

Year of the Spy

1. Robert Hunter & Richard Haver: Walker Spy Ring Thursday, May 19 @ 6:00PM

Robert Hunter is known as the agent who caught master spy John Walker and brought an end to what many top officials call the most damaging spy ring in U.S. history. Together with fellow agents, Hunter not only captured Walker, but implicated both Walker's brother and son. Hunter's action effectively put an end to an espionage ring that had been operating out of Norfolk Naval Base.

Richard Haver served as Damage Assessor in numerous espionage cases. Besides evaluating the impact of the Walker ring, Haver assessed damage caused by two other high profile spies: the CIA's Aldrich Ames, who spied for the Soviet Union and Russia; and Jonathan Pollard, an Intelligence Analyst who spied for Israel. Prior to his retirement from the government, Haver served as Chief of Staff for the National Intelligence Council, and as a National Intelligence Officer for Information Operations.

To make a reservation for this event, call (757)322-3168 after April 25th.

This free evening event includes refreshments, which are being provided by the Navy League Hampton Roads.

In this After Hours History program, unmask the courageous people who inhabited this wilderness of mirrors including George Washington, the master spy at the heart of it all. Rose's first book, Washington's Spies: The Story of America's First Spy Ring, has been used for the basis of the AMC drama series: Turn: Washington's Spies.

The NADEP "Listening Post" Returns!

Twenty years ago the largest employer in Hampton Roads closed its doors, falling victim to the base realignment process. The aircraft maintenance facility, known as the Naval Aviation Depot Norfolk (or NADEP), will be the subject of a special commemorative exhibit and event in September 2016.

The Naval Air Station featured a dedicated aircraft maintenance detachment from World War I, when the Construction and Repair Department was part of the commissioned station. In 1922, it was renamed Assembly and Repair Department and under that name met the challenges of World War II. In May 1948, the first jet squadron qualified for fleet operation. The Assembly and Repair Department, which had not assembled aircraft for some time, was renamed "Overhaul and Repair," before being known as the Naval Air Rework Facility and finally NADEP.

The Norfolk facility served as the Navy's chief supplier of aircraft parts and its major rework plant. By 1976, the air rework plant covered 174 acres and included 175 buildings. In the 1970s and 1980s its workers restored or repaired F-14 Tomcats, A-6 Intruders and F-8 Crusaders among other aircraft. Join us to commemorate and celebrate the good people and the good work of NADEP at the social event called "The Listening Post."

This event is sponsored by Chartway Federal Credit Union.
