intended to transfer the cargo to Bedford,⁷ where he has brought two other prizes. As the crew of this ship has no means to reembark, I take the liberty of begging you, Sir, to give orders that they may be furnished with food and accorded free passage to come on board my frigate. I make the same request for the crews of the two other prizes that I am assured have been burned in this vicinity by an English frigate.⁸

The Count d'Estaing instructed me to write you, Sir, to send him the accounts that I have to render to him. I take the liberty of begging you to have forwarded as soon as possible the packet that I enclose in my letter. I have taken advantage of the courtesy of General Cornell⁹ to ask him for water and wood, of which the two frigates stand in immediate and pressing need.¹⁰

I have the honor to assure you again of my zeal and my eagerness to be useful to you in your operations; and of the sincere respect with which I have the honor to be, Sir [&c.] On board the frigate Aimable in the Sakonnet River [R.I.] the 31 July 1778.

VICE-AMIRAL COMTE D'ESTAING TO MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN

Monsieur

En mer 31 Juillet 1778

J'ai l'honneur de Vous Remercier des avis qui me sont parvenus, et de Celui que Vous avés la Bonté de me donner. J'ai Reconnu a cette attention Vos lumieres, ainsi que la prudente, et L'indissoluble amitié qui unit nos deux nations. le desavantage de Rester mouille et d'être prevenu lorsqu'il faut Combattre, m'a decidé hier au Soir a appareiller: deux Exprés ont été detachés, l'un par mer et l'autre par terre pour faire Rejoindre les deux Vaisseaux¹ du canal de L'ouest:² Je les ai Vu sous Voiles Ce matin, et s'il y avait eû une affaire Je crois que quelques instans de retard les auraient mis dans le Cas heureux d'y prendre part. J'ai depuis Envoyé ordre à ces Vaisseaux de mouiller où on les trouverait, et nous allons a cause Du Brouillard reprendre a peu prés notre premiere position. nous y Serous seulement un peu plus En ordre de Bataille. les fregates³ du canal de L'est,⁴ ont dû suivant ceque Je leur ai prescrit, vous Rendre Le même Compte qu'a moy.⁵

la fregatte Le *King fisher*⁶ de dix huit Canons de neuf, et deux de trois, ainsi que La Galere le Spit fire, ayant deux Canons de dix huit deux de douze, et six de six accompagnée de la Galere le Lamb,⁷ portant deux Canons de dix huit, deux de neuf, et deux de six, le Sont Brulées sous une Batterie Anglaise⁸ à L'approche de nos fregattes, qui etaient d'après ceque J'ai Eu L'honneur de Vous dire hier, infiniment plus faibles par la difference Énorme du calibre des Canons. les fregattes du Roy n'ont essayé que quelques Coups de Canon, sans perdre un seul homme. le Brulot⁹ qu'il à fallu acrocher pour le detourner, et qui a operé son Explosion, lorsqu'il etait ainsi Remorqué, à fait seulement courir en très grand Danger à M^r. le C^{te} De Grasse¹⁰ Jeune officier de distinction: ce qui n'est pas moins extraordinaire, c'est que plusieurs Matelots De L' aimable commandés par M^e de Dorset,¹¹ étaient à Bord Du King-fisher pour tacher d'en Eteindre Le feu, lorsque La poudre a fait sauter. Ce bâtiment personne n'a Eû aucun mal. chès les Romains, et dans Le téms ou l'on croyait aux presages, ces deux singularités vous auraient promis ce que Vous obtiendrès par Vos talents, par le courage des americains, et par Votre Zelé, la prise de Rhod-Island. Voila le Chenal débarassé d'ennemis aquatiques, votre Excellence Voudra Bien me mander si cela ne changera Rien à la disposition projetée du Vaisseau de cinquante Canons.

Ce petit succès Rendrait encore plus facile l'excellent Conseil que Vous me donnés de fermer la passe milieu avec les fregattes Du chenal de L'est. Je dois cependant, Monsieur, Vous observer que les fregattes Anglaises de L'interieur¹² sont plus fortes que L'aimable, et que l'alcmene, mais Je pourrais Remplacer cette derniere par l'engageante, qui a Du Canon de douze.¹³ L'exprés Chargé D'une lettre de Votre Excellence pour M^e Le Colonel Laurence,¹⁴ me dit que les Batimens Vués sont suposés etre chargés deporter des secours; cela ne change Rien à mes dispositions. Le Colonel Laurence est à terre.

Sir

At Sea, July 31, 1778

I have the honor to thank you for the information which has arrived, and for that which you have already had the kindness to give me. I recognize in this matter your wisdom, as well as the prudent and indissoluble friendship which unites our two nations. The disadvantage of remaining at anchor, and of being informed when it was necessary to fight, decided me yesterday evening to set sail: two messengers have been sent, one by sea and the other by land, to rejoin the two ships of the line¹ in the West Channel.² I saw them under sail this morning, and if there had been an engagement I think that, with a few minutes delay, they could have taken part in it. I have since ordered these ships of the line to anchor where they could be summoned, and we are going, on account of the fog, to take up station again fairly near our first position. There we shall be just a little more in order of battle. The frigates³ in the East Channel⁴ must have, according to my orders, rendered to you the same account as they did to me.⁵

The frigate Kingsfisher,⁶ having 18 nine-pounders, and 2 three-pounders, as well as the galley Spitfire, carrying two eighteens, two twelves, and six sixes, with the galley Lamb,⁷ carrying two eighteens, two nines, and two sixes, were burned under an English battery⁸ at the approach of my frigates, which were, as I had the honor of telling you yesterday, infinitely weaker, owing to the enormous difference in the caliber of the guns. The king's frigates sustained only a few shots without losing a single man. The fireship,⁹ which had to be grappled to be warded off, and which had undergone an explosion while it was being towed, brought into very great danger M. the Comte de Grasse,¹⁰ a distinguished young officer; what is not less extraordinary is that several sailors from the Aimable, commanded by M. de Dorset,¹¹ were on board the Kingsfisher trying to extinguish the fire, when the powder exploded. No one was hurt on this Ship. Among the Romans, and in the times when one believed in omens, these two remarkable events would have promised you what you will obtain by your talents, by the courage of the Americans, and by your zeal, the capture of Rhode Island. Now that the passage is freed of the enemy, your Excellency will be so kind as to instruct me if this will make any change in the projected disposition of the ship of the line of 50 guns.

This little success would make still easier the excellent advice which you give me to close the Middle Passage with the frigates from the East Channel. I must, however, Sir, call to your attention the fact that the English frigates inside the harbor¹² are much stronger than the Aimable, and the Alcmène, but I could replace the latter by the Engageante which has twelve-pounders.¹³

The messenger entrusted with a letter from your Excellency for Colonel Laurens,¹⁴ tells me that the ships seen are supposed to be instructed to bring relief; this does not change my preparations at all. Colonel Laurens is on shore.

I take the liberty of begging you to recall in the midst of the multitude of your affairs the notes that you were so kind as to take yesterday of our needs; the long time that we have spent at sea begins to increase the cases of scurvy, and fresh provisions, above all, vegetables, is of the first necessity against this terrible sickness.

Colonel Laurens kindly assumed the responsibility of speaking to you of the delivery of our prisoners. Congress has consented to it. At the earliest possible moment I will send our captured to your headquarters. I have the honor to be, Sir, [&c.]

[July 1778, Languedoc, off Newport, R.I.]

From Thursday 30 to Friday 31

At 5 o'clock in the evening General Sullivan who is to command the American troops came on board and had a conference of an hour with the General. We gave him 15 guns in leaving the ship.¹ At sunset 14 to 15 sail were seen above the point of [blank]. Several persons thought that it was trees. Messrs. de Broves and Barasse sent to alert the General that they were sails.² In consequence for greater security

The General ordered a signal made to the entire squadron to prepare to sail, in the fear of surprise in the night, and even to the prize.³ At nine o'clock in the evening signaled to set sail. At 11 o'clock the entire squadron was under sail, the winds at the SW, steered close to the wind the rest of the night. At 4 o'clock in the morning, veered about, and steered close-hauled on the starboard tack. At daybreak, having seen nothing, made our way to return to our anchorage, not being able to favor the entrance, expecting that the American troops had not assembled and the field artillery coming from Boston by land, which very much displeased the General, unable to begin operations for eight days, which gave time to the enemy to fortify, and to fortify the pass. At 7 o'clock in the morning, being only a league from the anchorage, the General ordered [me] to go with a boat to survey the western part of the said pass in which were the Fantasque and the *Sagittaire*⁴ to go ashore in order to find some place it would be possible to water a little. We found three different locations in which some small quantities could be procured for each ship by a watering boat in 24 hours. At ten o'clock the squadron anchored in the road. We learned that M. Le Marquis de Lafayette had just left M. Washington with a division of 2,400 men and that he could not arrive before six days.⁵

My Dear Sir Cha^s:

The Packet not being yet sailed gives me the opportunity of making this addition to my Letter of the 27th:² to inform you that our Affairs begin to wear a better Aspect, the Cornwall one of Byrons Squadron having joined us Yesterday,³ who parted from that Fleet in a Gale of Wind the 4th Instant off of the Western Islands.⁴ We may therefore hourly expect them, but if they should not happen to join us before we gain information of the french Squadron, and that they should be gone to Rhode Island as from the Motions of the Rebel Army we have reason to suppose, there is little doubt I believe but that his Lordship will be after them with the force he has collected.⁵ His Escape (but by a Week) from being shut up in the Delaware, was as fortunate, as the late sailing of Byron has been otherwise. three sail are now in sight, and if they should prove a part of his Squadron I hope we may yet turn up trumps. I am sure his Lordship well deserves success.

Adieu. You may depend upon hearing from me as I have opportunity, being ever

That in their opinion it is not expedient at this Time to raise Salaries when measures are about to be taken by Congress for the appreciation of the Currency, but in consideration of the great and constant business in which the above Petitioner is engaged and the expensive living for the post and at the present Time the Committee think a compensation of 500 Dollars for his extra services & expences since his appointment ~~in addition to his salary~~ should be allowed him.¹ It is also the opinion of the Committee that as the Commissioners of the Navy Board of the eastern Department are necessarily obliged for the right discharge of their Duty frequently to visit the different parts of their extensive district—that they be allowed 365 Dollars each for their travelling expences the year past.

MINUTES OF THE PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

[Extract]

The Council met

Philadelphia, Friday, July 31, 1778

Present. hon^{ble}. George Bryan, Esq^r Vice President. Jos. Hart, Esq^r Mackay, Esq^r James Edgar, Esq^r James Read, Esq^r & Jac. Arndt, Esq^r

. . . The Navy board informed the Council, that the Armed Brig is nearly ready for Service & recommended Capt. Thos. Houston, to be the Captain of said Brig. The appointment of a Captain to the Armed Brig being put to Vote, a majority of Six against one, was appointing Capt. Richard Eyre, & thereupon Ordered, That Capt. Richard Eyre be appointed Commander of the Armed Brig, Convention, belonging to this State & Commissioned accordingly.¹

Council having received information, that a Ship called the Albion, which was sunk in the River Delaware & seized by the Navy board of this State, on or about the 27th, day of June.² That a Libel had been filed, in the Court of Admiralty by Dav^d Beverage of this City Merchant, in behalf of himself & others, claiming the property of said Ship & her Cargo, & had given security in the said Court for the value thereof & received the same into his possession.³ The Council considering the importance of the trial, and the great weight of business, which now falls on the Attorney General,⁴ which renders assistance herein absolutely necessary. Ordered, That Jacob Rush, Esq^r be employed to assist the Attorney General, in the trial before the Court of Admiralty respecting the Ship Albion, & that the Secretary be directed to pay him the Sum of One hundred Dollars as a Fee for his Services therein.⁵ And an Order was drawn on the Treasurer in favor of the Secretary for the Sum of One hundred Dollars, to be paid by him as the Fee abovementioned.

On application Ordered, That the Navy board furnish, Mr. James Carson & Jo^s M^cCulloch,⁶ with three hundred weight of Gunpowder & half a Ton of round & grape Shop, to be repaid by them as soon as possible. . . .

1. When Convention sailed in late August, Capt. Thomas Houston commanded it.

2. Ship Albion, British victualler, 200 tons burthen. Pennsylvania Packet or the General Advertiser, 15 Sept. 1778. Reportedly, it had struck a cheval-de-frise in the Delaware River and sank. Timothy Matlack to Jonathan D. Sergeant, 9 July 1778, Pennsylvania Archives, 1st ser. 6: 630.

3. Beverage said he had purchased Albion from the British. Ibid.

4. Jonathan D. Sergeant.

5. The Court of Admiralty hearing concerning Albion was set for 10 October 1778. Pennsylvania Packet or the General Advertiser, 15 Sept. 1778.

6. The applicant appears to be Joseph Carson, a Philadelphia merchant. He and Joseph McCulloch posted bond for a letter of marque for the privateer sloop Susannah on 31 July 1778. DNA, PCC, item 195, vol. 15, p. 7 (M247, roll 204).

MOSES YOUNG TO THE PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Gentlemen

31st July [1778, Philadelphia, Pa.]

The Honorable The President of Congress having received an application from Tim^o Matlack Esquire, under the direction of your Honors, for “some blank Commissions for private Ships of War” has order’d me to transmit six, with proper instructions and Bonds, which your Honors will find under cover with this.¹

The President has directed me to intimate to your Honors that it is necessary to return Bonds duly executed for the Commissions formerly lodged with the State of Pennsylvania, or for so many of them as have been actually issued, and that the remainder should be accounted for in due time. I have the Honor to be [&c.]

Notes Made on board the Languedoc

August—1778.

- Saturday 1st. The general¹ goes ashore to reconnoiter Newport and its fortifications.
- Monday 3. A sloop comes in among the squadron. It is laden with tortoises, pineapples, and oranges and comes from New Providence.² 8 English ships, of which 4 are frigates, the rest corvettes and sloops are burned on the shore, where the Fantasque and *Sagitaire*³ forced them.
- Saturday 8. Forced the entrance to Newport at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Fire well-sustained from the squadron, the same from the batteries of Brenton, from the south, from the base of the island the town and that of the island. We found 9 ships sunk in the port. We anchored at 4:30 o'clock north of the town. The English sank one of their ships,⁴ supposed of 40 or 50 guns, and cut the masts of a frigate of 28 guns,⁵ which they then sank.
- Sunday 9. We disembarked on Cononicut the troops and the sailors intended for the landing. I⁶ was instructed to make a tour of the island from the point and to assemble on solid land 51 horses, with saddles and bridles, in order to bring them to the place where the troops will be assembled. The English fleet⁷ appears and anchors outside, a league farther out than where we had anchored. We re-embarked what we had disembarked in the morning.
- Monday 10. The wind comes from NNE at 8 o'clock in the morning; we cut our cables; we go out; fire from the batteries; fire from the squadron; a ball crashes aboard the Zélé.⁸ The enemy also cut their cables, set sail in disorder, and take chase. We find dinghies in the sea, paneling, casks, and living cattle:—They have 36 sails.

- Tuesday 11. Separated from the enemy at 6 o'clock in the evening by a sudden great gale. Lie to through the night.
- Wednesday 12. The Lanquedoc dismasted of all its masts in less than half an hour at 3 o'clock in the morning. At two o'clock in the afternoon our tiller broke.
- Thursday 13. Our helm broke at the head; the breaking tore out the nails. Attacked around 3 o'clock in the afternoon by a ship of 50 guns:⁹ It withdrew at 5:30 o'clock. It is joined by another.¹⁰ We dropped anchor in the evening in 35 fathoms.
- Friday 14. Nine sails appeared at sunrise at 3 leagues to the windward; the *Hector*¹¹ approached making recognition signals—some cries of Long live the King.—The Tonnant, the *Protecteur*¹² and the Fantasque in chase of the enemy.—The *Guerrier*¹³ and the Sagittaire join, this last having in tow the Marseillois,¹⁴ which was dismasted of its bowsprit, of its foremast, of its maintopmast and of those of its mizzen-topmast. The Cesar and the *Vaillant*¹⁵ remained separated. The general passed to the Hector and hoisted his flag in it.
- Saturday 15. The Hector chases and captures the Senegal.¹⁶ Our helm becomes very detrimental. We see the Vaillant with the bomb galliot the Thunder,¹⁷ which it had seized.

JOHN LANGDON TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

Dear Sir

Portsmouth [N.H.] August 1st 1778

Your favor of the 13th Ult^o have just received, and am much obliged by your kind Intelligence. The Acc^o of Money came to hand in M^r Wentworth's Letter,¹ which exactly corresponds with my Books-No doubt the removal of Congress to Philadelphia must have retarded the Business very much-The conduct of the British has been truly Systematical the whole Voyage thro'; I shall not pretend to describe their dirty Behaviour, only say, it is poor Spite. . . .

I am amazed that I have no Orders respecting the French Ship the Duchesse of Grammont, as she lays here at great Expence to some body;² it's three Weeks since I Rec^d a Letter from the Board of War, in which they mention the Commercial Committee having received my Letter of the 5th of June respecting the Cargo and no doubt all the Letters that came by that Ship were received at the same time-perhaps Orders have been sent and the Letter have miscarried; in such important Matters, duplicates should come, to prevent Miscarriage, pray think of this Immediately—

The Schooner Amity Packet Capⁿ Palmer is taken and carried into New York.³ I've waited on the Navy Board at Boston with the Marine Committee's Acco^t which contains every thing except the 74 Gun Ship,⁴ and it seems satisfactory-shall close the whole as soon as I get out the Navy Board Acco^t as the Balance of the Marine Committee's Acco^t will be carried to that. I intend to furnish you with the Cost of the Raleigh and Ranger soon, and hope the other Continental Ships will turn out as good, as well equipt, and as Cheap: which I doubt; to say nothing of the Places where some are built, the Risque of getting out of such places to the Continent is worth 20 P Cent. these things must be overhauled, and put on a better footing, many Thousands are lost by their continuing in the present Situation—If I could get Time would wait on the Marine Committee at Philadelphia to talk over some of these matters and State the Facts; and then on a proper Survey of the Ports by Persons appointed by Congress for that purpose, they will know the best places for Navy Yards—

We are going to send two Vessels to Maryland or Virginia for Flour, Corn &c part of which I shall want for the use of the Continent, therefore I hope no Embargo will hinder them as we can't do without. I shall take Liberty to draw on the Commercial Committee for the purpose, as I am in advance for them. I shall inform you further of this Matter—

I most heartily Congratulate you and my good Friend your Colleague on the prospect of our public Affairs Pray don't forget to write me (one of you) every Week, and enclose a Paper at my Expence. I have been much out of Town otherwise should have wrote oftener. Nothing material to inform you of, only preparing for Rhode Island Expedition⁵ I am [&c.]

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN TO HENRY LAURENS, PRESIDENT OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Dear Sir,

Head Quarters Aug^t 1st. Providence— 1778.

I have the honor to transmit to Congress, the particulars of my Proceedings, since I reciev'd General Washingtons Orders, to co-operate with the Count Destaign against the Enemy, on Rhode Island.—¹ At that time my Magazines were empty, but few Troops, and scarcely any Boats to effect an embarkation, I immediately wrote to the several New England States, calling upon them in the most pressing Terms, to supply me with Men and Provisions, and I have the pleasure to assure you, that their exertions exceed my expectation;² The Magazines will be sufficiently large, to supply the number of Troops I shall have, and with the standing Forces in this department, the several Quotas of Militia, and the Reinforcement from the Grand Army, I make no doubt, I shall have a Force sufficient, with the assistance of the French Fleet & Army, to ensure me Success. I have collected a great number of Boats, and the Carpenters are indefatigable in building more, so that I think, I may venture to assure you, that I shall have a Number sufficient to transport my whole Army at the same time. On the 29th. Ultimo, the Count's Fleet arrivd, and anchor'd off the light House in Naraganset Bay,³ the next morning, two Ships, one of Sixty four Guns, and the other of fifty,⁴ were sent up the western Passage, between the Island of Connecticut and the Main, with a view, to capture two Frigates, that lay in that Channel, between Prudence, and Conanicut, but they on approach of the Ships, turn'd the point of the Island and stood into the Harbour of Newport. Upon this Island the Enemy had two Regiments of Anspach, and Colonel Fannings Corps of New-York Volunteers encampd.⁵

A small Battery fired upon the fifty Gun Ship as she pass'd, but She return'd it with a Broad-side, which effectually silenced the Battery and before the Sixty four pass'd, they blew up their Magazine, and the three Regiments decamp'd and cross'd over to Rhode-Island.

Two Regiments Frigates⁶ were likewise sent Round to Seconnet Point, to block up the eastern Channel in this River, the Enemy had two Gallies, and the King Fisher Sloop of War, which upon approach of the Frigates, were set on fire, and blown up.—⁷ The Destruction of the Sloop, and the Gallies, is a very capital advantage to us, as there is nothing now to obstruct our Landing, but a Battery upon the Shore, which can be easily silenc'd by the French Shipping.— This disposition of the French Admiral, will convince your Excell^y by a Survey of this Map, that the Enemy are compleatly block'd up; And my Preparations are in such forwardness, that I shall doubtless, be able to make a Landing in the course of next week. In the interim, I have the honor to be [&c].

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN TO GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON

Dear General

Head Q^{rs} Providence August 1st 1778

It is with pleasure I inform your Excellency that our preparations in this Department are as forward as Circumstances will admit, or Industry and application could make them

I Submitt'd the Plan of Operations (sometime since communicated to your Excellency) to Admiral Count D. Estaign & was happy in its receiving his approbation & concurrence¹

Upon his proceeding to put part of them in Execution the greatest Consternation apparently prevail'd on the part of the Enemy—The Crews of the Kings Fisher &

two of their Gallies (at the appearance of the French fleet) abandon'd & sat them on fire, after Charging their Cannon with Grape to prevent their being Extinguish'd— They were entirely consum'd²

I wait with Impatience the arrival of the Marquiss & the different Corps order'd to this Station—³

Their Motions are by no means so rapid as I could wish, but your Excellency may rely that when collected I shall proceed without delay to put them into immediate Action.

My acknowledgments are due for your kind attention in sending Gen^l Green⁴ to my assistance & Council—I have the Honor likewise to acknowledge the receipt of your Commands of 27th & 28th last Month & promise your Excellency that I shall religiously observe the Recommendations they contain—⁵

From what past in my late Interview with Count D Estaing I think I can venture to assure your Excellency that the greatest Harmony will subsist between us, with respect to command I have the Honor [&c.]

1. Sullivan to Vice-Amiral comte d'Estaing, 25 July, and d'Estaing to Sullivan, 30 July, both above.

2. H.M. sloop-of-war Kingsfisher, commanded by Lt. Hugh C. Christian, and the row-galleys Alarm, commanded by Lt. Philip d'Auvergne and Spitfire, commanded by Lt. James Saumarez.

3. The Marquis de Lafayette approached with brigades of troops under the command of Brig. Gen. John Glover and Brig. Gen. James Mitchell Varnum along with a smaller detachment under the command of Col. Henry Jackson.

4. Maj. Gen. Nathanael Greene.

5. In the letter of 27 July, Washington told Sullivan that in the likelihood of a debarkation of troops from d'Estaing's fleet to reduce the island of Rhode Island, although the admiral might put the troops under Sullivan's general direction, the particular command of them should be the admiral's choice, which Washington supposed would be the Marquis de Lafayette. Washington alerted Sullivan to the fact that "The Count is himself a Land Officer, and of the high rank of Lt General in the French Army." In his letter of 28 July, Washington stated that his lack of precise information prevented him from deciding on the plan of operation Sullivan had presented d'Estaing, but he considered that cutting off the British regiments on Conanicut I. and preventing further British reinforcements were important objects. See GW Papers, Rev. War Series 16: 187–88 and 193–94.

6. For an account of the movements of the British regiments, see Maj. Gen. John Sullivan to Henry Laurens, President of the Continental Congress, this date above.

Sullivan had pegged British strength at 5,000 men on 20 July, but four days later increased his estimate to "near 7000." Sullivan also apparently told Gov. Jonathan Trumbull Sr., of Connecticut that British strength would reach 11,000. George Washington warned Sullivan against inflating his estimates of British strength. See Maj. Gen. John Sullivan to Gen. George Washington, 20 July, GW Papers, Rev. War Series vol. 16:110; Maj. Gen. John Sullivan to Gen. George Washington, 24 July, ibid., p. 159; and Gen. George Washington to Maj. Gen. John Sullivan, 27 July, ibid., p. 187. Subsequent estimates of British strength hovered between 5,000 men to 6,500 men. On 4 Aug., Lt. Col. John Laurens told his father, President of the Continental Congress Henry Laurens, that he thought the British "cannot have much more than 5,000" men, but on the same day he also told George Washington that the British strength stood at 5,544 men. Lt. Col. Fleury informed Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing on the same date that there were 5,800 British troops on Rhode Island. On 13 Aug. Sullivan, perhaps heeding Washington's advice, estimated a British total of 6,500 men. See Lt. Col. John Laurens to President of the Continental Congress Henry Laurens, 4. Aug.; Laurens to Washington, 4 Aug.; Colonel the Marquis de Fleury to Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing, 4 Aug.; and Sullivan to Washington, 13 Aug., all below.

A well-reasoned estimate by a modern historian puts total British troop strength at 5,750 men; McBurney, R.I. Campaign, pp. 77 and 281n48. A recapitulation of British troop strength from 15 Aug. gives the number of total effectives as 5789; Henry Clinton, "Recapitulation of the State of 15th August 1778," UKLPR, C.O. 5/96, fol. 113. In light of this, Continental estimates in the range of 5,000–6,000 were fairly accurate.

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN SULLIVAN TO BRIGADIER GENERAL JOHN GLOVER

Head Quarters [Providence, R.I.] August 1st 1778.

Dear Sir,

You will please to proceed to Boston, Marblehead and such other places as you may think proper, to engage two or three hundred Seamen or other persons well acquainted with Boats, who are to act as Boatmen in the Expedition against Rhode Island. You will please to use all possible expedition in forwarding them on. Their pay shall be three Dollars per day & their expenses borne upon the Road. Their engagement is to be for fifteen days, if not sooner discharged; they will be allowed three days for coming & three for going Home. You are to advance each man one week's pay upon his engaging. Upon this encouragement I think you will have a sufficient number who will at this important Crisis, step forth to assist in the glorious Enterprise on hand & share with their Brethern the Honor of giving the last Blow to British Tyranny.¹ I am, Dear Sir, [&c.]

[headquarters Providence Aug^t. 1st. 1778.]

My Dear Sir

I was honored with your Excellency favor of Yesterday last Evening¹ & am happy to find that your Zeal & attention to the Service & that of the officers who have the honor to serve under your Excellency's command, promise the most favourable Issue to our Enterprise. I rejoice that your two ships in the west channel² have fallen down to Join you; as they will be ready at hand to assist your Excellency in case of an attack & can as Effectually block up the channel by Laying off the mouth of it as by Laying further up the river. I congratulate your Excellency upon the Success of your frigates³ in the East channel & upon the remarkable interposition of Providence in our favor. These Instances seem to foretell a most happy Issue to our attempt. I am of opinion that those vessels in the East Channel Should fall down near the Mouth, to be ready in case of necessity to Join you & they may with Ease move up to cover our Landing when ready. I am however far from thinking any attempt will be made by the English against your fleet as Lord Howe will not dare to Leave Newyork, while General Washington with a formidable army Lays ready to attack it.⁴ The English fleet from home must Expect to be followed by another from france, I therefore think there is little prospect of your being attack't, but I know you will be prepared against every Event & I am sure, it is my most Earnest wishes that you may be ready for them at allpoints. I should have provided an hospital in coming a Shore but found your fleet was coming to sail & not being certain where your Exc^y would return I came forward & sent a person down to provide the hospital & Necessaries, Since which I received a letter from Lieut. Col^o Laurens,⁵ informing that the hospitals were already provided[.] I have Sent M. ___ Halsey⁶ down to Supply your fleet & your Sick with every necessary. Sixty Fat oxen Set off this morning Every other article shall bee Supplied. The Brick & mason go off this morning, biscuit is baking & Every thing in my power Shall be done. The English prisoners & prises Shall be recd and taken care of. I have Inclosed your Exc^y the depth of water in the East channel & have provided pilots to go on board the frigates to conduct them. I have only time to add my Earnest request that you will be Kind enough to give me from time to time your Judgement upon all the operations. I can Say without flattery & with the utmost Sincerity that I have the highest confidence in your Experience good Judgement & friendship & therefore Shall be happy in complying with Every wish you will please to make Known to me. I have the honor [&c.] Signé Jn^o Sullivan P.S. as the English vessels in the East Channel are destroy'd⁷ I beg leave to suggest that sending a fifty gun Ships to that channel become unnecessary as the British frigates cannot get round to attack them on the north & your Excellency's fleet will Sufficiently Secure them on the South; I also think the two frigates Sufficient to cover our Landing—

DIARY OF CAPTAIN FREDERICK MACKENZIE, BRITISH ARMY

[Extract]

[Newport, Rhode Island]

1st August 1778

In consequence of the French ships in the Narragansett¹ having moved part of the way down that passage yesterday, orders² were sent last night to The Cerebus, Lark, and Orpheus,³ to reshipe their Guns, Stores, &c., and proceed down to Newport; in pursuance of which they have been hard at work all last night and this day in taking them on board. . . .

Nothing could be seen of the French fleet 'till 9 this morning, when they were observed at anchor in the same position as before. The Ships in the Narraganset and Seconnet,⁴ are also in the same position as yesterday.⁵ The fleet continued at anchor all day. They have two Frigates constantly cruizing in the Offing. . . .

Signals, made by great Smokes, have been observed this day on the Narraganset shore, and thence up to Providence. The Rebels have for some time past, conveyed intelligence of the movements of vessels from New York, and down The Sound, in this Manner.

Some boats from the French ships off Black point having come near our shore this morning, three shot were fired at them from Fogland Redoubt, which obliged them to return.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOSIAH BARTLETT

[Extract]

My Dear Sir

Portsm^o. [N.H.] 2^d Aug^t 1778

Your favor of y^e 13th Ulto came to hand Yesterday¹ I have no expectation that an alteration will take place agreeable to my proposal especially as my plan is objected too by a French man, I have had a conversation with M^r Landais since he left Congress on that subject he seems very fond of his own child which is natural enough to suppose, but he can offer nothing of sufficient weight to alter my sentiments, on the contrary, since talking with him I am more confirmed in my own opinion—These French men who are not perfectly acquainted with our Language have a very convenient way of getting over difficulties, when they cannot answer your objections, they do not understand you—however experience will bring us right in time I hope—I am sure it will convince us that this plan for 56 Gun ships will never answer our purpose—²

I am much obliged for your perticular acco^t of the French fleet, which I find Differs from the newspaper acco^{ts}—I heartily wish this Fleet may answer our most sanguine expectations, but I am very apprehensive that (unless they are very quick in their motions) a Fleet from Britain will be a long side of them before they are ready to rece[ive] them—we are in daily expectation of hearing of some Grand Operations—Sullivan it seems is to attack New port but he cannot be ready for such an attack, by his making a requisition very lately of assistance from this state³ no orders are yet Issued from the Executive authority here; it will be very difficult for this state to spare any men at this Busy season we are already thoroughly drained of men—I suppose we have as large a proportion as any state in the Union in the public service, that are sent by the state, nearly as many more have enlisted in the Massachusetts Regiments, & vast numbers are gone a Privateering so that we have hardly any males left but Old men & Boys, if we send any more Soldiers I believe they must be females we may spare a considerable number of that sort, & have enough left for Breeders.— I don't learn that Gen^l Sulliv[an] has more then 5 or 6000 men & its said the Enemy have 7000 at New Port.—⁴ There has been no arrivals this way for some time past, all the intelligence from Europe must come from Your way I therefore wish you wo^d furnish as much as possible. . . .

I hope Chesapeak & Delaware Bays are now open for our Northern Vessels & the States Bordering on them able to furnish us with a little Bread which I assure you we are in great want of one third of the Families in this town are half their time without Bread tho' if the information I have is true very considerable quantities are in the Country but that is in the hands of Farmers who don't want money, therefore will not part with their corn, what little is bro^t to town is sold at 7. & 8. dolls p^r Bushel in short the Produce of the country in general is by far dearer then any foreign articles.— . . . My Dear Sir a number of matter have ocured to me Since my Last, which I beg leave to mention to your Excellency. I wish to Know whether you have any brass field pieces to Land with your troops or horses to draw them; if you have none, I will Send you the number of pieces & horses you will please to mention; it will perhaps be necessary For your Excellency to be on horseback with Some aide de camps, for which purpose I suppose you have not horses; these Should therefore be Sent on board some Small vessels that may follow the Ships of war with forage to Keep them till we are ready for Landing; you will please to Let me Known your pleasure on this head. I would also beg Leave to Suggest that it might be of advantage to Your Land forces & marines to Encamp them on the Shore at Tower hill for a day or two, as they have been long at Sea, this will refresh them & give them the use of their legs, render your Ships less crouded & of course your men more healthy. Your men in this Situation will be perfectly Safe from any attempt of the Enemy. if you have not Tents, this cannot well be done; you will Consider of & order as you Think proper. Your Excellency will pardon these hints as they only proceed from an Earnest desire to render your Troops as healthy & as possible. The boats are now ready but I thought best not to Send them till I know whether your Excellency was in want of the horses & field pieces. I also wish where you would have them Sent, whether on board the fleet or any part of the Shore; if you think proper to Land your Troops, they may with Safety be left under their care, without being Sent on board, & perhaps the Sending boats down on this Side & landing your troop while our preparations are making at Tivertown, May serve to amuse & Distract the Enemy. of these things your Excellency will please to Judge & give me your Opinion. There is another matter which you will please to Let me Know your pleasure upon. Suppose while we are on shore a fleet Should come in sight before the Island is completely conquered, or Some other matter should turn up, which may call for your Excellency's presence onboard the fleet, under whose command would you wish your Troops to be put in your absence. Major general Green commands the right wing of our army, The Marquis de Lafayette the Left;¹ you will please to let me Know your pleasure in case Such Event Should take place, perhaps the marquis being of their own nation & of course better able to distinguish those who behave with remarkable bravery may be most agreeable; I shall wish to Know that I may gratify your wish in this point; if you do not chuse Either but that one of your own officers should Command them in your Excellency's absence, I Shall cheerfully acquiese or if you think it best to divide them to right & Left, I shall act accordingly. while your Excellency thinks proper to remain with your [dear ?] Troops, I shall be Exceeding happy in the Thought that I have so Brave and Experienced an Officer in the art of war to cooperate with me & act against the common Enemy, but as it is possible for Such an Event to take place, I wish to know Your pleasure that I may act accordingly. The maquis de La fayette waits upon your Excellency with the letter² accompanied by John Brown Esq^r and Col^o. Nightingale³ which the marquis will be Kind Enough to Introduce to your Excellency; They are Gentlemen of great wealth, probity and honor. any article you may want taken care of or business performed while in this place, you may with great safety intrust to their care. The marquis will be kind Enough to Explain to you—many Things which I have not time at present to commit to writing. Your Excellency will add full faith to what he Says to you on my part.

I have the honor to be [&c]

Newport Aug^t. 2^d. August

Since my last of the 29th. July in which is contained the proceedings of the Ships until the 31st.¹ On the 2d. in the Morning, the following Intelligence was received and communicated to me by Maj^r. General Sir Robert Pigot; That the Enemy mean to make three different landings, one from Bristol to the North End of the Island; Second from Seconnet Shore; Third from the Ships; and another Body to be assembled at Connanicut; the two first Embarkations they report will be 15,000 Men, the latter 10,000. Gen^l Arnold is on board the Fleet, and the French General La Fayette; three Brigades are arrived at Providence, Glover's, Vernon's and Poor's; the French Fleet are to come into the Harbor, and to garrison Connanicut, fortify the Dumplings; Wednesday or Thursday they intend everything shall be ready; they have Mortars as well as Artillery; most of the Militia came as Volunteers. But the General acquaints me the Character of the Person who brought this, is very doubtful, and his Accounts in general exaggerated.²

The Seamen belonging to the Kingsfisher and Galleys³ are disposed of to the different Batteries and the Fire Vessels got out to the South End of Goat Island under the Care of Lieu^t Stanhope of the Pigot Galley.³

The Orpheus, Lark & *Cerberus*⁴ are come down and anchored; the two former in the Inner Harbor, and the latter between Pest Island and Blue Rocks to guard that Passage.

The Transports are all hauled to the Wharf and prepared to scuttle and cut away their Masts.

The General desired the *Juno*⁵ might remain in Coddington Cove as her Guns are wanted for Batteries near that place.

Two French Ships of the Line still remain in Naraganset,⁶ Two Frigates in the Sec^onet,⁷ the Remainder of the Fleet without, off the Harbor[']s mouth, with a number of small Craft constantly cruizing backwards and forwards.

I have dispatched this by M^r Jones late master of the Kingsfisher, who has offered his Service to proceed in a Whale Boat from Sach[um] Beach in Order if possible to avoid the Vigilance of the Enemy's Cruizers. I have the Honor to be [&c.]

J. Brisbane

The French Fleet are anchored between Ch[urch's] Point which forms the West End of Easton's Beach and Brenton's Ledge without any Form the South-most 5 Miles from the Land.

1. See Brisbane to Howe, 29–31 July, above.

2. As Brisbane indicated, much of this intelligence was exaggerated or not true. The Franco-American force was far short of the 25,000 given here; Gen. Benedict Arnold was not with the French fleet, nor was the Marquis de Lafayette. The latter was marching with the Continentals sent from Washington's army. That force did include two brigades commanded by Brig. Gen. John Glover, Brig. Gen. James Mitchell Varnum, and a detachment commanded by Col. Henry Jackson. Finally, the French role in the assault was not as presented here. For the plan of attack, see Maj. Gen. John Sullivan to Vice-amiral comte d'Estaing, 25 July, above.

3. For fear of capture, on 30 July, H.M. ship-rigged sloop-of-war Kingsfisher, Comdr. Hugh Cloberry Christian, and armed galleys Alarm, Lt. Philip d'Auvergne, and Spitfire, Lt. James Saumarez, were burned by their crews. For more on their burning, see Brisbane to Howe, 29–31 July, above.

DIARY OF CAPTAIN FREDERICK MACKENZIE, BRITISH ARMY

[Extract]

[Newport. Rhode Island]

2^d Aug^t Fresh wind at S. all day. Very warm weather.The French Fleet at anchor as before....¹

The Lark, Orpheus, and Cerberus, and The Pigot Galley,² having taken in their Guns, Stores, and most of their provisions, again, went down this day towards the town.³ The resolution of withdrawing the Troops from the N. end of the Island⁴ as soon as the French fleet enters the harbour, is the cause of this movement. The ships may probably be saved by getting near the town, and their guns and Stores will be of service in the defence of the Garrison. They are ordered to put their Guns, &c, on shore as near the town as possible.⁵

Mackenzie, Diary 2: 325–6. Five paragraphs regarding troops and inhabitants on Connonicut Island and in Newport have been omitted.

Sir,

Sandy Hook [N.J.]

August the 2^d. 1778.

Judging it necessary upon the Arrival of the Toulon Squadron,¹ to increase the Force under my Command by an Addition of two more Fire-ships, I directed the Transports described in the Margin² to be purchased, and they were prepared by the ready Assistance of the chief Officers in the Ordnance Department, accordingly.

I thereupon nominated the Lieutenants James Watt, late of the Roebuck, and William Henry King O'Hara of the Eagle, to the Command of them by the Names of the Sulphur and Volcano; And I am to hope, from the Spirit with which that Service was undertaken by the two Officers, that the Lords Commissioners will see fit to confirm the Appointments.³ I am [&c.]
